The leadership on Xmas passed off well. Mr. R. Lazenby, as chairman, made things lively, and the children's ring was a decided success in the Christmas Grades' and sixth-cap drill brought on was a most pleasing treat. No obvious talent was secured, and many worthy. Proceeds, $15.—Sunnidale Parish did quietly, though quite a crowd was in the village. The same old Council exercising one in the place of Mr. George Hamm. Mr. John Frank of the north Mr. Hamm was asked by many of his friends not to retire from the field but persuasion was of no use, he would not be brought out.—A Masonic service was held in the C. M. church, to which a number of Masons attended. A good sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. J. McMahon. The concentrated meeting the hour leader—Mr. Harry Smith and Mrs. Smith, who with Mr. and Mrs. Watts, spent the Yule time with friends at Buffalo. We will say though that the choir did credit to his training in his absence.—Holiday time gives only the least number of visits made here, and everywhere.—Our medical men, Drs. Asher and Day, spent Xmas happily the former in entertaining some twenty-four friends, the latter to his former home, Kingston.—Our druggist, Mr. Hyde, is well, we won't say where, but nearby his partners, Messrs. Harris and Day, to their homes, Kingston.—Mr. Donaldson with Mr. and Mrs. Reed, of Hillcrest, Mr. Willie Calder.—Our Public students, Messrs. Switzer and Merrick, of the Board of Education and Mr. Wm. Switzer, of the Council, have all done a come down in their prices for the coming.—No hurry up and take advantage.—Our baker, Mr. J. Harley, motherand sister, with friends at Milton.—Our Township Treasurer, Mr. J. H. Fraser, and his daughters, Mrs. Arthur Fraser, Mrs. Fraser and grandchildren with friends in the village.—Mr. and Mrs. McEwen with Mr. and Mrs. Hooper at the James-son-Hamilton-Col. G. F. RUTTAN'S SPEECH MONDAY NIGHT.

Referring to the report placed in the hands of the electors, of the financial standing of the town, the speaker drew the attention to the fact that the report showed that on the 31st December, 1907, the town owed the Crown Bank and the Merchants Bank overdrafts to the amount of $13,200.00, and by some mysterious means, the next morning, January 1st, 1908, the town had both these overdrafts in full. He thought it was either a mysterious kind of financing, by which the money could be found over night or else it was a bad piece of bookkeeping, and if the statement put out by the Council was as to this large amount incorrect, what reliance could be put on the whole statement?

He showed that the debenture sale in June and July realized $17,141, that in the miscellaneous items of the financial statement would be found a rebate to the amount of $356.90 to the brokers, who negotiated the sale of the debentures. The speaker asked the Chairman of the finance who got this commission? and the chairman of the finance replied, That there was a mistake, that there was no commission involved, but the speaker stated that he believed that somebody got a commission out of the sale. Deducting this refund from the sale, the net proceeds of the sale of the debentures was $16,584.17 out of this in July, and not in January, the overdrafts of the two Banks, amounting to $13,258.86, were paid. This left a balance in the hands of the Corporation of $3,325.31, and out of this amount the cost of the West street sewer, $2067.00, was paid, leaving $1258.81 net profit to the Corporation from the sale of the debentures, after paying all the debts, for which the debentures were floated. This was a source of revenue which the Town Council had not anticipated, when they struck the rate in August last, and this amount represents a little more than one mill of taxes and if the matter had been figured out properly, the rate for this year should have been reduced by this item alone, one mill. In addition to this, the town received this year $2870.90 more taxes than last, they received $370.00 extra from the County that they did not anticipate, when they struck the rate. $95.35 from Police fines and $95.00 from cement walks and from rents $100.00 extra. Bank interest about $700.00 in excess, from the Provincial Government for Railway Tax $68.94, which together make $5972.99 or equal to about five mills on our taxes, from unexpected income and yet it is all spent and the full year's rate has been collected for five months.

The speaker also brought forth the fact that for the last two or three years, a certain item has been placed in the appropriation of the amount owing to the Public School Board of from $400.00 to $500.00, and last August, it was put in at $425.00 or another four mills on our taxes, which he found did not at all represent a debt due from the town to the School Board and to satisfy the public that he was correct, the speaker read Sir W. F. Hall, who was pupil at that surplus was in the hands of the town, and he said "that it was not that the only surplus that the School Board had, was a surplus of about $2,200.00 in their own hands" and the speaker contended that it was very apparent that this fictitious amount was put on the items to cover up improper expenditures. It was called a School Board debt, when it was impossible in the sense of continuous fund, which was properly collected every year over and above the continuous fund, which in August was fixed at $1600.00 as that with the unexpected income and the increased school debt, the town was assessed about eight mills more than it should have been in August last, in addition to other excesses of about five mills.

Another item that was apparently imperfect was that the town credited themselves with $6000.00 $5575.71 of the debenture debt, we should have been paid by the Electric Light Commissioners and the Napanee Light Commissioners, as they claim to have paid a portion of it $2792.00 in their statement, and the Napanee Light Commissioners $3183.71 in their debt. Was it the Town Treasurer, or the Treasurer of the Electric Light Board, should not have the credit or the debt. As it now stands between the Electric Light Commissioners and the Town Council, the town is charged twice with the debenture debt. And it appears as the statement that the town charged itself with only paying the Electric Light Commissioners $1200.00 and the Electric Light Commissioners credit themselves with having received $4000.00 for street lighting. Which account is correct and where the discrepancy is. The Electric Light Commissioners statement was on the levy of 16 per cent. That they were indebted to the Town at one time, but if they were charged with all the items paid during the year they would owe the town about $1900.00.

Another item that was brought out and unquestioned was that the County rate for 1907 had been put in the estimates, but was not collected by the Council and instead of treating that year's county rate as a debt they again placed it in the estimates for 1908 so that for two years the town has been assessed for three County rates and the County rate is payable on the 15th December in each year, after which the County charges the town an odd per cent interest and the Town Council, in order to have their overdraft in the Bank at least to be less, neglected for two years to pay the County rate and in the year to put the 1908 rate so that there has been paid on this debt due to the County 31 per cent. interest and the Bank is charging five per cent on the overdrafts so that it will make a better appearance to show that the Town Council has been paying one per cent extra to the County Mr. Ruttan, referring to the County matters said, he would go to the County Council, and with the best of his ability look after the town's interests. As to the Napanee covered bridge, he had no personal animosity to have a contract for the building of an iron bridge in the place of the old covered bridge, and that a valuable old land mark should be saved as far as possible, preserved, and if possible substantial buttresses could be placed under it and it kept in its present appearance he would advocate the expenditure of the less amount rather than build a large steel open bridge and make it a danger point at the foot of a hill as there would be no proper protection for horses to get under shelter from the passing of a train with an open bridge there, and there would be many runaways and accidents and destroy the confidence of people coming and going from Napanee.

Mr. Ruttan further stated that he had a man ready to take the position of assessor of the town and also oversee the work on the streets, an efficient man of means and one of good repute and experience, and by amalgamating these two offices, the town would get better service on the streets and would save the town at least from $400.00 to $500.00 on salaries and perhaps $1000.00 on expenditure.

Mr. Ruttan, in conclusion, said that if he was elected, he would give his best services to the town, and asked the electors if they could conscientiously, in the interest of the town do so, to vote for him.

Twenty-five years ago it was difficult to sell spring wheat flour for pastry at any price.

People didn't want it—they were using soft, winter wheat flour, and saw no reason for changing.

But hard wheat flour was persistently pushed and prejudice has been overcome. The women tried it, succeeded with it and appreciated it.—To-day hard wheat flour is the favorite for pastry as well as for bread.

The flour that is doing the most for the reputation of hard wheat flour is the brand known as

Ogilvie's Royal Household

It is hard wheat flour at its best—milled by modern methods, retaining all of the gluey wheat and none of the bad—which is equal for every kind of baking, whether bread, pastry or cake.

He was gone. Julia sighed in satisfied vanity. Sophy awoke to stern realities.

"Gracious," she cried, "he must have come to lunch! They'll want a salad! You'll be here tomorrow—do?" And she was off up the drive and around to her own regions at the back of the house.

"I believe his lordship did remember my face," thought Julia as she wandered back to Woodbine cottage.

But Sophy washed lettuce in her scullery, which, save for its base purposes, was a pleasant, airy apartment, looking out on a path that ran between yew hedges and led around from the lawn to the offices of the house. Diligently she washed, as Mrs. Smilker had taught her, whether rightly or not is nothing to the purpose here, but how was her mind? Was it in her mind? Or far away from lettuces that it seemed in no way strange to look up and see Lord Dunstanbury and his dog on the path outside the window at which she had been performing her task. He began hastily:

"Uh, I say, I've been seeing my mare, got her feed, and—er—do you think you could be so good as to find a bone and some water for Lorenzo?"

"Lorenzo?" she said.

"My dog, you know." He pointed to the handsome beast, which wagged an expectant tail.

"Why do you call him that?"

Dunstanbury smiled. "Because he's magnificent. I dare say you never heard of Lorenzo the Magnificent?"

"No. Who was he?"

"A duke—Duke of Florence, in Italy." He had begun to watch her face and seemed not impatient for the bone.

"Florence? Italy?" The lettuce dropped from her hands. She wiped her hands slowly on her apron.

"I say, you don't—you could get me one?"

"Yes; I'll get it."

She went to the back of the room and chose a bone.

"Will this do?" she asked, holding it out through the window.

"Too much meat."

"Oh!" She went and got another. "This one all right?"

"Capital! Do you mind if I stay and see him eat it?"

"No."

"Here, Lorenzo!" And thank the lady!"

Lorenzo directed three sharp barks at Sophy and fell to. Sophy filled and brought out a bowl of water. Lord Dunstanbury had lighted a cigar, but he was standing bareheaded. A new light broke on him suddenly.

"I say, were you the other girl behind the gate?"

"I didn't mean you to see me."

"I only caught a glimpse of you. I remember your friend, though."

"She remembered you too."

"I don't know her name, though."

"Julia Robins."

"Ah, yes—is it? He's about [illegible] bone, hasn't he? He is—a great friend of yours?"

His manner was perhaps a little at fault. The slightest note of cheek had crept into it, and the slightest was enough to put Sophy's quills up.

"Why not?" she asked.

"Why not? Every reason why she should be," he answered with his lips. His eyes answered more, but he refrained for the tongue. He was scrupulously a gentleman now—so perhaps than, had scenes and places been reversed. Sophy herself would have been. But his eyes told her nothing, he went on, "if so, why did you hide?"

That bit of cheek did not annoy Sophy, but it went home to a different purpose, for clever, far truer sense than the young man had meant. Not the mark only reddened; even the cheeks flushed. She said no word. With a fine sort of dignity, a gesture strangely, psychically foreign as it seemed to him in after days—she expelled him from the yard. Struck the astonished person, his bare arms, red hands, the ugly hair of her hair, the strap of one shoulder. For a moment her fine spirit made her see the pink-and-red rim of fingers days and future flame—pure noble rage.

The only sound was of Lorenzo's tail quite thumping on the scrupulously clean floor. The gentleman as he was, was gone. Sophy sat there, too, and the blood was slowly ebbed. She felt a little lightheaded, a little tired. He was more to it. Now, this was simply drunken to what he was still to her, but she took it with bent eyes—not a glance straight or level at him.

"Yes," he said, "but I shouldn't have looked at any of that, and I shouldn't have looked at her, either."

He was quite right, and she knew it, and the eyes glowed. There was silence again.

Although a start marked Dunstan bury's awakening. "Come, Lorenzo!" he cried. He raised his hat and went away, followed by his dog, Lorenzo the Magnificent.

Sophy took up her lettuces and carried them into the kitchen.

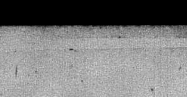
"There you are at last! And what's put you in a temper now?" asked Mrs. Smilker. She had learned the signs of the mark.

Sophy smiled. "It's not temper this time, Mrs. Smilker. I—I'm very happy today," she said. "Oh, I do hope the salad will be good!"

For he who was to eat of the salad—had he not forgotten print frock and solled apron, bare arms, red hands, ugly knot and execrable cap? He would not have looked at them—no, nor at beautiful, many dimpled Julia Robins in her pride! He had forgotten all these to look at the stained cheek and the eyes of subtle glow. She had glanced in the mirror of love and ripened from the cup of power.

Such was her first meeting with Lord Dunstanbury. If it were ever forgotten, it was not Dunstanbury who forgot.

The day had wrought much in her eyes. It had wrought more than she dreamed of. Her foot was near the ladder now, though she could not yet see the lowest rung.



Chapter Four

THE scene is at Hazelby, Lord Dunstanbury's Essex seat. His lordship is striking the top off his breakfast egg.

"I say, Cousin Meg, old Brownlow's got a deuced pretty kitchen maid."

"There you go! There you go! Just like your father and your grandfather and all of them! If the English people had any spirit they'd have swept the Dunstanburys and all the wicked Whig gang into the sea long ago."

"Before you could turn around they'd have bought it up, inclosed it and won an election by opening it to ships at a small fee on Sundays," said Mr. Pindar.

"Why are Whigs worse than Tories?" inquired Mr. Pikes, with an air of patient inquiry.

"The will of heaven, I suppose," sniffed Lady Margaret Duddington.

"To display divine omnipotence in that line," suggested Mr. Pindar.

"A deuced pretty girl!" said Dunstanbury in reflective tones. He was doing his best to reproduce the impression he had received at Morpingham hall, but obviously with no great success.

"In some pretext, frivolous though it be, let us drive over and see this miracle," Pinder suggested. "How could we better employ this last day of our visit? You'll drive us over, Percival?"

"No, thank you, Mr. Pindar," said the young man, resolute in wisdom "I'll send you over if you like."

"I'll come with you," said Pikes, "but now account for ourselves? Old Brownlow is unknown to us."

"If Percival had been going I'd have had nothing to do with it, but I don't mind taking you two old silliest," said Lady Margaret. "I wanted to pay a call on Elizabeth Brownlow anyhow. We were at school together once. But I won't guarantee you a sight of the kitchen maid."

"It's a pretty drive for this part of the country," observed Dunstanbury.

"It may well become your favorite road," smiled Mr. Pindar benevolently.

"And since Lady Meg goes with us, it's already ours," added Mr. Pikes gallantly.

So they used to go on for hours at a time, as Dunstanbury has declared, both at Hazleby when they were there and at Lady Meg's house in Berkeley square, where they almost always were. They were pleased to consider themselves politicians—Pikes a Whig, twenty years behind date; Pindar, a Tory, yet. It was all an affectation, assumed for the purpose, but with the very doubtful result of amusing Lady Meg. To Dunstanbury the two old wolfs—for waifs of the sea of society they were for all that each had a sufficient income to his name and a respectable life behind him—were sheerly tiresome, and there seems little ground to differ from his opinion. But they were old family friends, and he endured with his usual graciousness.

Their patronesses—they would hardly have gilded at the word—was a more notable person. Lady Meg—the world generally and Sophy always spoke of her by that style, and we may take the same liberty—was only child of the great Earl of Dunstanbury. The title and estates passed to his grandnephew, but half a million or so of pounds came to her.

The air of the household was stormy that day at Morpingham—its incentive to the expedition, not a deterrent, for Lady Meg had she known it. Sophy was in sore disgrace—accused, tried and convicted of insubordination and unseemly demeanor toward Mrs. Smilker. The truth seems to be that this good woman iflest her soul. She has a neat tombstone in Morpingham churchyard, loved, like many another good creature, good ale sometimes a trifle too well, and the orders she gave when ale had been plentiful did not always consort with her less mellow injunctions. In no vulgar directness, but with a sarcasm which Mrs. Smilker felt without understanding. Sophy would point out these inconsistencies. Angered and humiliated, fearful, too, perhaps that her substitute would let the secret out, Mrs. Smilker made haste to have the first word with the powers, and against the word of the cook the word of the cook would be weighed as naught. Another order troubles of this origin there had come a sort of crisis today. The longest of long lectures had been read to Sophy by mistress and repented, slightly condensed, by master, then she was sent away to think it over. An abject apology to outraged Mrs. Smilker would be forthcoming of banishment was the decree. Informed of this ultimatum, Sophy went out and hung about the avenue, hoping for Julia to appear. Soon Julia came and heard the story. She had indignation in readiness and, what was more to the purpose, a plan. Soon Sophy's eyes grew bright.

Into this storm tossed house came Lady Meg and her spaniels. This title-kind name, derived at first from the size and shape of Mr. Pindar's ears—they were large and hung over at the top—had been stretched to include Mr. Pikes also, with small loss of propriety. Both gentlemen were low of stature, plump of figure, hairy on the face; both followed obediently at the heels of commanding Lady Meg. The amenities of the luncheon table opened hearts. Very soon the tale of Sophy's iniquities was rehearsed. Accidentally and unavoidably if Sophy's heinous fault were to appear to its true measure the tally of the Brownlows' benevolence was reckoned. But Mrs. Brownlow won small comfort from Lady Meg. She got a stiff touch of the truth.

"Has in and out of the drawing room?" she said. "Did she? The truth is, Lizzie, you're spoiled her, and now you're angry with her for being spoiled."

"What is she now, Mrs. Brownlow?" asked Pindar, with a sly intention. Was this Percival's deserved pretty girl? "She works in the kitchen, Mr. Pindar."

"The girl!" his eyes signaled to Mr. Pikes. "Let Lady Meg see her," he suggested benignly. "She has a wonderful way with girls."

"I don't want to see her, and I know your game, Pindar," said Lady Meg. "I'm afraid she must go," sighed Mrs. Brownlow. Her husband said, more robustly, that such an event would be a good riddance—a saying repeated, with the rest of the conversation, by the butler (one William Ryles, still living), to the gratified ears of Mrs. Smilker in the kitchen.

"But I'm not easy about her future. She's an odd child, and looks it."

"Pretty!" This from Mr. Pindar.

"Well, I don't know. Striking looking, you'd rather say perhaps, Mr. Pindar."

"Let her go her own way. We're talked quite enough about her," Lady Meg sounded decisive and not a little bored.

A saying repeated by the butler to the gratified ears of Mrs. Smilker.

"And then," Mrs. Brownlow made said to go on for a moment, "such a funny mark! Many people wouldn't like it, I'm sure."

Lady Meg turned sharply on her. "Mark? What do you mean? What mark?"

"A mark on her face. You know. A round red mark."

"Big as a threepenny bit, pretty nearly," said the squire.

"Where?"

"On her cheek."

"Where is the girl?" asked Lady Meg. Her whole demeanor had changed, her bored air had vanished. She seemed fair excited," Mr. Ryles reports. Then she turned to the said Ryles: "Find out where that girl is, and let me know. Don't tell her anything about it. I'll go to her."

"But let me send for her"—began the squire courteously.

"No; give me my own way. I don't want her frightened."

The squire gave the orders she desired, and the left Mr. Ryles heard as he left the room was from Lady Meg:

"Marks like that always mean something—eh, Pindar?"

No doubt Mr. Pindar agreed, but his reply is lost.

The girls in the avenue had made their plans. Sophy would not bow her head to Mrs. Smilker nor longer eat the bread of benevolence embittered by servitude. She would go with Julia. She, too, would tread the boards if only she could get her feet on them. And when did any girl seriously doubt her ability to do that? The pair were gay and laughing when suddenly through the gate came Lady Meg and the spaniels, Lady Meg ahead as usual and with a purposeful air.

"Who are they?" cried Sophy.

Hazleby is but twelve miles from Morpingham. Julia had been over, to see the big house and had sighted Lady Meg in the garden.

"It's Lady Margaret Duddington," she whispered, rather in a fright. There was time for no more. Lady Meg was upon them. Sophy was identified by her dress and, to Lady Meg's devouring eyes, by the mark.

"You're the girl who's been behaving so badly?" she said.

Seeing no profit in arguing the merits, Sophy answered "Yes."

At this point Julia observed one old gentleman nudge the other and whisper something. It is morally certain that Pindar whispered to Pikes, "Percival's girl!"

"You seem to like your own way. What are you going to do—say you're sorry?"

"No. I'm not sorry. I'm going away."

"Come here, girl. Let me look at you."

Sophy obeyed, walking up to Lady Meg and fixing her eyes on her face. She was interested, not frightened, as it seemed. Lady Meg looked long at her.

"Going away? Where to?"

Julia spoke up. "She's coming with me, please, Lady Margaret," Julia, it would seem, was a little frightened.

"Who are you?"

"Julia Robins. My mother lives there." She pointed to Woodbine cottage. "I—I'm on the stage"—

"Lord help you!" remarked Lady Margaret disconsolately.

"Not at all!" protested Julia, her meaning plain, her expression of it faulty. "And I—I'm going to help her to get an engagement. We're friends."

"What's she going to do with that on the stage?" Lady Meg's forefinger almost touched the mark.

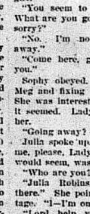
"Oh, that's all right. Lady Margaret. Just a little cold cream and powder"—

Nasty stuff" said Lady Meg. A pause followed. Lady Meg still studying Sophy's face. Then, without turning around, she spoke to Pikes, obviously addressed to the gentlemen behind her.

"I expect this is Percival's young person."

"Without a doubt," said Pikes.

"And Percival was right about her, too," said Pindar.



"Going away? Where to?"

"Think so? I ain't sure yet," said Lady Meg. "And at any rate I don't care twopence about that. But"— A long pause marked a renewed scrutiny. "Your name's Sophy, isn't it?"

"Yes." Sophy hesitated, then forced out the words, "Sophy Grouch."

"Grouch?"

"I said Grouch."

"Humph! Well, Sophy, don't go on the stage. It's a poor affair, the stage. begging Miss Julia's pardon. I'm sure she'll do admirably at it. But a poor affair it is. There's not much to be said for the real thing, but it's a deal better than the stage, Sophy."

"The real thing?" Julia saw Sophy's eyes grow thoughtful.

"The world—places—London—Paris—men and women—Lord help them! Come with me, and I'll show you all that."

"What shall I do if I come with you?"

"Do? Eat and drink and waste time and money, like the rest of us. Eh, Pindar?"

"Of course," said Mr. Pindar, with a placid smile.

"I shan't be a servant again?"

"Everybody in my house is a slave, I'm told, but you won't be more of a slave than the rest."

"Will you have me taught?"

Lady Meg looked hard at her. For the first time she smiled, rather grimly.

"Yes, I'll have you taught, and I'll show you the queen of England and, if you behave yourself, the emperor of the French—Lord help him!"

"Not unless she behaves herself!" murmured Mr. Pindar.

"Hold your tongue, Pindar! Now, then, what do you say? No, wait a minute. I want you to understand it properly." She became silent for a moment. Julia was thinking her a very rude woman; but, since Pindar did not mind, who need?

Lady Meg resumed. "I won't make an obligation of you—I mean I won't be bound to you, and you shan't be bound to me. You'll stay with me as long as you like or as long as I like, as the case may be. If you want to go, jot your visiting card—yes, you'll have one—in an envelope and send it to me. And if I want you to go I'll put a hundred pound note in an envelope and send it to you, upon which you'll go and no reasons given! Is it agreed?"

"It sounds all right," said Sophy.

"Did you always have that mark on your cheek?"

"Yes, always. Father told me so."

"Well, will you come?"

Sophy was torn. The stage was very attractive, and the love she had for Julia Robins held her as though by a cord. But was the stage a poor thing? Was that mysterious real thing better? Though even of that this strange woman spoke despitefully. Already there must have been some underground channel of understanding between them, for Sophy knew that Lady Meg was more than interested in her—that she was actually excited about her, and Lady Meg, in her turn, knew that she stayed a good card when she dangled before Sophy's eyes the queen of England and the emperor of the French, though even then came that saving "Lord help him!" to damp an overardent expectation.

"Let me speak to Julia," said Sophy. Lady Meg nodded. The girls linked arms and walked apart. Pindar came to Lady Meg's elbow.

"Another pretty!" said he in a low voice. Pikes was looking around the view with a kind of vacant contentment.

"Yes," she said. His lips moved. "I know what you said. You said, 'You old fool!' Pindar."

"Pindar, on my life, my lady!" They seemed more friends now than patroness and client. Few saw them thus, but Pindar told Dunstanbury, and the old gentleman was no liar.

"Give me one more!" she whispered, plainly excited. "That mark must mean something. It may open a way."

"For her?" he asked, smiling.

"It must for her. It may for me."

"A way where?"

"To knowledge—knowledge of the unknown. They may speak through her!"

"Lady Meg! Lady Meg! And if they don't, the hundred pound note! It's very cruel."

"Who knows—who knows, Pindar? Fate has her ways."

He shrugged his shoulders and smiled. "Not half as amusing as your philanthropy."

Sophy, twenty yards off, flung her arms around Julia. The embrace was long. It spoke farewell. Lady Meg's eyes brightened. "She's coming with me," she said. Pindar shrugged his shoulders again and fell back to heel. Sophy walked briskly up.

"I'll come, my lady," she said.

"Good! Tomorrow afternoon—to London, Mrs. Brownlow has the address. Goodby." She turned abruptly on her heel and marched off, her retinue following.

Julia came to Sophy.

"We can write," she said. "And she's right. You must be for the real thing, Sophy!"

"My dear, my dear!" murmured Sophy, with a tears. "Yes, we must write." She drew back and stood erect. "It's all very dark," she said, "but I like it, London—and Paris! On the Seine!" Old lessons came back with new import now.

"The emperor of the French!" Julia mocked, with tears in her eyes.

A sudden thought occurred to Sophy. "What did she mean by 'Percival's young person'? Is his name Percival?"

Julia gave a little cry. "Lord Dunstanbury's! Yes. You've seen him again?"

She drew out the story. It made the scarest of parting half forgotten.

"You owe this to him, then! How romantic!" was Actress Julia's conclusion on the part a true one, no doubt. But Sophy, looking deeper, fingered the red star." She had tracked the magnet of Lady Meg's regard, the point of her interest, the pivot of decision for that kind of whims.

Large Vote Polled

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS ON MONDAY PASSED OFF VERY QUIETLY—THE CONTEST A SPIRITED ONE.

Mayor, Dr. Simpson; Reeve, G. F. Ruttan; Councillors, W. A. Steacy, W. T. Gibbard, F. Burrows, M. C. Bogart, A. S. Kimmerly, A. Alexander.

A great deal of enthusiasm was displayed in the contest on Monday, and it is many years since the electorate had so large a field of candidates to choose from. The vote polled was a record one, the total being for Mayor 686.

Mr. Meng's decisive defeat at the hands of Dr. Simpson was somewhat of a surprise, to many, but it is generally conceded that the third term went against him.

Mr. Ruttan managed to get the lead of Mr. Lowry by the small margin of 14 votes. This majority is an extremely creditable one, as the victor did not ask an elector to vote for him and Mr. Lowry is a hard candidate to defeat.

Mr. Stewart headed the poll for the second time and should certainly be congratulated.

The next three candidates elected, Messrs. Gibbard, Burrows and Bogart—are new blood, although of considerable experience in the past. They are splendid citizens and enable business men, and should be able to give a good account of their stewardship next December. The next two successful ones were Messrs. Kimmerly and Alexander, the former for the second time.

Following are the returns:

	Ward 1	Ward 2	Ward 3	Ward 4	Total
Mayor—
Simpson	54	99	102	76	331
Meng	51	59	44	60	214
Majority for Simpson	3	40	58	16	117
Reeve—
Ruttan	57	85	82	58	282
Lowry	70	87	82	51	290
Majority for Ruttan					14
Councillors—
Steacy	79	97	97	73	346
Gibbard	58	77	81	73	289
Burrows	58	73	67	73	271
Bogart	48	72	69	58	313
Kimmerly	58	71	58	58	245
Alexander	54	65	59	58	236
Osborne	11	32	40	41	124
Meng	45	57	51	42	195
Symington	25	49	50	51	175
Graham	11	37	56	27	131
Vandusine	18	38	38	27	121
Wagar	18	29	21	18	86
Vandusine	5	14	11	12	42
Weber	12	18	17	18	65

The first six candidates are elected.

After the returns were all in, Mr. Lapum called on ex-Mayor Meng.

Mr. Meng said the electors had decided in favor of Dr. Simpson. He thanked all who supported him and Mr. Ruttan. He was confident that the Mayor-elect would conduct the affairs of the town in a business-like manner.

Dr. Simpson thanked the ratepayers for electing him to the honorable position of Mayor. He will endeavor to serve the town to the best of his ability. There had been good material elected for the 1909 Council.

Mr. Gibbard felt in duty bound to thank the ratepayers for his election as he had been away from home and had not asked any reason to vote for him. He was extremely pleased with the unsolicited confidence reposited in him by the people of Napanee.

Mr. Bogart was pleased with the magnificent vote given him. He would manage the affairs of the town as economically as he would his own.

Mr. Kimmerly was not there to try and make a long speech. In reference to his taking his seat in the Council he would do his very best in the interests of the town.

Mr. Alexander thanked the electors for his unsolicited victory. He was pleased to see the people had not thought the office should seek the man, which it had done in this case. The speakers gave some details of last year's business, as he was not given a chance at the nomination meeting owing to the lateness of the hour. He would do his best to manage the affairs of the town economically.

Mr. Osborne said he was just in the majority—he was leader of the Council last year for a short time, into detail as to some of the work performed at last year's Council Board. He gave facts and figures that spoke well for the work of 1908.

Mr. Burrows felt exceedingly grateful for the handsome vote given him. He made no personal solicitation whatever. He would endeavor to manage the affairs of the town as economically as possible and thought it high time that forty item of expenditure was well scrutinized and it not in the interests of the town to condemn it.

Mr. Ruttan was glad to say that at last the citizens of Napanee had aroused up and voted for their pocket instead of for the man. He was going into the Council to lower the taxes. Next year's taxes would be 23 or 24 mills on the dollar. If the school rate was not imposed for next year the rate would be between 15 and 16 mills. Under normal conditions the town's expenditure should be $30,000 a year. He would direct the committees of the Town Council for 1909 not to overexpend their appropriations, and that the financial statement be in the hands of the electors at least five days before nomination. Carried.

Mr. W. F. Hall made a few remarks re the incompleteness of the financial statement of the town. He thought that each item of expenditure should state what it was for.

Mr. Symington was happy to say that the electors had done what he wanted them to do—left him at home.

Mr. Ferguson said if he had been elected he would have done his duty. Thought perhaps he was pretty young to get in the game. Hoped to do better next year.

Mr. Steacy was pleased with the vote given him. He had served the town to the best of his ability and would continue to do so.

NEWBURGH.

Death came suddenly to Mr Wm Watts, after his removal last week to the House of Providence in Kingston. He lived but a couple of days, passing away on Friday. The remains were brought here and buried on Sunday last. The deceased Mr. Watts had reached the age of 92 years, and had long been a resident of Newburgh, where for many years he carried on a butcher's business. Latterly, however, he had busied himself in gardening and lived alone, having survived his third wife a number of years. Mr Watts came to this country from the Old Land about 70 years ago, settling first in Prince Edward County, whence he came here. He had relatives in England and Australia.

On Wednesday last Messrs. G. H. Finkle, G. F. Hill and G. A. Aylesworth were elected by acclamation to the Board of Education, the former two being re-elected, and Mr. Aylesworth taking the place of Mr. Jas. Shorey, removed.

An omission was inadvertently made in the report of the standing of pupils at the High school for the fall term, published last week. The name of Bernard Davey was omitted from the Form I list. His average for the term was 51 per cent.

The High and Public Schools re-opened on Monday with a good attendance at the former. Mr. F. A. Ireland, B.A., of Toronto, assisted his duties on Tuesday, taking the place of Miss. G. E. Beaman, resigned.

The friends of Mr. F. G. Millar, B.A., formerly on our High School staff, and now of the High School at Quebec, were interested in the recent announcement of his marriage to Miss Graham Fraser, daughter of the Girls' High School of that city. Mr. Millar was one of the ablest teachers who went to South Africa after the late war, and wrote a most interesting volume on his experiences.

Visitors—Miss Evelyn Granger, Toronto, at Dr. M. J. Berney's.—Miss Ruth Lamoureux, Kingston, at Mr. H. G. Nesbitt.—Mr. Frank Clancy, Toronto, at his father's, Mr. C. Clancy.—Miss Margaret Fraser, Calgary, at Henry Allen's.—Mr. W. Kay Beacham, Calgary, at J. M. Beacham's.—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bowerman and Miss Camden East, at Mr. T. B. Wallace's.—Miss Mattie and Mr. Norman Reid, Odessa, Brooklville, at Mr. G. H. Hill.

Mr. Geo. Anson Aylesworth left on Wednesday for another trip to Manitoba land in the interests of the Dominion Immigration Department. He is accompanied by his wife and daughter, John Bell.—Bon voyage and a safe return.—Miss Hope Aylesworth will spend the first few months of her young absence with her sister in Brockville.

The annual meeting of the Public Library supporters will be held in the reading room on Monday night next at 7 o'clock.—This meeting should command the interest and presence of all ratepayers who have a concern for the future interests of the village. The Library and Reading Room are doing a real work in promoting the intellectual interests of all its members, and the Reading Room is free to the public. All citizens should be interested in it—its support and efficiency. The annual meeting should draw a large attendance.

ODESSA.

An interesting event took place at the Methodist parsonage on Wednesday, Dec. 30th, at the residence of Mr. W. S. Lucas, when his daughter, Effie L., was united in marriage to William R. Lake, of Sydenham, Ont. The ceremony, which was conducted by the Rev. J. A. McCamus, of Odessa, was witnessed by a goodly number of relatives and friends and a large number of beautiful and useful presents bore testimony to the high esteem in which the bride was held. After the wedding supper the happy couple left for a honeymoon trip followed by the best wishes of many friends.

Revival services still continue in the C. M. church, conducted by our pastor and Mr. Shaver. May much good be done.

Mr. Geo. Burner has cut a new water wheel in his mill, which will certainly be an improvement.

A load, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Derker, Horsey, and Mrs. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Sid Sproule, Mrs. Wellesley Clarke, Miss Pearl Sproule and Mr. Harry Jones, attended the Westbrook tea-meeting New Years night.

Some of our young men attended the opera to see the play. The time, the place and the Girl" on Monday night. On Tuesday night they went to the play, "The Gay Musician" and pronounced them fine.

School began again with a full force, after teachers and pupils spending a pleasant time during the holidays. Miss Mary Oakville; Miss Yarwood at Picton; Miss Seboales, at Kingston.

International Newspaper Bible Study Club

GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS, BIBLES, BOOKS.

Persons may join this Club at any time during the year, but must, of course, answer the 52 questions hereinafter explained, to qualify for the prizes. It is, however, advisable that the questions be answered as the lessons are studied.

The International Newspaper Bible Study Club is for the purpose of promoting, in an unsectered way among the masses, a wider study of the Bible, the ideal truths of Christianity, and the problems which enter into every man's life. It is composed of all those who join a Local Club, and take up the simple outline-study outlined, leaving only ordained clergymen. We have the sympathetic co-operation of the latter, but it is not considered fair to have them contest for the prizes. Sunday School teachers, Bible class members, and church-goers generally, may belong to this Newspaper Club, also non-churchgoers, of all shades of opinion. All such are cordially invited to do so and to compete for the prizes.

The Beaver has secured the right to publish the International Sunday School Lesson questions by Rev. Dr. Linscott, which have proved so highly interesting readers, and they will appear weekly. One of these questions each week will be for original writing, and upon these answers the prizes are to be awarded.

The Beaver is authorized to form a Local Newspaper Bible Study Club for its readers, and guarantees to all who join and fulfil the conditions, that everything herein promised will be faithfully carried out.

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

1. Each contestant, or his or her family must be a subscriber to this paper, during the contest, or shall pay $1.00 in order to qualify for membership in the International Newspaper Bible Study Club and this Local Club.

2. Each contestant in this Local Club must answer each of the written questions, or connected series of questions appearing on Sunday, August 23d, 1908, and the answers must all be in the hands of the publisher within two weeks of the close of the period, which allows two weeks grace after the issue of the contest.

3. Each answer must be written on one side only, and the paper written on one side only. Answers must contain not more than two hundred words in length and must be written in ink. Contestants will be asked to write their answers on letter paper, and to fold them in envelopes.

4. Each answer must have the name and address of the writer on the bottom of the answer, so that it can be identified, given credit for the answer and then the name can be detached and kept from the knowledge of the judges.

5. Contestants should be careful to number each question before answering. To do this, the number should be placed in the margin, before, or written, when writing the question or answer.

6. The decision of the Local Club Committee shall be final. The Local Club Committee shall be composed of the publisher of this paper, and a committee of three to be appointed at the close of the contest, and forwarded to the publisher, who will be responsible for the completed examination of the papers and the awarding of the prizes. Number of markings, and the number of questions answered correctly, will be the basis of awarding the prizes. In case of a tie between two or more contestants, the prize which such tie contestants would be entitled to will be given each of them.

THE PRIZES.

First Second and Third prizes to each of the Local Clubs, and a rather neat Fourth and Fifth prize for contestants.

Fourth prize, Teacher's Bible, with helps and concordance, value $1.75, to each of the next five contestants.

Fifth prize, Scholar's Bible, with helps and concordance, value $1.00, to each of the next ten contestants.

Sixth prize, Abbreviated Bible, an abridged edition of the Bible, containing the most interesting portions of the Bible, and giving a profound knowledge of the Bible and Christianity, to each of the next twenty contestants, whether answering all the questions or not.

All prizes will be sent free by mail, postage prepaid, to the winners, and for what purpose the prizes are given will be kept a secret and locked in envelopes.

All contestants and readers of this paper are invited to take up these studies regardless of whether they enter the contest or not. Many of the best talked hours on educational topics are those spent in the study of the Bible, under the supervision of their respective pastors.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, BY REV. DR. LINSCOTT, FOR THE INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER BIBLE STUDY CLUB FOR DAYS, 1909.

Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.

The Beginning of the Holy Spirit's Work.

Golden Text: I will pour my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy.—Joel 2:28.

Study the whole lesson carefully, verse by verse, and then answer the following questions, and forward your answers to the publisher of this paper, not later than two weeks after the close of the period. Write on one side of the paper only, and write your name and address on the bottom of the answer, so that it can be detached and kept from the knowledge of the judges.

Would the Holy Spirit have come to the disciples if Jesus had not ascended to heaven? Why?

What was the sound the Holy Spirit made, which drew out division, or interest, among the people, so that they came together?

Where was the sound the Holy Spirit made, which was one of all-clear sound, which was one of confusion?

Is there any other scriptural account of God coming, with any similar outward manifestations?—See 1 Kings 18:38; Ex. 19:16.

Verse 5: Three strong reasons were given why Jews from other countries were in Jerusalem on Pentecost. What were they?

Verse 6: Is there anything peculiar about the sound of the wind, and the flashes of fire in the shape of tongues resting?

Is there class of individuals of good books named Parthians, Medes and Elamites? Is the most patient means of testifying for Jesus? Does it the Holy Spirit, or the apostles, that "out upon each of them"?

Verses 7-11: What is the meaning and the meaning of the statements, that they were filled with the Holy Spirit, and they spoke with other tongues?

Verse 12: What is the meaning of the statement, that they were "amazed and were in doubt"? Also what is the meaning of the statement, that others "mocking said they were full of new wine"?

Verses 14-21: What is the meaning of the statement, that "this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel"? Also what is the meaning of the statement, that "whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved"?

Verses 22-36: Is there still "declared unto this nation under heaven," even when the Holy Spirit is not here, by the apostles?

Verses 37-42: Do devout men filled with the Holy Spirit, ever fail to be convicted?

What do Christians most need to do, in order to be "added unto them"?

All must admit that an educated, ministered, and intelligent Christian, is the most converts, a man with fair intelligence and common sense, without being filled with the Holy Spirit; or an ignorant, superstitious man, filled with the Holy Spirit?

Verse 43: What resemblance is there between the work of Jesus with Holy Spirit, and one under the influence of strong drink?

Verses 44-47: What is the meaning of the statement, that they "had all things common"?

Is the Holy Spirit meant for everybody, or is there some of the disciples who may be received? This question must be answered in writing by members of the Club.

PRESENTATION.

To our beloved and esteemed teacher, Miss Nellie Mark-night, Ingle, Ont.

Dear Miss Mark-night,—It is with deepest regret we have learned that you are about to sever your connection with our school, and we cannot let you go without expressing to you our sorrow in learning of our great loss, and confessing to you the true feelings of our hearts.

We have most heartily appreciated your continual and vigorous efforts during your two years' stay with us. We have considered you our "guiding star" both mentally and intellectually, and we feel that in losing you, we are not only losing a kind, patient and skilful teacher, but we are also losing the greatest charm of our class-mate.

We ask you to kindly accept this toilet set as a token of our sincere respect and love for you, and we hope it may prove to remain the forgetful power of holding the memory of your devoted pupils in your mind.

We wish you a long and prosperous life, and success in all your undertakings.

Signed on behalf of all pupil-friends,

LYDELLA ASSELSTINE,
MARION McLAUCHLIN.

A death that was peculiarly sad occurred on New Years day, at Little Creek, when Mr. Alonzo Snider passed away. Her daughter was married on the New's day to be wedding, and at the wedding she complained of feeling poorly, but attributed her indisposition to an attack of la grippe. On Friday evening the young people went to the reassembling at Anderson Church, just a few rods away. Mr. Snider remaining with his wife. Half an hour later she was taken worse and died before any person had returned. Her husband only being with her. to what effect we cannot even conjecture unless an explanation be found in a letter of the Kravonian period to which Sophy says to Julia, "You remember that saying of Mantis' when we were in London—the one about how she saw something hanging in the air over my head—something bright." That is all she says, and "something bright" leaves the matter very vague. A sword, a crown, the nimbus of a saint—imagination might play untrammeled. Still some prophecy was made. Lady Meg built on it, and Sophy, for all her apparent indifference, remembered it and in after days thought it worthy of recall. That is as far as we can go, and with that passing glimpse Sophy Grotch—of course the mention of the wafer-like mark puts her identity beyond question—passes out of sight for a time. Indeed, as Sophy Grouch, in the position in which we have seen her and in the name under which we have known her, she passes out of sight forever.

Chapter Six

LADY MEG left London for Paris toward the end of 1865 or the beginning of 1866, but we hear nothing of her doings until the early summer of 1868. The veil lifts then, so far as it ever lifts from before the face of the Paris public, and shows us the establishment in the Rue de Grenelle. A queer picture it is in many ways. It gives reason to think that the state of mind in which Lady Meg had now come is but mildly described as eccentricity.

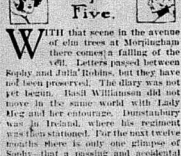
The eminent Lord Dunstanbury, Lady Meg's father, had been one of that set of English Whigs and Liberals who were much at home in Paris in the days of the July monarchy. Among his friends was a certain Marquis de Savres, the head of an old French family of royalist principles. This gentleman had, however, accepted the throne of Louis Philippe and the political principles and leadership of Guizot. Between him and Lord Dunstanbury there arose a close intimacy, and Lady Meg as a girl had often visited in the Rue de Grenelle. Changed as her views were and widely as she was now from most of her father's coterie in Paris, friendship and intercourse between her and the Savres family had never dropped. The present head of the family was Casimir de Savres, a young man of twenty-eight, an officer of cavalry. Being a bachelor, he preferred to dwell in a small apartment on the other side of the river, and the family house in the Rue de Grenelle stood empty. Under some arrangement, presumably a business one, for Marquis de Savres was by no means rich, Lady Meg occupied the first floor of the roomy old mansion. Here she is found established. With her, besides three French servants and an English woman—she has for the time apparently shaken off the spaniels—is Mlle. Sophie de Gruche, in whose favor Sophy Grouch has effected an unobtrusive disappearance.

Chapter Five.

WITH that scene in the avenue of elm trees at Morpingham there comes a falling of the veil. Letters passed between Sophy and Julia Robins, but they have not been preserved. The diary was not to begin. Basil Williamson did not move in the same world with Lady Meg and her entourage. Dunstanbury was up in Ireland, where his sentiment was then stationed, for the next twelve months there is only one glimpse of Sophy—that a passing and accidental one, although not without its significance in throwing a light on Lady Meg's adoption of Sophy—while it lasted it amounted to that—and on the strange use to which she hoped to be able to turn her protégée. The reference is, however, unwillingly vague. Just where each knows would have been of supreme interest, though hardly of any real importance to a sensible mind.

The reference occurs in a privately printed volume of reminiscences by the late Captain Hans Fleming, R. N., a sailor of some distinction, but better known as a naturalist. Writing in the winter of 1868-9 he gives his precise dates, he describes in a letter a meeting with Lady Meg, whom, it will be noticed, he calls "Old Lady Meg," although at that time she was but forty-nine. She had so early in life taken up an attitude of resolute sphinxerhood that there was a tendency to exaggerate her years.

"Today in the park I met old Lady Meg Duddington. It was piercing cold, but the carriage was drawn up under the trees. The poor spaniels on the opposite seat were shivering. She stopped me and was, for her, very gracious. She only 'Lord helped me' twice in the whole conversation. She was full of her ghosts and spirits, her seers and witches. She has got hold of an entirely new prophetess, a certain woman who calls herself Mme. Mantis and knows all the secrets of the future, both this side the grave and the other. Beside Lady Meg sat a remarkably striking girl, to whom she introduced me, but I didn't catch the name. I gathered that this girl, who had an odd mark on one cheek, almost like a pale pink wafer, was, in old Meg's mad mind, anyhow, mixed up with the prophetess as medium or subject or inspiration or something of that kind. I don't understand that nonsense and don't want to. But when I looked sceptical and old Pindar chuckled, or it may have been his teeth chattering with the cold, Meg nodded her head at the girl and said: 'She'll tell you a different tale some day. If you meet her in five years' time perhaps.' I don't know what the old lady meant. I suppose the girl herself looked absolutely indifferent and, indeed, bored. One can't help being amused; but, seriously, it's rather sad for a man who was brought up in the reverence of Lord Dunstanbury to see his only daughter, a clever woman, too, naturally, devoting herself to such childish stuff."



Beside Lady Meg sat a remarkably striking girl.

Such is the passage. It is fair to add that most of the captain's book is of more general interest. As he implies, he had had a long acquaintance with the Dunstanbury family, and took a particular interest in anything that related to it. Nevertheless what he says has its place here. It fits in with and explains Lady Meg's excited and mystical exclamation to Mr. Pindar at Morpingham, "They may speak through her!" Apparently "they" had spoken.

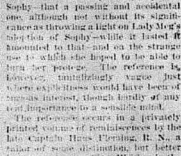
Sophy Grouch, in the position in which we have seen her and in the name under which we have known her, she passes out of sight forever.

Lady Meg's ideas were the ideas of the Rue de Grenelle and in the houses of Lady Meg's royalist allies.

So on one side of Lady Meg are the nobles and their noble ladies, sulking and scheming, and on the other, a bizarre contrast, her witch and her wizard, Mme. Mantis and Pharos. Where the carcass is, there will the vultures be. Should the carcass get up and walk, presumably the vultures would wing an expectant way after it. Mme. Mantis, the woman of the prophecy about "something bright," had followed Lady Meg to Paris, scenting fresh prey. But a more ingenious and powerful scoundrel came on the scene. In association with Mantis, probably very close and not creditable association, is Pharos, alias Jean Coulin. In after days, under the republic, this personage got himself into trouble and was tried at Lille for obtaining no less a sum than 150,000 francs from a rich old royalist lady who lived in the neighborhood of the town. The rogue got his money under cover of a vaticination that Machiahon would restore the monarchy, a nearer approach to the real than he reached in his dealings with Lady Meg, but not probably on that account any the more favorably viewed by his judges.

The president's interrogation of the prisoner, ranging over his whole life, tells us the bulk of what we know of him, but the earliest sketch comes from Sophy herself in one of the rare letters of this period which have survived. "A dirty, scrubby fellow, with greasy hair and a squint in his eye," she tells Julia Robins. "He wears a black cloak down to his heels and a gimcrack thing around his neck that he calls his 'periapt'—charm, I suppose he means. Says he can work spells with it, and he propolous partner Mantis kisses it (italics are Sophy's) whenever she meets him. Phew! I'd like to give them both a dusting! What do you think? Pharos, as he calls himself, tells Lady Meg he can make the dead speak to her, and she says that isn't it possible that since they've died themselves and know all about it, they may be able to tell her how not to! Seeing how this suits his book, it isn't Pharos who's going to say 'No,' though he tells her to make a will in case anything happens before he's ready to establish communication"—and perhaps they don't tell, after all, but he thinks they will. Now I come into the game! Me being very sympathetic, they're to, talk through me (italics again are Sophy's), told you ever hear of such nonsense? Hold Master Pharos that I didn't know whether his ghosts would talk through me, but I didn't need joy of their help to pretty well see through him! But Lady Meg's hot on it. I suppose it's what I'm here for, and I must let him rip—or pretend to. It's all one to me, and it pleases Lady Meg. Only he and I have nothing else to do with each other! I'll see to that. To tell you the truth, I don't like the look in his eyes sometimes, and I don't think Mrs. Mantis would either!"



She saw the emperor drive in the streets.

As a medium Sophy was a failure. She was antagonistic purposely antagonistic, said Jean Coulin, attempting to defend himself against the president's suggestion that he had received something like £1,000 from Lady Meg and given her not a jot of supernatural information in return. This failure of Sophy's was the first rift between Lady Meg and her. Pharos could have used it against her, and his power was great, but it was not at present his game to eject her from the household. At this point, with deeds in view, and there was no question of the hundred pounds note yet.

It is pleasant to turn to another figure, one which stands out in the meager records of this time and bears its prominence well. Casimir, marquis de Savres, is neither futile nor sordid, neither schemer nor impostor. He was a brave and simple soldier and gentleman, holding his ancestral principles in his heart, but content to serve his country in evil times until good should come. He was courteous and attentive to Lady Meg, touching her follies with a light hand, and if he may be give his love with an honest and impetuous sincerity, which he masked by a gay humor under his lady should be grieved at the havoc she herself had made.

Last among the prominent members of the group in which Sophy lived in Paris is Mme. Zerkovitch. Her husband was of Russian extraction, his father having settled in Kravonia and become naturalized there. The son was now in Paris as correspondent to one of the principal papers of Slavna. Mme. Zerkovitch was by birth a Pole, not a remarkable woman in herself, but important in this history as the effective link between these days and Sophy's life in Kravonia. She was small and thin, with auburn hair and very bright hazel eyes, with light colored lashes. An agreeable talker, an accomplished singer and a kind hearted woman, she was an acquaintance to be welcomed. Whatever strange notions she harbored about Sophy in after days she received from the beginning and never lost a strong affection for her, and their friendship ripened quickly from their first meeting at Lady Meg's. Marie Zerkovitch was a frequent visitor and much interested in Pharos' hocus pocus.

Chapter Seven

SOPHY'S enemies were at work, and Sophy was careless. Such is the history of the next twelve months. Mantis was installed medium now, and the revelations came. But they came slow, vague, fitful, tantalizing. Sometimes even wrong. Pharos professed readily, what could it were the hosts which reigned in the

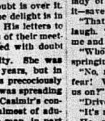
be, for surely Lady Meg by her faith (and, it may be added, her liberality) deserved well of the unseen powers? He hinted at the evil eye, but without express accusation. Under "the influence" Mantis would speak of "the maiden one," but Mantis when awake thought Mlle. de Gruche a charming young lady! It was odd and mysterious. Pharos could make nothing of it. He, too, thought Mlle. Sophie—he advanced to that pleasant informality of description—quite lavishly and entirely devoted to Lady Meg, only unhappily so irresponsive to the unseen, a trifle gossymmpathetic it might be. But what would you? The wound had been hard to think of death of the dead. Was it to be expected, then, that Mlle. Sophie would be a good subject or take much interest in the new, great and wonderful though it might be?

The pair of rogues did their work well and quietly, so quietly that nothing of it would be known were it not that they quarreled later on over the spoils of this and other transactions, and Mme. Zerkovitch be witness how Lille used her memory and her tongue freely. "The plan now was to get rid of the young lady," she said plainly. "Pharos feared her power over my lady and that my lady might leave her all the money. Pharos hated the young lady because she would have nothing to say to him and told him plainly that she thought him a charlatan. She had courage, yes! But if she would have joined in with him—ah, then, into the streets with me! I knew that well enough, and Pharos knew I knew it. So I hated her, too, fearing that some day she and he would make up their differences, and I—that for me! Yes, that was how we were, M. le Président! Her lucid exposition elicited a polite compliment from M. le President, and we also are obliged to her.

But Sophy was heedless. She showed afterward that she could fight well for what she loved well and that with her an eager heart made a strong hand. Her heart was not in this fight. The revelation of mad Lady Meg's true motive for taking her up may well have damped a gratitude otherwise becoming in Sophy Grouch transmuted to Sophie de Gruche. Yet the gratitude remained. She fought for Lady Meg—for her sanity and against the household in her proceedings. In so fighting she fought against herself, for Lady Meg was very mad now. For herself she did not fight. Her heart and her thoughts were elsewhere. The schemes in the Rue de Grenelle occupied her hardly more than the clash of principles, the efforts of a failing dynasty, the struggles of rising freedom, the stir and seething of the great city and the critical times in which she lived.



They left the house behind stopping beer.

For she was young, and the lord of youth had come to visit her in his shower of golden promise. The days were marked for her by the fawning advances or the spiteful insinuations of Pharos and Mantis, by the heroics of an uneasy emperor or the ingenious experiments in reconciling contradictions wherein his minister excelled, but above all by the days lived or lived not as she met or failed to meet Casimir de Savres. It was the season of her first love. Yet, with all its joy, the shadow of doubt is over it. It seems not perfect. The delight is in receiving, not in giving. His letters to her, full of tenderness of their memories and talks, are shaded with doubt and eloquent of insecurity. She was no more than a girl in years, but in some ways her mind was precocious. Her power over her ambition was spreading its still growing wings. Casimir's constant tone of deference, almost of adoration, flattered her, but there is one convention in which he had been bred, but it marks, too, the suppliant. To the last he is the vowee, not the vowed. Marie Zerkovitch was a frequent visitor and much interested in Pharos' hocus pocus.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO

WHAT BOOTH'S KIDNEY PILLS ARE DOING FOR NAPANEE, ONT., PEOPLE.

All the blood in the body passes through the Kidneys every three minutes.

The Kidneys filter the blood.

They work night and day to daily remove about 500 grains of impurity matter. If they fail, some part of this impure matter is left in the blood, bringing on pain in the back, headache, dizziness, irregular heart, bad, dry skin, rheumatism, general dropsy, deposits in the urine. Booth's Kidney Pills make the filtering right and overcome Kidney trouble. Hundreds of Lennox County residents have found this out.

Mrs. Thos. Smith, of Graham st., Napanee, Ont., says:

"For over four years I had suffered with many annoying and painful symptoms of Bright's disease. I had tried every possible manner of relief, but could find nothing to benefit me. The kidneys were so disordered that I would have to leave my bed a number of times each night with the frequency of the kidney secretions. The urine was scant, scalding and very odorous. My general health had been very much run down and I would awake more tired and unrefreshed than on going to bed. I tried Booth's Kidney Pills on advice of a friend and procured them at Mr. Wallace's Pharmacy. They cured me, where all else failed. I am stronger than in years previous and will always speak a good word for Booth's Kidney Pills."

is the statement of how she came to know how she had been toward him, not of how in those happy days she seemed to herself to be.

He knew about Grouch. He had been told by a copious superfluity of female friendliness, by Lady Meg, cloaking suspicion under specious penitence; by Mme. Mantis with impertinent and intrusive archness; by Marie Zerkovitch in the sheer impossibility of containing within herself any secret which had the bad fortune to be intrusted to her. Sophy's own confession, made with incredible difficulty, she hated the name so, fell flat and was greeted with a laugh of mockery.

It happened at the Calvaire at Fontainebleau, whither they had made a day's and night's excursion under the escort of Marie Zerkovitch and a student friend of hers from the Quartier Latin. These two they had left behind stipping beer at a restaurant facing the chateau. On the eminence which commands the white little town dropped amid the old forest, over against the red roofs of the palace vying in richness with the turning leaves, in sight of a river in its own kind unsurpassed, in its own charm unequaled, Sophy broke the brutal truth which was to end the infatuation of the head of a house old as St. Louis.

"It's bad to pronounce, is it?" asked Casimir, smiling and touching her hand. "Ah, well, good or bad, I couldn't pronounce it, so to me it is nothing."

"They'd all say it was terrible—a misalliance."

"I fear only one voice on earth saying that."

"And the fraud I am—De Gruche!" She caught his hand tightly. Never before had it occurred to her to defend or to excuse the transparent fiction.

"I know stars fall," he said, with his pretty gravity, not too grave. "I wish that they may rise to their own height again and I rise with them."

He caught her round the waist.

The sun sank behind the horizon. A gentle afterglow of salmon pink rested over the palace and city; the forest turned to a frame of smoky, brownish black. Casimir waved a hand toward it and laughed merrily.

"Before we were it was; after we are it shall be! I sound as old as Scripture! It has seen old lovers and great mistresses! Saving the proprieties, weren't you Montespan or Pompadour?"

"De la Vallière?" she laughed. "Or Maintenon?"

"For good or evil, neither! Do I hurt you?"

"No; you make me think, though," answered Sophy. "Why?"

"They niggled at virtue or at vice. You don't niggle! Neither did Montespan or Pompadour."

"And so I am to be—Marquise de"—

"Higher, higher!" he laughed. "Mme. la Marechale"—

"It is near, then—soon—you think?" She turned to him with a sudden tension.

He pointed a Frenchman's eloquent forefinger to the dark mass of the chateau, whose chimneys rose now like gloomy interrogation marks to an unresponsive, darkened sky. "He is there now—the emperor! Perhaps he walks in his garden by the round pond—thinking, dreaming, balancing."

"Throwing bals in the air, as conjurors do?"

"Yes, my star."

"And if he misses the first?"

"He'll seek applause by the second. And the second, I think, would be war."

"And you would go?"

"To what other end do I love the lady of the red star—alas, I can't see it—save to bring her glory?"

"Then I'll thank Pharos," said Sophy, with a laugh. "Wouldn't you rather stay with me and be happy?"

"What speaks to me?" he cried, springing to his feet. "Not you!"

"No, no," she answered. "I have no fear! What is it, Casimir, that drives us on?"

"Drives us on! You! You, too?"

"It's not a woman's part, is it?"

He caught her round the waist, and she allowed his clasp, but she grew pale, yet smiled again softly.

"If all life were an evening at Fontainebleau—a fine evening at Fontainebleau!" she murmured in the low clearness which marked her voice.

"Mightn't it be?"

"With war! And with what drives us on!"

Parties having logs to saw would do well to consider that Breeze Bros. are prepared to saw lumber at $2.00 per 1000 for soft, and $3.00 for hard timber. In about two weeks we will have in operation a Band Log Saw, which will produce about one-seventh more lumber to the log. Our Band Shingle machine produces one and one half thousand shingles to the cord more than the ordinary circular saw. It has proven a perfect success. The public are invited to bring their logs and shingle bolts and we warrant good satisfaction.

Chapped Hands

ARE your hands chapped, cracked, or sore? Have you "cold cracks" which open and bleed when the skin is drawn tight? Have you a cold sore, frost bite, chilblains, or a "raw" place which at times makes it agony for you to go about your household duties? If so, Zam-Buk will give you relief and will heal the damaged skin. Anoint the sore places at night, and if it is the hands, wear a pair of old gloves overnight. Zam-Buk's rich healing essences will sink into the wounds, end the smarting, and will quickly heal.

Read MRS. YELLEN'S Experience.

Mrs. Yellen of Portland says:—"I know her it only my duty to tell you of the great benefit I have derive from Zam-Buk. My hands were so sore and cracked that it was agony to put them into water. When I tried to do so they would smart so much as if I had scalded them. I was quite unable to go afield from anything I put on them until I tried Zam-Buk, and the balm succeeded where all else had failed. It cleared the trouble right away, and in a very short time healed my hands completely. I would strongly recommend it to anyone suffering from chapped or cracked hands. It is a wonderful healer and should be in every home.

Father and Daughter both Cured.

Miss Hattie Portland, Galesburg, Ont., writes:—"Zam-Buk is the best balm we have ever used. Every year I am troubled with chapped hands and around the nails I suffer from the trouble. I tried Zam-Buk. It is surprising how quickly this balm has healed up the sores and cracks. My father has also found it of great value for sore and inflamed joints and other ailments and injuries and thinks there is nothing to equal it.

Zam-Buk is excellent for chaps, cracks, cold sores, sore feet, bad legs, ulcers, eczema, piles, scalds, burns, scalds, abscesses, poisoned wounds, and all skin troubles and sores, or tool any form. Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Price 50c. a box. Refuse all substitutes and imitations. You can get genuine Zam-Buk from all druggists and stores, or post one from the OLD PEOPLE!

Need Vinol because it contains the very elements needed to rebuild wasting tissues and replace weakness with strength. It fortifies the system against colds, and thus prevents pneumonia.

This is because Vinol contains iron and all of the medicinal body-building elements of Cod Liver Oil, taken from fresh cods' livers — but no oil. Vinol is not a patent medicine. Everything it contains is named on bottle.

POOR BLOOD

Elderly people feel the cold keenly, because their blood is thin, sluggish and watery. Vinol is the finest blood tonic and strength maker. It creates a hearty appetite, promotes digestion, purifies and enriches the blood and invigorates the entire body.

COUGHS AND COLDS

Elderly people are very susceptible to coughs and colds, which so often develop pneumonia. Don't lose time experimenting with other remedies when we guarantee Vinol to cure. Vinol has carried many an old person through a hard winter without a cold or cough.

76 YEARS OLD

The grand-niece of Alexander Hamilton says: — "I am 76 years old, have a hearty appetite, sleep soundly, and feel active and well. Thanks to Vinol, which is the finest tonic and strength creator I ever used, Vinol is a God send to old people."

80 YEARS OLD

"I was so feeble I had to be wheeled about in an invalid's chair, and took cold at the slightest cause. Vinol built up my strength so I could walk a quarter of a mile. I am delighted." — MRS. M. BLOOM, Lewistown, Pa.

CROYDON.

On Thursday evening, Dec. 24th the Hearts of Oak of this place assembled at the club room, for the purpose of electing their officers for the ensuing year, and transacting general business. The officers for 1909 are as follows:

President, Jacob Doupe; Vice-Pres., Jack Nolan; Treas., Geo. Deline; Director, Elmore Galbraith; Rec.-Secty.-Ed. Hannah; Tyler, Jos. Kellar; Reporter, Max McGregor; Auditors, Stan Doupe and H. Galbraith; Managers, Will Galbraith and H. McCabe; Committee, Marsh Williams, Henry Piper, Robt. Bawn, Iner Deline, and A. Hughes; Lecturers, Walter Deline and Geo. Barrigar.

After the lodge work was finished, the brethren, including representatives from various lodges, were entertained to a banquet served in the Club's dining room, under direction of Bro. Hughes. After ample justice had been done to the good things provided, the usual programme of toasts were introduced by Bro. E. Galbraith, who acted as chairman in his usual clever manner. Past President, M. A. Williams, was called to the platform, and after reviewing the past year of the Society, and its prosperity, gave a very humorous and eloquent address, which won the hearts of all present. Henry Piper and Will Galbraith then gave a pretty exhibition of club swinging, accompanied by fast music, followed by Jacob Doupe who delivered a short and pithy address on agriculture. Mr. Doupe favored the up-to-date methods of farming, and compared the advantage the farmer of to-day had over his ancestors. The speaker said he had been a farmer for the past 11 years. Unfortunately for him, his farm was nine miles from the nearest railway station. Now nine miles was quite a distance to haul immense quantities of wheat, peas, corn and hay, but fortunately for him he had none to haul. His farm was mainly a grass ranch, where large herds of cattle and sheep roam at will.—Messrs. Galbraith and McGregor then took the house by storm with a clog dance, followed by an Indian war song by Geo. Deline, which delighted everyone. Then came a song "Dunderbeck's march time" by Messrs. Galbraith and Hannah. Patrick Nolan followed with a whistling solo, assisted by H. McCabe, and then the meeting broke up with "God Save the King."

New Strength For Weak Girls

Can be Had Through the Rich, Red Blood Made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

There comes a time in the life of almost every girl when sickness attacks her. The strain upon her blood supply is too great, and there comes headaches and backaches, loss of appetite, attacks of dizziness and heart palpitation, and a general tendency to a decline. The only thing that can promptly and speedily cure these troubles is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This is the only medicine that actually makes new, rich, red blood; and a plentiful supply of rich blood is the one thing needed to make all the health of growing girls and women of mature years. The truth of this statement is proved in the story of Miss Esther E. Sproule, Truemanville, N.S., who says: "At the age of sixteen years I left my country home to attend high school. The close confinement and long hours of study nearly broke me down. My blood supply seemed to be deficient, and I grew pale and depressed. I was short of breath if I hurried, and my complexion took out on my face. I was altogether in a miserable condition and my parents thought it best for me to continue my studies unless I found a speedy cure. I tried several tonics prescribed by the doctor, but they proved useless. My mother urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and finally consented to do so. I had hardly finished the second box before a change for the better took place. Encouraged by the doctor, but I strongly recommend them to other ailing girls."

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

Pure Olive Oil

The food value and healthfulness of Olive Oil being entirely dependent upon its purity, you will quickly recognize the all-important necessity of having a brand that you can depend upon to be strictly pure.

Adulterations in Olive Oil are common—more than 6,000,000 gallons of cheap Cotton Seed Oil are exported from Smyrna every year to Europe for the purpose of adulteration.

The Olive Oil handled at Wallace's Drug Store is analyzed, and guaranteed pure, by the Chamber of Commerce, Nice, and goes to the consumer in original packages.

PAID IN FULL.

Success is the hardest earned return in the world and particularly in the theatrical calling, but once secured it is lasting and this fact is strongly emphasized in the triumph of Paid in Full, a new play of contemporary life in America by Eugene Walter which Wagenhals and Kemper presented at the Astor Theatre, New York and which is now in its second year in that city. A specially organized cast and a superior production will be seen at the Grand Opera House in Kingston on Tuesday, Jan. 12th next, and the presentation it is promised will be as perfect in every detail as that in New York. Paid in Full was nothing short of a triumph in New York and Chicago, having a run of two months in the latter city.

A GRAND SUCCESS.

Anderson reameeting was held as announced on New Years night. The night was pleasant and a large crowd took advantage of the opportunity to spend a pleasant social evening. The tea was well and promptly served, and the waiters did their duty faithfully till the last call for more was satisfied. Mr. H. V. Fralick filled the chair with acceptably and he humorous head ers told his experience as a school teacher at Anderson years before made many a laugh. Miss Bousfield (Bousfield and Mr. James Peet, baritone, both of Belleville, rendered a delightfully entertaining programme as the enthusiastic encores testified. The church was crowded, the proceeds being in excess of $85.00

Mens' Tweed Overcoats, regular $7.50 and $9.00, to clear at $5.45. MEAGHER BROS.

VIVIAN—SHETLER.

A quiet but pretty home wedding took place on Wednesday evening, Dec. 23d, 1908, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Shetler, of Shannonville, when their youngest daughter, Etta, was united in marriage to Mr. Edmee Vivian, of Thurlow. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. E. Cameron, of the Shannonville Presbyterian church. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of brown satin with trimmings of overlace and applique, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. The ceremony took place in the drawing room, which was handsomely decorated, the bride and groom standing beneath an artistically designed arch of evergreens. Only the immediate relatives of the young couple were present. The bride was the recipient of many costly gifts, that of the groom being a necklace set with topaz and pearls. After a dainty supper had been served to thirty or more guests, Mr. and Mrs. Vivian left by the evening train for a trip to Montreal and other points. The bride travelled in a gown of blue broadcloth with hat to match. On their return they will reside in Thurlow. Their many friends join in wishing them a happy and prosperous journey through life.

THE IMPERIAL OPERA CO. COMING JANUARY 15TH.

There is no musical organization in America which can boast of a genuine all-star cast such as The Imperial Opera Co., Jan. 15th. That is how comic opera originated, Sun Toy is Right and sparkling with its oriental setting and fascinating book of Chinese music Sun Toy his proven to be one of the most successful light opera. It is brimfull of humorous situations with witty sayings and notable music which arouse enthusiasm in any audience.

In the Company are Harry Girard the clever Baritone who was the star in the opera "Alaska," which was the rage in the west last season, and Ida Mulligan, who was the idle of the Toronto audiences and one of the cleverest comedians of today. Other well-known principals in the Company are Miss Katherine Broske, Soprano, Laura Burke, Mezzo-Soprano, Allan Mostyn, W. H. Pringle and one of the prettiest choruses ever seen in light opera. Mr. Girard began his musical career as an organist and choir master and later became the composer of a number of sacred songs. Born in Seattle, Wash., he ran away from home when ten years old and obtained employment as a vessel sailing for Japan. During the loading of the vessel Mr. Girard entertained the crew on the accordeon and so pleased was the Captain that he befriended the youngster to his room and compelled him to sing and play for him during the hours that the boy was supposed to be at work. At the end of the voyage the Captain gave the lad a purse and sent him home. With this money Mr. Girard began to study long to work himself into the field of music and after that rise was steadily risen until he now occupies one of the leading positions as a concert entertainer in America.

Sam. Collins, the clever comedian of the Imperial Opera Co., who plays the part of Li in "Sun Toy," follows in the footsteps of the late Mr. Collins has a manner all his own, which makes him a star favorite.

Miss Agnes Caine-Brown, the prima donna, is appearing in light opera during a temporary rest from the more strenuous life of Metropolitan Grand Opera. She has a soprano voice, rich in feeling and of unusual quality, which lends itself greatly to classic song. Light opera is the holiday picnic for Miss Brown, who scored an instant success in Toronto.

Mr. Hallan Mostyn, who is a comedian as well as a basso singer, played the role of Yen-How the old Mandarin with the six little wives in the original company under Mr. Powers, and it has been one of his most successful roles.

With such an interesting and amusing opera as "Sun Toy," such a company and not but make a signal success all over the country. It has been one of the most successful of the Toronto presentations, and needless to say will make its appearance here an event of the theatrical season.

BIG CREEK.

The S. S. concert held in the Lutheran church on Jan. 8th, was a decided success. The programme, which consisted of thirty-two members, was prepared by the scholars. Misses Mary Mesers, D. and A. Parks, and several selections on a Berliner gramophone, which were appreciated by all. Choruses, solos, club swinging, recitations and four di lo gues, which were months of the year by six little girls and six little boys, each dressed to represent the month. At the close they sang "When He cometh" and marched off. "Night Misunderstanding" by Miss Nathella Smith and Mr. Arthur Jackson. "Train to Mauro" by Miss B. A. Gould, Mr. Ray Perry, and Master Ernest Jackson. Last, but best of all, was "Why we never married" by seven old maids and seven old bachelors, which was encored. Rev. Horton, in his usual good manner, very ably acted as chairman. Books were presented to the scholars and the two smaller classes. A hearty vote of thanks was voted to those who did so much to make the entertainment the best of the season. Everyone went home feeling that they had got more than their money for, getting one dollar's worth for fifteen cents.

HAYBURN TEAMEETING.

The annual teamecting, which was held at Hayburn on New Years evening, was confessedly one of the best that has been held in the vicinity for years. We have always had a good time, but this was something exceptional. An abundance of the very best provisions was provided for refreshments, and was heartily partaken of by a large congregation. The programme was most excellent. Mr. A. E. Paul, Napanee, was chairman of the evening and assisted on the programme besides Mrs. Paul and three daughters and son also assisted both in musical entertainment and recitations. Those who speak for this family great, useful men for the Methodist church and the cause of God. The numbers rendered by them were delightful, and called forth prolonged applause. The two Miss Bells, who accompanied them on the occasion, were also well received and appreciated. Mr. and Mrs. Gorshine, of Prince Edward County, were also present, and sang a number of selections, much to the delight of the people. The proceeds of the teamecting and anniversary services were over $46.00, a desire to thank the many friends for their help and patronage.

On Sunday, Jan. 3d, the anniversary services were held at No. 1 Church, Hayburn. The Rev. C. W. DeMille, B.A., of Hay Bay Circuit, ably conducted the services, morning and evening. His sermons, helpful and inspiring, were much appreciated. The choir aided by Mr. Ira Diamond, of Hay Bay, rendered special music for the occasion with acceptability.

NEWBURGH.

Next Sabbath will see the reopening of the Presbyterian church here, which is only now ready for use again, after the repairs necessitated by the damage sustained in the fire of last October. A complete new roof has been laid, the interior papered, painted and grained, the platform enlarged, new carpeting and matting laid throughout, and a new pulpit placed in position. The re-opening on Sunday will be a notable occasion. Rev. Dr. McIlwish, of Cooke's Church, Kingston, will preach at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Dr. McTavish is one of the leaders of the church, especially in the work of the young people, and his visit will without doubt be inspiring. On the Monday evening following Rev. J. R. Conn, of Napanee, will lecture in the church on "Edison and his Inventions", certainly a most interesting subject. There will also be a programme of music, and a very profitable evening is assured. An admission of 20 cents will be charged to the lecture.

Very deep regret was generally felt here on the announcement of the death of Rev. D. O. Crossley, of Whitby, a former pastor of the Methodist church here. He was deeply loved by his congregation for he bore a very kindly heart and was devoted to his congregation. Mr. Crossley was the preacher on the first Sunday of the Jubilee services of the Newburgh Methodist church, and left an enduring message of the nobility of Christian service. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved family.

The attendance at the annual meeting of the Public Library on Monday night was smaller than usual. The chairman of the Library Board, Mr. J. H. Patterson, presided. The report of the Secretary and Librarian, Mrs. John P. Moore, showed an increase in circulation of books of over 100, the total circulation for 1908 being 1090, exclusive of that of the travelling libraries, which have been used. There are over 2000 volumes in the library at present. The report of the Treasurer, Mr. J. W. Courtney, showed a balance on hand, smaller, however, than last year. Last year's board of directors were re-elected, Revs. M. Symmonds and C. H. Chant replacing Revs. R. Blake and Mr. J. W. Yeomans. At a subsequent meeting of the directors the same evening, the officers for the year were re-elected; Chairman, J. H. Patterson; Secretary and Librarian, Mrs. J. P. Moore; Treasurer, J. W. Courtney; auditors, H. Ryan and P. Bell.

The meeting of the Farmers' Institute on Saturday night last, in Finkle's Hall, resulted in a strong, inspiring and instructive evening, but the small attendance of farmers was not encouraging to those responsible for the educative work. Mr. D. A. Nesbitt, B.A., was called to the chair, and the faithful few present were rewarded in Mr. Aylesworth, was again at his post. The speakers of the evening were Mr. Jas. H. Edgar, Glenora, who spoke on the breeding and care of horses, and Mr. Harold Jones, of Maitland, who gave a very interesting talk on troublesome insects, in many practical ways preparing his hearers to fight against the insect pest in field and garden. Mr. T. A. Dunwoody also made a brief entertaining speech.

Rev. G. W. McCall, of Trinity church, Napanee, preached the annual missionary sermon in the Methodist church on Sunday night, and in an address, replete with most interesting facts and figures, unveiled in a remarkably comprehensive survey the present day conditions throughout the world of the great evangelical missionary enterprise. He also spoke in some detail of the missionary work of the Methodist church and graphically described the needs which are claiming it to-day. The results of this missionary appeal over the circuit were very satisfactory, and Mr. McCall's excellent service was much appreciated. Rev. Mr. Sexsmith filled Mr. McCall's pulpit at Trinity.

The annual meeting of the Methodist church will be withdrawn on Sunday evening next, owing to the re-opening services in the Presbyterian church.

At the inaugural meeting of the 1909 Council on Monday morning with all members present, the municipal officers for the year were appointed as follows: Clerk, Chas. Welbanks; Treasurer, E. Gandier; Assessors, T. B. Wilson; Collector, S. Mulholland; Auditors, Wm. Nesbit and J. M. Denyes; High School Trustees, Dr. A. Dunwoody and J. Sampson; poundkeeper, Jas. A. Farley; Superintendent of lighting, Percy Shorey; fence-viewers, H. O'Connor, Jas. Clark and Jas. A. Sutton; Board of Health, Ryan, Chairman, C. C. Welbanks, Secretary, W. G. Adams, Jos. Paul and P. Fairbairn; Medical Health Officer, Dr. A. B. Carscallen.

There was an unusually large attendance at the second "National" night, under the auspices of the Epworth League, on Tuesday evening last. The subject of the programme, which was very interesting, Mr. D. A. Nesbit ably presided over the meeting during the evening on the constitutional history of Canada, tracing our development as a nation from the conquest of the French until the present day from the standpoint of government, in connection with which he urged upon the people the necessity of developing a broadly based patriotism, which will have its place in work, in helping out this nation's glorious destiny. The further programme consisted of the rendering patriotic choruses by the High School Glee Club, an essay on Canada by Mr. Percy Shorey, a reading by Miss Jennie Brandon, solo by Miss Violet Clancy and a chorus by the choir of the church.

The next meeting of the High School Literary Society will be held on the afternoon of Friday, Jan. 22nd, when a debate by Form II pupils will be the chief literary feature of the programme.

LATE REV. D. O. CROSSLEY.

A former pastor of the Western Methodist church, Napanee, who died at his home in Whitby, on Friday last. His demise will be greatly mourned by his many friends in Napanee and vicinity.

TAMWORTH.

Fred. Cauchlin, living near Marlbank, had his leg broken while falling a tree. He lay for nearly an hour before help arrived to cut the tree off him. Drs. Houston, Barrows and Wilson were sent for and amputated the broken limb, but he died a few days after. He was insured in the Foresters for $1,000. He leaves a young wife and one son about 6 years old, to mourn his sad loss.—Boots and shoes of all kinds at Floyd & Co.'s.

First session of this year's Municipal Council was held last Monday, Steve Gilmore presiding, and Councillors Harrison, Black, Mckim and Sullivan, present. After the obligations were taken, the Reeve called upon Rev. S. F. Dixon to invoke the Divine blessing. The Council then proceeded to deal with the public business. The Methodist church was crowded last Sunday night with citizens of every creed. Rev. S. F. Dixon gave an enjoyable address in explanation of what Local Option is and does. Drawing from official records the powers and limitations of the law, and relating his own observations as to its great benefit in other municipalities. He stated his belief that in three years not over fifty municipalities in Leeds and Addington would have a bar-room. Rev. J. K. Henry also spoke on the wider questions of Moral Reform.

McCULLOUGH—HALL.

A very pretty home wedding was solemnized at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James McCullough, Kingsford, on the evening of Wednesday, the 16th inst., when their daughter, Addie Mae, was married to Mr. Fred Hall, of Thurlow. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. A. D. Cameron, of Melrose. The bride who was given away by her father, wore cream voile. Miss Nellie McCullough, sister of the bride, also wearing cream voile, acted as bridesmaid. Mr. Donald Hall, brother of The groom, was best man. The ceremony took place in the spacious drawing room, which for the occasion was specially prepared. The bride was the recipient of many costly gifts, that of the groom being a gold watch and chain. The groom is present to the bridesmaid a beautiful gold bracelet, and to the best man a pair of gold cuff links. After dinner was served to almost a hundred guests, who were mostly relatives of the young couple, a few hours were enjoyably spent, after which the party broke up. Mr. and Mrs. Hall will shortly take up their residence in Thurlow.

OBITUARY.

On Saturday morning, 2nd Dec., there passed to the final rest, at her home at Hayes Corner, one of the most aged and respected ladies of the vicinity, Mrs. Baker, widow of the late Mr. John Baker. Her death came as a great shock to her many friends. Although she had been ill for some time, she had always a cheerful word and a smile to greet everybody. Her maiden name was Mary Ann McGuire. She was married to John Baker, who proved to be a kind husband and most devoted father. Their family consisted of seven sons, who still shorten the sad loss of a kind and loving mother. Samuel and Alexander, home, and Robert, of Watertown, N.Y. She also leaves one sister, Miss Jane McGuire, to mourn the loss of a kind and true sister. The funeral took place the following Tuesday at Christ Church, Tamworth. The service was conducted by the Rev. R. Jones. Her remains were placed in the vault to await interment in the family plot there.

BRISCO OPERA HOUSE, TO-NIGHT.

There is no musical comedy so widely different, which has proved such a glorious success as "San Toy" as that the Imperial Opera Company will present at Napanee, to-night, Friday, Jan. 15th. "San Toy" is the Japan which made Jan. T. Powers famous several seasons ago, and one which particularly suits the versatile personality of the Imperial Opera Company. It is blessed with an interesting and amusing story. Yen-How a mandarin of the first-class in Chinese society has a daughter who is noted throughout the land for her beauty and accomplishments. Her fame reaches the ears of the Emperor, who demands that she be sent to the Royal Court at Pekin. Yen-How is in despair and disguising his child as a boy hands her over to Sir Toby Belch to be taken care of. The secret of her sex leaks out, which results in a love affair between Sir Toy and Sir Bingo's son Bobby. Meanwhile Yen-How has sent his daughter to the Emperor, telling him that he has no daughter, but a son. But before he arrives, Bo-Hop, who is related to the Emperor tells the Emperor the truth with the result that Yen-How is forced to wed his daughter to the Court or die. Li arrives late upon the scene, mixes things up by persuading that San Toy is a boy and Emperor, by his head, but of course everything ends happily as it should in musical comedy.

International Newspaper Bible Study Club

GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS. BIBLES, BOOKS.

Persons may join the Club at any time during the year, but must, of course, answer the 13 questions hereinafter outlined, in order to qualify for the prizes. It is, however, desirable that the questions be answered as the lessons are studied.

The International Newspaper Bible Study Club is for the purpose of interesting in an unfettered way among the masses, a wider study of the Bible, the basic principle of Christianity, and the problems which enter into every man's life. It is composed of all those who join a Local Club, and take up the studies course hereinafter outlined, lately ordained clergymen. We have the unqualified co-operation of the latter, but it is not considered fair to have them compete for the prizes. Sunday School teachers, Bible class scholars, and church-goers generally, may belong to this Newspaper Club, also non-churchgoers, of all shades of opinion. All such who have not joined are warmly invited to do so and to compete for the prizes.

The Beaver has secured the right to publish the International Sunday School Lesson questions by Rev. Dr. Linscott, which have aroused so much interest wherever used, they will appear weekly. One of these questions each week is to be answered in writing, and upon these answers the prizes will be awarded.

The Beaver is authorized to form a Local Newspaper Bible Study Club in any locality, and guarantees to all who join and fulfil the conditions hereinafter set forth prompt and full benefit as liberally carried out.

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

3. Each question must be answered separately, and the paper written on one side only. No answer must exceed two hundred words in length and may be less. It will be to the advantage of contestants to keep their answers on letter paper about 8½ inches by 11 inches.

4. Each answer must have the name and address of the writer plainly written at the end of the answer, so it can be identified, given a number, registered and then put in charge of one of the examiner may know it by number only.

5. Students should be careful to understand the question before answering. To do this, the lesson text must be read and especially the verse, or verses, upon which the question is based.

6. The answers from this Local Club must be delivered to this office, and they will be collated at the close of the contest, and forwarded to headquarters for independent examination by competent examiners. Each medal will be suitably engraved, indicating the name of the contest for which it is awarded, and in like manner each Bible and book will be inscribed.

All who can write, and have ideas, are urged to enter the contest, irrespective of the degree of their education, as the papers will be valued from the standpoint of simple truth as taught by Jesus, and presented in a life. Slowly but surely it is being proved that Jesus is right. Individual men have proved it in part, and some day society, the business world, the political party, will learn that no life is quite right in any thing that is complicated in a lie.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS FOR DR. LINSCOTT FOR THE INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER BIBLE STUDY CLUB FOR 1909.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)

The Beginning of the Christian Church. Acts ii. 22-47.

Golden Text: They continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayer. Acts ii. 42.

Verse 22—How is it that Jesus has impressed himself in the world as he does? More than ever done, and that he has warranted the hatred of the Jews by the people, and that his influence is increasing with the years?

Verse 23—God clearly sent Jesus with a purpose, but how did the Jews have free will kept, but while the Jews rejected, and slew him, how is it that God raised him from the dead? Is there a mystery that is bringing about, by the death of Jesus, what could not be done in any other way?

Verse 24—God did not want the Jews to repent and thereby be saved, and thereby do what would have been the result if they had accepted God's free gift?

Is not the crucifixion of Jesus the colossal crime of history, and is it not the one great example of how God turns evil into good?

Verse 32—What was it that had brought this sharp sense of guilt upon them?

What are the influences which put men into opposition to Jesus? What temptations to themselves?

Verse 37—Jesus were to ask you, what he should do to be saved, what would you say to him?

Verse 38—What is it to repent, in the sense here meant?

Can a person be saved, if he intends do so again?

If a person is sorry enought to forsake his sins, and turns to God, but is afraid he will be overcome by temptation, and fall into sin again?

Verse 39—Who are those people saved through repentance, absolution, who have not been saved otherwise?

Verse 41—Who are not similar revivals to this, more often witnessed?

Verse 42—What are we to do when we are doing to save our neighbors, and to save the world? (This question is to be answered briefly in writing by members of the club.)

Verse 42—In what does the fellowship one with another as much, or as often as other should consist?

Ought Christians to eat together more often?

Verse 43—If the terrible consequences of sin were more frequently pointed out, would sinners still be filled with fear?

Verse 44—What is the community of goods of the Lord's people?

Would having all things in common, be a good system to adopt to-day?

If our brother has not enough, are we under obligation to divide with him?

Verse 46-47—Would the church still be saved daily in every church, if there were fellowship, joy, and gladness, and praising God?

THE THING JESUS WOULD NOT DO.

It is significant of the marvellous vitality of the life of Jesus that His ideal persists age after age as the one supreme and absolute standard of conduct. It is significant of the unquenched divinity of human nature that, despite everything, the hearts of men everywhere, having once felt His touch, turn with wistfulness if not with surrender to the Man of Galilee, and in the rarest crises of life, when choices must be made, face themselves with the query, "Would Jesus do it?" His example is the world's ideal. Even though they may outwardly refuse it and pretend to ignore it, the life of Jesus haunts men as a Presence that will not be put by. It is the spark that disturbs the clod.

An instance is seen in the Press of the United States to-day. Nearly every great daily newspaper on the continent has published reports of the resolution of 1,500 young people of Cleveland to live as they think Jesus would during the current fortnight. And the experiment is watched and discussed as eagerly as any incident of the week. A despatch to The Chicago Tribune of Thursday gives the experience of one young lady, a stenographer, in a large wholesale house. Here is her verdict:—

"You can't live as Jesus would and be an employee of a large Cleveland business house. You can't be done by an employee. The employer himself might carry the morality of Jesus into his business if he chose. The case is not hopeless. But the employer—at least my employer doesn't. And it is suicidal for the employee to attempt it. Christ's morality and business tact clash. An employee insisting upon rigid honesty would be discharged instantly. I don't mean to say my firm is dishonest. Many business men are. But the department managers resort to many evasions of truth in order that they escape unpleasant consequences.

"For instance, a retail store is writing or wiring in for an explanation of why a certain order has not been sent. The reply is that it is the fault of the manufacturers, though such is not the case. Of course, that isn't serious lying. It's a white lie. But it's a lie just the same. No doubt it is necessary in business to tell that kind of lies, but Jesus wouldn't. And when I type the letter I must tell the lie, too. Jesus wouldn't be implicated in the lie. He would refuse to write it. If I did that I would lose my position."

And what does it all mean? It means that Jesus was not only honest and truthful, but manly and brave. He had the courage to be a man. The department manager, with his lie, even his white lie, is a coward. The man who compels transcribers employees to lie to his customers is not a man, but a weakling but a fool. He must pay the price for his folly, not only in his business, but in his moral character, for lies in his business. His employees who lie for him to-day will lie to him to-morrow. He was never more true than when Jesus taught that all the days a Cleveland stenographer who understands His life can say even of the manager, "Behold, I am created in a lie." Slowly but surely it is being proved that Jesus is right. Individual men have proved it in part, and some day society, the business world, the political party, will learn that no life is quite right in any thing that is complicated in a lie.

There was a constant burning in my stomach, I would belch up gas every few minutes and could eat but very little, as the food would quickly ferment and make me sick, and that his influence is increasing with the years?

Verse 23—God clearly sent Jesus with a purpose, but how did the Jews have free will kept, but while the Jews rejected, and slew him, how is it that God raised him from the dead? Is there a mystery that is bringing about, by the death of Jesus, what could not be done in any other way?

OBITUARY.

After a protracted illness from typhoid fever, Miss M. A. Nicol died Jan. 5th, 1909, at the home of her mother, Mrs. C. Nicol, 59 Empress Crescent, Toronto. Miss Nicol was born in Port Dover and entered the High School there at the age of eleven years. She first taught school in Thamesford, after graduating in the Normal Science Course at the Normal School. Then while teaching at Ingersoll, she prepared herself for a first-class certificate, and went to the School of Pedagogy, where she was one of those out of a class of one hundred and fifty, who took first class honors. Subsequently to this she taught for a short period in Smithville and then, about seventeen years ago, accepted a position on the staff of the Napanee Collegiate Institute, as teacher of English and French, a position which she held till the time of her death. Miss Nicol was an arduous worker, tireless in her pursuit of truth, one whose ambition for scholarship never flagged. In addition to her school duties, she became, some years ago, an extra-mural student of Queen's University, and entered on an Arts Course in English and Modern History, leading to the degree of B.A. This course she completed a year ago in a most creditable manner, a part that she had just reached of this goal of her ambition makes her death particularly sad.

Miss Nicol was a woman of unique personal power and influence, a successful teacher of the best type and a devoted Christian, and in all times in the work of the Presbyterian Church to which she belonged. Her many friends unite in sympathy for the bereaved mother and sisters.

Address of the District Master of Lennox.

By the permission of an all wise Providence, we are permitted to meet in annual session to review our work of the past year and to map out the best steps to be taken to farther the progress of our noble order in the future. I now extend you a cordial and fraternal welcome and I trust that our deliberations here to-day may be characterized by a spirit of forbearance and brotherly love. During the past year I have visited all the districts in this County except Strathcona, namely Bay View Lodge on Feb. 24th, Napanee on Nov. 9th, and by the aid of the Brethern of Amherst Island and Sillsville, I organized a new lodge at Millhaven on Nov. 11th, and on Nov. 20th attended a joint meeting of Forest Mills and Robbin at the Orange Hall, Robbin, at which place a very pleasant evening was spent.

Also I found the various officers warmly interested in their work, and I have here to thank the Masters and officers of each primary lodge for the many expressions of cordiality and good will extended to me on the occasion of my visits to their lodges. Brethern, since last we met in District Lodge, I had the pleasure of meeting the Right Worshipful Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East, at the Town of Port Hope, on the 17th and 18th days of last, when about four hundred staunch sons of William had gathered together to deliberate on matters affecting the interest of our great Association. The Order was shown by reports to be progressing all over Eastern Ontario. Before closing, I desire to express my very hearty appreciation of the generous support accorded me by the Brethern of the District. I have endeavored to perform my duty and I feel grateful to those who have assisted me by their advice and by their presence on every necessary occasion. Trusting that our deliberations here to-day may result in great good to us individually and to the advancement of our noble Order.

Fraternally yours,
MICHAEL WAGAR.

MID-WINTER STYLES IN DRESS

"If your are planning to have a much worn gown after the holidays," writes Grace Margaret Gould in Woman's Home Companion for January, "there are some one or two things I want to call your attention to in regard to materials and trimmings. All of new fabrics have more or less effect, whether they are wool or silk. Fine cashmere, which has a soft lustre, is a reliable and a fashionable material. The chiffon broadcloths are still the vogue, and velvet, satin and Henrietta cloth are desirable materials. It is unwise to select, even for a gown to be worn for a short time, a material in a new style of dress, demands light weight fabrics. Much plain tucked net marks the most effective of the gown in color is used, and the machine nets braided are newer than the fines. For a gown which you wish to wear in the evening or for informal social affairs there is nothing more effective than lovely mes crepes, which are so soft and shimmery. Messaline and satin are still being much worn.

"In the Ray of colors, all of the shades of gray are in high favor and are looked upon as useful because of their neutral inconspicuous color. Taupe, which has an undertone of dull green, is extremely fashionable, but the woman of pale complexion should avoid it unless it is brightened up with a touch of some color which she knows is particularly becoming to her. Mole, elephant and London smoke are all good gray shades. Cattawba, dregs of wine, wistaria and amethyst are fashionable shades, and hunter's green is also in demand. In regard to the blues, which are apt to be so universally becoming, there are a number of fashionable shades. There is a tint known as Edison blue, which reminds one of Alice blue, but is darker. The blues with either a tint of green or an undertone of grey are also good style. Not in a long time has black been considered as smart as it is this year.

INOCULATION OF SEED.

The Ontario Agricultural College has in press a bulletin from the Bacteriological Laboratory, giving the results of work on the inoculation of seeds with bacteria to increase the chances of the crop. This work has been in progress since 1905, and has increased in amount each year. It has been known for many years that the nodules or tubercles on the roots of alfalfa, clovers, peas, beans, etc., are inhabited by bacteria that have the power of taking nitrogen from the vast amount in the atmosphere, and storing up this valuable fertilizing element in the plants, thus enriching the soil when these plants are plowed under. In the College laboratory these bacteria are cultivated under artificial conditions, their full power of nitrogen accumulation being encouraged, and these cultures, as they are called, may be applied to the seed to be sown. On old established fields where clovers or alfalfa have been previously grown, the soil is well supplied with these desirable bacteria, and the use of artificial inoculation would be of little benefit. On new ground, however, where the crop to be sown has not been successfully grown before, the inoculation of the seed usually gives the farmer a better stand. During 1908, over 2100 of these cultures were sent to farmers all over the Dominion and to five Foreign countries. The results as reported by the farmers, and compiled in the forthcoming bulletin showed that the inoculation of the seed was beneficial in 65 per cent. of cases tried, while many farmers tried the cultures on old established fields, and as was to be expected the results here showed no increase in the crop from using the cultures.

During the coming spring, the College will send similar cultures for alfalfa, red, white, and alsike clover peas, beans, and sweet peas, the only cost to the farmer being a nominal charge of 25 cents for each culture sufficient for 60 pounds or less of seed. The cultures, of which there is but one size, are sent in bottles with full directions for use. Applications should be addressed to the Bacteriological laboratory, O.A.C., Guelph, and should be sent at once so that the selection may be made in time to supply all demands for each kind and amount of seed required. Applications for seeding should also be stated in application.

It is expected that The Austria will shortly resume negotiations regarding the Lloyd's.

Sophy of Kravonia.

By ANTHONY HOPE

Author of "The Prisoner of Zenda"

Copyright, 1905, Anthony Hope Hawkins

Marie hoped her husband would be returning home soon, and with news. Sophy felt herself she in the fine de Grenelle. She reached the house there a little before 8. The concierge was not in his room. She went upstairs unseen and passed into the drawing room. The inner door leading to the room Lady Meg occupied stood open. Sophy called softly, but there was no answer. She walked toward the door and was about to look into the room, thinking that perhaps Lady Meg was asleep, when she heard herself addressed. The Frenchwoman who acted as their cook had come in and stood now on the threshold, with a puzzled, distressed look on her face.

"I'm sorry, Mlle. Sophie, to tell you, but my lady has gone."

"Gone! Where to?"

"To England, I believe. This morning after you had gone out she ordered everything to be packed. It was done. She paid us here off, bidding me alone stay till orders reached me from the Marquis. Then she went. Only the coachman accompanied her. I think she started for Calais. At least, she is gone."

"She said—said nothing about me?"

"You'll see there's a letter for you on the small table in the window there."

"Oh, yes! Thank you."

"Your room is ready for you tonight."

"I've dined. I shall want nothing. Good night."

Sophy walked over to the little table in the window and for a few moments stood looking at the envelope which lay there, addressed to her in Lady Meg's sprawling hand. The stately room in the Rue de Grenelle seemed filled with a picture which its walls had never seen. Old words re-echoed in Sophy's ears: "If I want you to go I'll put a hundred pound note in an envelope and send it to you, upon which you'll go, and no reasons given! Is it agreed?" As if from a long way off she heard a servant girl answer, "It sounds all right." She saw the old elm trees at Morpingham and heard the wind murmur in their boughs. Pindar chuckled, and Julia Robins' eyes were wet with tears.

"And no reasons given!" It had sounded all right—before five years of intimacy and a life transformed. It sounded different now. Yet the agreement had been made between the strange lady and the eager girl. Nor were reasons hard to find. They stood out brutally plain. Having sent her prophet to the right about, Lady Meg wanted no more of the medium—her most disappointing medium. "They" would not speak through Sophy. Perhaps Lady Meg did not now want them to speak at all.

Sophy tore the envelope right across its breadth and shook out the flimsy paper within. It was folded in four. She did not trouble to open it. Lady Meg was a woman of her word, and here was the hundred pound note of the Bank of England—"Upon which you'll go, and no reasons given!" With a bitter smile she noticed that the note was soiled, the foldings old, the edges black where they were exposed. She had no doubt that all these years Lady Meg had carried it about, so as to be ready for the literal fulfilment of her bond.

"Upon which," said Sophy, "I go."

The bitter smile lasted perhaps a minute more, then the girl flung herself into a chair in a fit of tears as bitter. She had served—or failed to serve—Lady Meg's real purpose, and she was flung aside. Very likely she had grown hateful—she, the witness of insane whims now past and out of date. The dismissal might not be unnatural; but, for all their bargain, the manner was inhuman. They had lived and eaten and drunk together for so long. Had there been no touch of affection, no softening of the heart? It seemed not—it seemed not. Sophy wept and wondered. "Oh, if that I had never left you, Julia!" she cries in her letter, and no doubt cried now, for Julia had gone. But the bitterness for Lady Meg had given her only what one spares for a dog—a kind word before he is banished, a friendly lament at parting!

Suddenly through the window came a boy's shrill voice, "Vive la guerre!"

Sophy sprang to her feet, caught up the dirty note and thrust it inside her glove. Without delay, seeming without hesitation, she left the house, passed swiftly along the street and made for the Pont Royal. She was bound for the other bank and for London. Had there been no touch of affection, no softening of the heart? It seemed not—it seemed not. Sophy wept and wondered. "Oh, if that I had never left you, Julia!" she cries in her letter, and no doubt cried now, for Julia had gone. But the bitterness for Lady Meg had given her only what one spares for a dog—a kind word before he is banished, a friendly lament at parting!

BRYCE MAGEE DROWNED AT THE PINES.

A sad accident happened on Hay Bay, near the home of Mr. Andrew Magee, on Thursday afternoon, Jan. 7th, 1909, which resulted in the death by drowning, of Bryce Alton Magee, the eldest child of Mr. Joseph Magee, age 9 years past. Skating was good, and the children of the neighborhood had been enjoying a good pasttime during the forenoon and little Bryce, with his parents consent, started out to enjoy his afternoon. He had placed on his skates and apparently directed his course over a dangerous bar where he broke in; his screams were heard by his uncle, who hastened with a boat to the rescue, only to find that the poor little fellow had sunk to a watery death. The body was straightway recovered and born in sadness to his home, where a broken hearted mother and father, who had received the intimation earlier, received all that was left of their son, so active in life but an hour and a half before. This death has cast a gloom over the entire neighborhood, who in very large numbers showed their sympathy in every possible way. The funeral was conducted by the pastor, Rev. S. Rose, on Sunday, Saturday, 9th, taking for his text, "Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in Heaven that one of these little ones should perish." Little Bryce had been trained in a religious manner, was a regular and an attentive member of the Sunday School, where in the summer on Decision Day, he with many others decided for Christ. It is no vain thing to serve the Lord. Mr. and Mrs. Magee mourn in Heaven's love, but not without hope, they have the sympathy and prayers of the entire community and many beside.

ODESSA.

On Wednesday evening last a Kingston Oddfellow delegation, consisting of J. Pollie, D.D.G.M. and Past Grands R. Meek, R. Sloan, W. Patterson and A. W. Cathcart, visited Odessa Lodge No. 361, I.O.O.F., whose officers were installed by J. Pollie, viz., W. Forsyth, W. Dougherty, J. Tumath, J. H. Gardiner, W. C. Snider, R. Cairns, E. S. Parrott, J. Clute, G. Bell, Horace Denyes, Darius Smith, A. P. S. Donaldson, D. Boice, S. A. Denyes, S. J. Sproule, W. Atkinson. After the installation an open meeting was held at which ladies were present. A programme was given in which some of the Kingstonians speechified considerably, especially a man whose name belied his speech, one Meek. Refreshments were served, to which all did ample justice.

On Saturday evening the skating rink was opened to the public, but owing to the rain not as many took part as might if the night had been fine.

On Tuesday evening a carnival was given. The band played several pieces, and the ice was in very good condition. Quite a number were present. A few came in fancy costumes. The prizes were given to Miss Edith Hilliet as nun, and Mr. Switzer, Wilton. Next Tuesday evening, weather permitting, another carnival will be given, to which no doubt many more will attend.

Council met on Monday in full force.

The Free Methodists held a three days' meeting in their church here, with some ten or twelve ministers in attendance. The house was packed to the doors and many could not gain admittance on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

On Tuesday evening the Chosen Friends met in Bond's Hall, and had a gay time. Mr. Edwards, of Cataraqui, was the main speaker, and he is quite an able one, we know. Refreshments came in order before closing.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smith entertained the choir right royally, on Tuesday evening. These are very pleasant gatherings and profitable too. Solos, duets, and refreshments with social chats filled up the hours all too quickly.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Timmerman spent a pleasant evening at Mr. George Hamm's.

Mrs. R. Lee went to Napanee for a week or two.

Mrs. L. Sharpe spent a day with her daughter, Mrs. M. McDonald, recently.

One of our druggists, Mr. McDonald, purposes travelling for Polson, Kingston, selling oils. We miss him on the streets surely.

ENTERPRISE.

It is with feelings of deep sorrow that we have to chronicle the death of an old and esteemed friend and a devoted mother and wife, who passed away on Dec. 23d, in the person of Mrs. Chas. Lockwood. Deceased had been sick only about two weeks from paralytic stroke. The funeral on Christmas day was largely attended. A sorrowing husband besides three daughters, Mrs. Nelson Bell, Mrs. Thos. Jackson and Mrs. Martin H. Switzer, and one son, Rockwell, are left to mourn their great loss. Something that makes it more sorrowful is that on Dec. 24th her only son Rockwell was married to Miss Myrtle Davis, of Roblin, thus making a death and wedding within two days. Nevertheless we wish Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood a long and happy journey through life.—Rev. J. H. White is conducting a series of revival services at present. Miss Alice Williams, Napanee, is spending a few days the guest of Miss Hattie Wagar.—Mr. George M. Davey has purchased the farm adjoining his own lately owned by Mr. Cyrus Wagar.—A visitor at C. W. Keech's.—It's a girl.—The many friends of Wm. A. Paul, nee Miss Price, extend their heartiest congratulations, and wish them a long and prosperous life.—The school is now under the able management of Mr. A. E. Macdonald and Miss A. Chaney.

PETERBORO' BONSPIEL.

A rink composed of Messrs. J. S. Ham, skip; R. C. H. Travers, C. I. Madill and H. Daly left on Monday to take part in the bonspiel at Peterboro'. On Tuesday they won a game and on Wednesday afternoon were defeated by four points by Mr. Fiselle. On Thursday morning they played a consolation game and won. They also played again last evening, but no report of the last game had been received before going to press.

CAMDEN EAST.

Sleighing is fine and the people in general are taking advantage of it.—John Davison started on Monday, and Percy Hysted on Tuesday for Winnipeg. Come again, boys.—My heart felt sad the other morning when I noticed crape on the door of one of our citizens. Thought that home had trouble enough before. But how often we find behind the clouds there is sunshine. Instead of mourning there came rejoicing, for on the evening of the 11th of January Mr. James Kelly, of this place and Mrs. Snyder, of Harrowsmith, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, by Rev. Mr. Sexsmith, of Newburgh. Congratulations. That seemed too good for our boys. They organized a brigade and followed the newly married couple to the home of Mr. Curl, nephew of the bride, and had a jolly good time. Money they were after, but got none, but like the school boy if at first you don't succeed, try again. Next night at their home the boys turned out again as large as life and more in numbers. This time they accomplished their task, got the wherewithal and came home rejoicing.—The sale of the Gordanier property came off on Tuesday, 12th January. Mr. O'Hara purchased the house and barn for $800, and James Skinner bought the other two for $155.—Mrs. Bicknell and son are still on the sick list.—Mrs. J. Almon Gordanier was calling on friends on Wednesday last.

It is sufficient for some people that they drink anything called tea. Others prefer a standard brand like "Salada," which has a reputation for being good. The latter get more enjoyment out of life. In buying tea for the satisfaction you expect to get from its use, it will pay to purchase "Salada." Avoid anything "just as good." Imitations are invariably of poor quality.

CENTREVILLE.

At the close of the Bible Class last Wednesday evening, Rev. White called Miss Lochhead to the front, and Miss M. Husband read the following address, Mrs. Gerow presenting the gift, a sum of money. Miss Lochhead expressed her thanks in a few well chosen words, dwelling on the pleasure it had given her to be able to serve the church as organist.

Centreville, Jan. 5th, 1909.

Dear Miss Lochhead.—We, the members of Centreville Methodist church desire this evening to show in some tangible way our appreciation of your painstaking services as organist of our church.

For four years you have filled this responsible position to the perfect satisfaction of all. We are confident you have learned one of life's noble lessons, "the beauty of service for others" for although encumbered by numerous home duties you have never hesitated to assist us in any good work. Knowing the uplifting power of music and the important part it plays as a means of worshipping God, we find it impossible to express in mere words what your willingness, promptness and patience have done to elevate our religious services.

We all sympathized with you in your bereavement, and the fear at that time that other duties would force you to resign, only served to show more fully the love and esteem in which you are held.

Kindly accept this gift with our love and let it form one of the pleasant remembrances of your noble work in our behalf.

In conclusion we all join in wishing you a happy New Year, hoping that you may be long spared to continue your work among us, and praying that God's richest blessing may be yours, crowning your life with joy and radiance from above.

Signed on behalf of C. M. church.

MRS. F. C. GEROW,
MISS L. KELLY.

The Pride of Ontario

Floriculture, in common with other industries, has made greater progress throughout our country than the ordinary reader has any conception of. Growers originally using dug-outs, or forcing pits, and in some cases a lean-to, have branched out by degrees into modern houses, with high glass flowers as their products, to such an extent that one firm, Dales, at Brampton, have now the finest and most modern greenhouse plant in the world.

Few Canadians are aware that right in the heart of Ontario is this mammoth range of glass, amounting to over 800,000 square feet, covering sixteen acres of ground, growing cut flowers in quantities that would be considered an exaggeration by those not acquainted with the marvelous growth of this industry.

The business at Brampton was founded by the late Henry Dale just twenty-seven years ago, one small rose bush being the beginning, and a little house about 15x24, being the extent of the conservatories. Here, in death in 1900 there had been an expansion into 150,000 sq. feet of glass, covering about three acres. Since that time the business has been carried on by T. W. Duncan as Managing Executor, and there has been the wonderful increase of nearly 600 per cent., and the conservatories have become the show place of Canada. The office reveals also visitors from most parts of the civilized world.

Just imagine stepping out of cold air 10 or 20 degrees below zero, and being able to wander along fifteen miles of walk, with 120,000 Carnations, 100,000 Roses, 250,000 Carnation plants, and 125,000 Rose plants in bloom, with a fragrance as sweet as the Garden of Eden. Then step from these genial surroundings to snowdrifts in the open, fresh from South America and the Eastern Indies. Here you will see the Chamelion, Lizards, and many of the plants being very rare, and worth a great deal of money. In growing Violets it will be found that these Easter Lilies from Japan, Hyacinths and Tulips from Holland, and Violets from France, and in fact special bulbs, the importation of which is valued at two millions of which are grown from these bulbs that are imported for Canada.

To care for all this stock, the business is enormous, nearly 7,000 refined and skilled workers are employed, about 120 in a room being employed, with a sauce bill of $1,000.00 per week.

The growth of an industry of this description speaks much for the enterprise, and the financial stability of the modern Canadian. Some of our readers may wonder what can become of so much bloom, amounting to, at least two million flowers in a year. The answer is simple, as such that these goods are disposed right and left from coast to coast, a specialty trade from Prince Edward Island on the East, and Vancouver on the West, being led by this unassuming firm, who are fast becoming large as the most largest, and have achieved a reputation for quality that makes their stock in demand in the markets of the United States, as well as Canada. The well known Brown's Bay Estate are in demand in New York, Buffalo, Rochester, Philadelphia, and other large cities, but the management of the Dale Estate have not yet their efforts, along Canadian Pacific Lines, have been quite successful. Travellers know the main lines of the Grand Trunk, and C. P. R., but few wander what is keeping the train at the station a longer than at the ordinary stop. It is this, but the man who steps off the train and sees a hundred boxes of flowers piled into the express car, as fast as the men can handle them, will be amazed at such quantities of flowers, many consigned into this country.

In Napanee the agent for this firm is Mr. Fred Hooper, of The Medical Hall, who is handling large quantities of the Dale Flowers in every form.

Napanee Poultry Show.

The Poultry Show at the Town Hall last week under the auspices of The Napanee Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association was a grand success. Notwithstanding the fact that a poultry show was held at Peterboro' on the same date, the quality of birds shown here was better than that of a year ago. The attendance was an average one. The officers of the Association are to be congratulated on the success attending their efforts.

The business at Brampton was founded by the late Henry Dale just twenty-seven years ago, one small rose bush being the beginning, and a little house about 15x24, being the extent of the conservatories. Here, in death in 1900 there had been an expansion into 150,000 sq. feet of glass, covering about three acres. Since that time the business has been carried on by T. W. Duncan as Managing Executor, and there has been the wonderful increase of nearly 600 per cent., and the conservatories have become the show place of Canada. The office reveals also visitors from most parts of the civilized world.

Just imagine stepping out of cold air 10 or 20 degrees below zero, and being able to wander along fifteen miles of walk, with 120,000 Carnations, 100,000 Roses, 250,000 Carnation plants, and 125,000 Rose plants in bloom, with a fragrance as sweet as the Garden of Eden. Then step from these genial surroundings to snowdrifts in the open, fresh from South America and the Eastern Indies. Here you will see the Chamelion, Lizards, and many of the plants being very rare, and worth a great deal of money. In growing Violets it will be found that these Easter Lilies from Japan, Hyacinths and Tulips from Holland, and Violets from France, and in fact special bulbs, the importation of which is valued at two millions of which are grown from these bulbs that are imported for Canada.

To care for all this stock, the business is enormous, nearly 7,000 refined and skilled workers are employed, about 120 in a room being employed, with a sauce bill of $1,000.00 per week.

A SCIENTIFIC WONDER.

THE SECRET OF A FAMOUS HEALING BALM.

The discovery of a secret that has lain hidden in the depths of centuries is an event full of fascinating interest, and the story of Zam Buk, the world-famed herbal balm and scientific skin healer, is one of such absorbing interest that it will always enlist attention. Zam-Buk is the virtual descendant of those wonderful and mysterious herbal balms by the use of which the manly athletes of Ancient Greece and the gallant gladiators of Rome ensured the healthiness and good healing of their skin.

Many are the attempts that were made to produce a perfect balm for the skin, but only in Zam-Buk has the ideal been realized. Since its discovery Zam-Buk has been welcomed to mansion and cottage, and the people of two hemispheres realized that they have been placed in possession of an absolutely unique cure for skin ailments.

The reasons for this triumph of science are simple and free. Taking a lesson from the ancients, the proprietors of Zam-Buk first of all wisely decided that the ideal balm must be purely herbal and contain none of the slightest trace of rancid animal fat, or coarse mineral. Thus Zam-Buk is made entirely from pure and rare essences obtained from certain rare medicinal herbs. These juices and extracts are then imported and refined by ingenious scientific processes, and then so skilfully blended in the natural preparation for discovery skin diseases is secured.

Zam-Buk has an affinity for the human skin such as no ordinary ointment can possibly possess. Besides soothing pain and relieving irritation, it possesses unique antiseptic and germicidal qualities which virtually chase disease germs out of their hiding-places in the skin tissues, at the same time it purifies the pores, and also regulates the natural functions of the skin in a thorough manner.

Zam-Buk acts in a perfect manner upon all forms of always having found some or at once a work an ever-ready and reliable friend in it. For cuts, burns, scalds, bruises, leaves, abrasions, sores, etc., Zam-Buk is without equal for eczema, ulcers, piles, bad leg, ringworm, scalp eczema, festering sores, sprains, stiff joints, wounds of all kinds, bad face sores, chafing, chapped hands, cold sores, frost-bites, sore feet, diseased ankles, itch, all itching, irritation, and inflammation.

Zam-Buk is a daily need in every household and is sold by all druggists and stores at fifty cents a box. Refuse harmful and dangerous substitutes sometimes "pushed" as being "just as good."

ST. OLA.

The temperance people in this section of the country are rejoicing over the three victories gained in the municipalities of Limerick, Tudor and Cashel and Wallaston. The majorities were 56 and 107 respectively. — The four Christmas entertainments held on the St. Ola mission realized $325.00 in all was realized.—Mrs. Wm. McLennan is visiting in Madoc this week.—Another sad and distressing and fatal accident occurred near Gilmour on Wednesday evening of last week about half past 5. Pearl Walker, a little girl, about two years old and a half old, was so badly burned as the result of her clothes catching fire that she died the following day. The three children of the family were left alone, in the house while the mother went to the barn to do the milking. The oldest, a little boy aged about four years, came running to the barn and told his mother that his little sister was on fire. The mother on getting near the house met the little girl, all her except a little piece of sleeve of her dress. Dr. Gardiner, of Harrowsmith, was called, but could do nothing. The little girl suffered intensely until death came to her relief. The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon at the Cashel Methodist church, and was very largely attended. — The similar accidents occurring within two months in the same community has cast a cloud over the entire mission. There was no municipal election, hope this year the Council going in by acclamation. McGillvary Harvest spent the holidays with his parents at Bancroft. Morton Baker is spending a few weeks at home. Henry Mutton has recovered from his recent illness, and is able to be around again. Charles and Kenneth McLean, who have been at the west with the former for two years and the latter for four years, are spending a few months with their parents in the village.—Sheriff Clark and Perry Clark spent the holidays with their parents. The latter is attending Campbellford and the latter Peterboro' High School.

Our young people are contemplating giving them a linen shower.—Messrs. Clayton Richardson and Mrs. Kay attach left for Belleville to attend Business College. We wish them success. A number from here are attending the revival in the Holiness Movement church at Roblin.—Mr. Rev. G. McCaughil is conducting special services at Forest Mill.—Mr. Frank Hughes is spending a few days in Marlbank.—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Lewis and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Storr and family at Chas. Take Notice

Parties having logs to saw would do well to consider that Breeze Bros. are prepared to saw lumber at $2.00 per 1000 for soft, and $3.00 for hard timber. In about two weeks we will have in operation a Band Log Saw, which will produce about one-seventh more lumber to the log. Our Band Shingle machine produces one and one half thousand shingles to the cord more than the ordinary circular saw. It has proven a perfect success. The public are invited to bring their logs and shingle bolts and we warrant good satisfaction.

AN ARGUMENT IN FAVOR OF THE AUTOMOBILE SKATE.

Figure it out this way: Every slide of a skate takes you forward something over four feet while the other skate is lifting and at rest above the ice. Suppose a person goes ten miles around a rink when skating on a rink—which distance is probably as near correct as could be made—he has covered 2,500 feet and lifted either one skate or the other 13,750 times. We say that the automobile skate is, on the lowest figure, six inches lighter than any other make. Figuring it out on that basis, that he has actually lifted 4,688 lbs. less than he would have done using any other skates. M. S. MADOLE. 3a

MATRIMONIAL.

A quiet wedding took place on Wednesday, January 6th, at the Methodist parsonage, Conway, when Carrie E., daughter of Mr. Wm. Brandon, Napanee, and Mr. Wm. G. Sebell, of Kelowna, B.C., were united in marriage by the Rev. T. B. Boyce, B.D. The bride, who was attended by Miss Edna Denison, of Napanee, looked very pretty in her travelling suit of navy blue with hat to match. Mr. Jas. Brandon, brother of the bride, supported the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Sebell left on the 6.40 train for Clar. N.Y., the home of the groom's mother. Miss Brandon was one of Richmond's most popular young ladies, while Mr. Sebell, son of the late Jno. H. Sebell, was up to the time of his removal to British Columbia, one of the popular young men of Morven. Their many friends unite in wishing them many years of wedded happiness.

NEWBURGH.

The re-opening services of the Presbyterian church on Sunday last were attended with very marked success. This church has been so thoroughly renovated throughout as to present the appearance of an entirely new building. Walls and ceiling have been beautifully tinted and grained. New windows of colored glass add greatly to the appearance of the church both inside and out. At the services on Sunday, Rev. Dr. McTavish, of Cooke's church, Kingston, occupied the pulpit, and preached two very instructive sermons to large audiences, the church being crowded to its utmost capacity in the evening, the Methodist service being withdrawn. In the morning Dr. McTavish based on Psalm 26: 8, a very telling discourse on the value of the church. Above all other institutions we should love the church. It is in the truest sense the home of the believer; an oasis in the desert; soul's delight. Many hallowed associations cluster about it. Its influence for good in the community is incalculable. Through its influence lawlessness is repressed. A community without a church would draw men of low lowest type and the title to any town without the church would not be worth the paper it was written on. It costs much less to keep up the church than it would not to keep it up. Police may repress lawlessness, but they do not build up righteousness. Again we should love the church because it is so dear to the heart of God himself. What we do through or in the church will last forever, and is therefore of infinite value.

Our love for the church can be shown in various ways. Here the preacher dwelt upon fidelity in attendance on the means of grace. That insidious disease, nicrbus sabbaticus, is all too prevalent, and should be vigorously combatted. Mr. Gladstone never permitted anything to keep him from the Sabbath service and it is told of Dr. Johnson that he never passed a church without taking off his hat. We ought also to make the very most possible of the church service by prayerful preparation and expectant waiting upon God. Then we should exercise criticism for ourselves and seeking to find only good in the opportunities of the ministry of the word.

At the evening service Dr. McTavish made a powerful presentation of the missionary enterprise of the Christian as it affects the church at home, speaking from 2 Cor. 9: 6. The religion of Jesus Christ is essentially missionary in its character. Other religions are ethnic in their character, but Christianity is equally well adapted to all nations and peoples. The text teaches very forcibly the reflex influence for good of missions upon the home church. In clear and forcible exposition, reinforced by ample illustration, the preacher showed that even from a commercial standpoint mission work was profitable in developing trade, that it stimulates faith and hope and a wider outlook and that it wonderfully enriches the church in heroic endevaor as manifested in the lives of the noble heroes of the mission field.

Dr. McTavish is a speaker of unusual vigor and convincing power, and his messages will not soon be forgotten. Revs. M. E. Sexsmith and J. H. Chant assisted in the evening service. The choir of the church was ably assisted by Mr. P. D. Shorey, and under his leadership did splendid service both on Sunday and at the lecture on Monday night, when Rev. J. R. Conn, M.A., Napanee, told the story of Edison and his inventions to an audience, which well-nigh filled the church. The chair was occupied by Mr. T. A. Dunwoody, who as usual, on such occasions was an admirable presiding officer. The lecture itself was a real treat. The story of Edison from his boyhood to his latest achievement in the realm of science, was told with a wealth of illustration and anecdote and in a delightfully pleasant style, which held the very close attention of young and old. It was a wonderful story of a wonderful man wonderfully well told. The choir rendered two anthems and the male quartette of the Methodist choir also contributed a selection.

Miss Effie Welbanks left last week to assume the principalship of the Public School at Port Colborne, Ont.

On Thursday evening of last week the Sabbath School of St. John's church held their annual at home, in Finkle's Hall. After a bountiful supper there was a play-time for the children, after which a programme was rendered, in which the pupils of the school were assisted by Rev. and Mrs. Spencer and Mrs. C. W. Finkle. The former presided, and the programme was most interesting and creditable.

Mrs. Wm. Sutton has returned from a visit with her sister, Mrs. D. A. Valleau, of Oshawa, and at Toronto.

The skating rink, under the management of Messrs. J. Madden and H. Shorts, opened on Monday night. The High School Literary Society hold a meeting on Friday afternoon this week, at 3 o'clock.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Smith was on Wednesday afternoon of this week, the scene of the marriage of his daughter, Miss Ella M., to Mr. Reginald J. Perry, of Winnipeg, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Perry, of Camden East. The knot was tied by Rev. M. E. Sexsmith, the bridal couple standing unattended under an evergreen arch. Only the immediate relatives of the couple were present, with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas, of Napanee, the latter playing the wedding march on the entrance of the bride into the room. At four o'clock a sumptuous wedding supper was served, after which the bride and groom left for Tweed for a few days. About the 1st of February they will leave for Winnipeg, where Mr. Perry is engaged in the real estate business. The bride is one of Newburgh's very estimable young ladies, deservedly popular among her many friends, whose best wishes follow her to her new home.

Miss Beryl Johnson, of Moscow, spent the week end with her sister, Marie, at Mr. H. J. Wood's.

Geo. M. Walker opened his new grocery and meat stall this week. Up-to-date in every appointment this combination of stores is one of the neatest and finest establishments of the kind in this part of the country. Mr. Walker has installed a new engine, putting scale, the most perfect instrument of the kind ever seen here. A lighting plant is also installed.

A missionary meeting will be held in St. John's church next Tuesday evening, by Rev. Rural Dean Dibb and Rev. W. Hilyard Smith.

In the beautiful home of Mr. V. ONTARIO ARCHIVES

A Stubborn Fact

When we opened our Napanee branch May 1st, 1907, and started selling at reasonable fair cash prices, we found that an illegal combination to rob the public had existed in Napanee for several years.

Among the many other things we read on which cost 15c for Canadian and 14c for American, selling for 20c and 25c.

We sold at 15c and 12c four regular price at our other branches, and refused to join the combine.

Napanee grocers and oil dealers agreed—if they would sell below cost we would have to join the combine to get profits.

They tried it and retailed oil at 10c, reading them 15c this forced us to advertise the combine and its real object and methods, according to our agreement, communications with their delegate.

Many other plans have been tried and put out with the same object, thinking we would find the combined opposition too strong and quit, but finding to raise prices, or leave the town as they could realize former prices and profits.

We will never do either as long as the trust continues running Chain Stores.

Recent dishonest, false and unfair methods of some of our competitors accounts for their attempts to silence them.

DISTRICT ORANGE LODGE OF ADDINGTON.

The annual meeting of the Loyal Orange District Lodge of Addington met at Centreville, on January 12th, 1909.

After the opening ceremonies of the Lodge had opened for business the District Master delivered his annual address:

To the Officers and Members of Loyal Orange District Lodge of Addington.

Dear Brethren,—Another year has rolled away, and through the mercy of God we are permitted again to meet in District Lodge.

Fraternally, brethren, I greet you once more, and trust that the meeting some of our members have passed away, and have, we trust, safely entered into the harbor of eternal rest. Now to those of us who are favored with the blessings of life and health, I would ask that we be not forgetful of the obligations that are upon us as Orangemen, hoping we will do our part faithfully and well in handing down to our children the blessings of civil and religious liberty that we delivered to us.

I am pleased to see some new faces amongst the delegates seen present.

We have reason to congratulate ourselves that the Loyal Orange Association during the past year has made rapid advancement through our beloved Dominion. While Progress may not have been great in this district as we would like to see it, still we can boast of progress, has been made.

We hear it said almost daily that the day of sentiment is passed, but I say there is a day of duties and sentiment have a place in the day of sentiment. I would like to see more sentiment in the Orange order that marshalled the men of Derry and the Boyne together when duty called them to the front, the greed of the dollars and cents. What would this world to-day but for sentiment? Where would the Christian world have what has been truly expressed many times, a solid and united front to meet the foe, but for sentiment with the man who can't see anything unless it has a dollar mark on it. Brethren, I say that we cannot attend lodge meetings because there is nothing in it for him or her, and many others say that the world should have but very little use for it. I want to say that I hope the day will never come when we shall be called upon to do what our forefathers had to do. Nevertheless, there is an awful call out at the present time, unless it is soon checked, will seriously threaten but duty as to the preservation of our rights. Did space allow I would like to dwell on the growing power religious liberty. In the near east to think it has, if not gone out.

I regret very much the fact that I have not been able to visit the different lodges during the past year as I would have liked to have done. I enjoyed the Royal Scarlet Chapter at Enterprise, Croydon during the year, and thirteen members have been initiated to the mysteries of a Scarlet Knight Companion.

And now in conclusion, I return to you all my sincere thanks for the honor you have conferred upon me. I trust that the work of the present session may be done in harmony, and that we may fully illustrate by our pleasant to be brethren to the world by our principles.

A BRAIDING TIP

Don't hurry and do think. If you do not use your brain you will not be able to braid properly. Keep your mind on your pattern and on its careful development.

Remember that it pays to some extent, a work of art; anything well designed and thoroughly executed by hand is a work of art, fancy work, etc.

In braiding, sew in the stitches so that the needle sticks back into almost the same hole as that through which it has been pulled, almost concealing the sewing sew closely, so the braid does not "work" ble. Use your mind at every turn of the braid, always remembering to make sharp corners if they are so designed, never forgetting to keep the shape of the long curves, and above all, not losing sight of the spirit of the pattern. In selecting the braid have a harmony as to its pliability, and don't take a match that doesn't match.

If you use Ales, Wines or Liquor, why not get the best by buying them from Jas. Fitzpatrick, John street. All the best brands in Foreign and Domestic goods, at prices that are right. Phone 102.

International Newspaper Bible Study Club

GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS, BIBLES, BOOKS.

Persons may join the Club at any time during the year, but most, of course, answer the 52 questions hereinafter explained, to qualify for the prizes. It is, however, desirable that the questions be answered as the lessons are studied.

The International Newspaper Bible Study Club is for the purpose of promoting, in an unbiased way among the masses, a wider study of the Bible, the basal truths of Christianity, and the problems which enter into every man's life. It is composed of all those who join a Local Club, and take up the simple course herein outlined, barring only sectarian dogmas. We have the sympathetic co-operation of the latter, but it is not considered fair to have them compete for the prizes. Sunday School teachers, Bible class scholars, and church-goers generally, may belong to this Newspaper Club, also non-churchgoers, of all shades of opinion. All such who have not joined a Local are invited to do so and compete for the prizes.

The Bee has secured the right to publish the International Sunday School Lesson questions by Rev. Dr. Lisscott, which have aroused so much interest elsewhere, and which will appear weekly. One of these questions each week is to be answered in writing, and upon these answers the prizes are to be awarded.

The Bee is authorized to form a Local Newspaper Bible Study Club for its readers, and offers the following prizes to the clubs on the conditions, that everything herein promised shall be carried out and fulfilled:

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

1. Each contestant, or his or her family, must be a subscriber to this paper during the continuance of the contest, in order to qualify for the awards. The International Newspaper Bible Study Club and this Local Club.

2. Each contestant in this Local Club must answer each of the questions given for 52 consecutive weeks, commencing for Sunday, August 23d, 1908, and the answers must all be in the possession of this paper within six weeks of the close of the contest, which allows two weeks grace after the last day of the contest.

3. Each question must be answered separately and the paper written on one side only. No answer must exceed two hundred words in length and may be less. It will be a convenience if students will write their answers on letter paper, about 7½ inches by 11 inches.

4. Each answer must have the name and address of the writer at the bottom of the answer, so it can be identified, given a number, registered and then the name cut off before the examiner sees it, if number only.

5. Students should be careful to understand the question before answering. To do this, the Bible should be read and re-read especially the verse, or verses, upon which the question is based.

6. The answers from this Local Club must be forwarded to this office and will be collated at the close of the contest, and forwarded to headquarters for further examination by competent examiners. The prizes will be awarded as follows:

Fifth Series. A duplicate gold, an enamel and gold medal to each of the five most proficient students in the Bible Study Club, and prizes which may be selected from the following list. Duplicate prizes will be given out from this.

THE PRIZES.

The Lord Was Healed Acts iii. 1-16. Golden Text, Psalm ciii. 3. Who forgiveth all thy sins; who healeth all thy diseases.

Verse 1. Are two distinct persons referred to in this verse?

Is the only one in the Christian Bible who is known to have been personally converted?

Verse 2. Was it customary for the lame to be carried to the door of the temple to beg from those going in?

Verse 3. Was it an advantage or a disadvantage to the lame and John and Peter to look upon them?

Verse 4. Was advantage to the lame man that Peter and John looked upon him?

Would a church do better work if it did not look upon those in the slums, but gave them the things they needed most?

Need the lack of money in itself ever prevent one man from doing the work for which God has appointed him to do?

If we invoke the name of Jesus in the work in which we are engaged, will we not feel will it have upon the accomplishment of our work?

Verse 6. By what power was this lame man healed?

What reason is there for the belief that the power of God personally works in connection with human effort?

Verse 8. Would it be well if more were made more outward demonstrations, as by leaping and praising God, than they usually do?

Is there any merit in outward enthusiasm if we have inward loyalty to God?

Verse 12. Is it wise for people to make heroes out of preachers, or the fulfillment of any of God's promises?

Verse 14. Was Jesus ever guilty of having known better, is he as guilty as if he knew better?

Verses 19-26. What is our only reasonable ground of salvation?

La Grippe's Victims

Left Weak, Miserable and a Prey to Disease in Many Forms.

La Grippe starts with a sneeze—and ends with a complication of troubles. It lays the strong man on his back; it tortures him with fevers and chills, headaches and backaches. It leaves him a prey to pneumonia, bronchitis, consumption and other deadly diseases. You can avoid La Grippe entirely by keeping your blood rich and red by the occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. If you have not done this, and the disease lays you low, you can banish all its evil after effects with this same great blood-building, nerve restoring medicine. Here is proof of the wonderful power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills over disease.

Mr. P. E. Paulin, Collector of Customs at Caraquet, N.B., says:—"In the winter of 1907 I had a very severe attack of la grippe, which broke me down entirely. I had to take to bed for several weeks. During that time I employed a doctor, but without benefit, for I seemed to be getting worse and worse. I did not sleep—suffered from night sweats, and had no appetite. I was really a physical wreck. On the recommendation of a friend I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for general debility with great benefit so I decided to try them. I sent for half a dozen boxes and began to use them at once. When taking the second box I began to feel quite a change in my condition. I was able to walk about the house and my appetite was improving. From that on I gained strength every day, and before the six boxes were done I was able to return to the office and attend to my work. Now I enjoy the best of health, and although 63 years old, I am feeling quite young. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a splendid medicine for troubles of this kind."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a blood making, nerve restoring tonic. In this way they cure anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, and partial paralysis. They are the best medicine in the world for the ailments of girlhood and womanhood. Sold by medicine dealers, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GRAND OPENING.

On Friday evening the new Bisco Opera House was opened by the Imperial Opera Co., presenting the play Toy, which was witnessed by about 800 people. The house has just been completed and is a great credit to the town and owner. The hall is seven feet wider than the old one, with walls and ceiling veneled with metallic, decorated in three shades of green. The stage is much larger and the scenery instead of being folded up as before is hoisted from the stage. The seat is furnished by a new steam heating furnace, which makes a fine even heat.

Sun Toy, the Chinese-English Musical Comedy was the first play ever witnessed in Napanee. Miss Anne Caine Roxane, the prima donna, played the part of Sun Toy, and won great favor. Her voice is beautifully clear and sweet and her different numbers were warmly encored. Besides being a vocalist, she has an attractive presence and is a gifted and appealing actress.

Mr. Sam Collins filled the principal comedy role as Li Li and kept the audience in constant laughter.

Other members of the cast, who distinguished themselves by their splendid characterizations were Harvey Girard, as Captain Bobbs; W. L. Dodge, as Sir Binge Bigston, British Consul at Pinka Pong; Hallen Mostyn, as Yen How, a mandarin and Miss Lahey, Dorcas Dudley, as Poppy's maid. The six little wives of the mandarin were cute and winning. Practically every song in the score is good and every musical number met with considerable favor. The stage settings were very appropriate and corresponded to the excellent and satisfactory work of the company. We hope Mr. Bisco will introduce many more such shows as to Napanee "not China."

POLEY ROACH

An event which caused unusual interest took place at the home of Mrs. Thomas Roach, Napanee Road on Monday, the 11th inst., when her youngest daughter, Katherine was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Owen Poley, of Hawley. The ceremony, which took place at 6 o'clock in St. Patrick's church, Napanee, was performed by Rev. Father O'Connor, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives. Promptly at 6 o'clock the bridal party entered the sacred edifice, the bride looking exceedingly pretty in a beautiful creation of cream crepe de chene richly trimmed with real Irish lace and satin ribbon.

DARNING CARPETS.

Rugs and carpets can be darned to manifest advantage.

Lay a bit of stout woollen cloth upon the wrong side of a rug, fasten down the frayed edge with small stitches here and there, then darn thickly back and forth, using the large size embroidery cotton in either wool, silk or flax of a harmonious color.

Darn the thread-bare spots in the carpet on the floor with ravellings in a fine cure-ended upholsterer's needle. If there are any other moth-eaten spots, match the colors as nearly as possible in fine soft wool, cut into short lengths and sew the tufts into the carpet with fine twist or flax, drawing the stitches so tight that the wool stands up on either side.

When the spot is well covered with the tufting trim it level with very sharp shears.

REV. JACOB CLANCY COMES TO JACKSON.

Visits County House, Where he Sings and Preaches to Large Company.

The Jackson Citizen Press.

Rev. Jacob Clancy, of Albion, formerly of Jackson, has written an account of a visit he paid Sunday to the county house, where he sang and preached to the inmates and visitors from the surrounding country. He says:

"I was recently invited to spend a Sunday at the Jackson county house to sing and preach. When the time came, I was on hand in Jackson and was driven to the place by Mrs. Tuttle, a company of Jackson friends joining in the trip.

"Mrs. Tuttle is held in high esteem by the matron and inmates of the home, because of her many acts of kindness. She has sent many papers and magazines to these people, and they have appreciated them.

"The drive takes one through four miles of a beautiful farming country. We were royally welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Barlow and family, mixed multitude had gathered, including old men, old women, some with crutches, a number totally blind and a few without natural reasoning faculties. Many were remarkably intelligent—all looked as if they had seen better days. Not a few people had come from the surrounding country.

"A young lady from the city presided at the organ and the singing was really inspiring. I couldn't help saying to them that singing was better for their health than medicine, although medicine has its place.

"My text was a short one, 'God, be merciful to me a sinner.' During the sermon many wiped away tears from their faces.

"The home is a healthful place, and everything is neat and in good repair. I presume the fine stock of horses, cattle, hogs, chickens, turkeys and geese could not be beat upon any farm in the state.

"The people all had great love and respect for Mr. and Mrs. Barlow and family. They served a fine dinner and I feel like congratulating Jackson county upon having such a fine county home for its poor and such efficient persons in charge. It is the best county institution I have ever seen and I have seen a great many in my 78 years of experience."

WILLIAM L. PERRY.

Death entered our midst on the morning of the 14th January, and claimed one of our best known and highly respected men, in the person of William L. Perry, at the age of seventy-two years. Deceased was born and always lived on the old Perry homestead, near Moscow. About five years ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis, which left him a helpless invalid. He was as well as usual until the morning before his death, when he complained of a severe headache, and soon sank into a deep sleep from which he never rallied. The funeral service was conducted at the house by the Rev. Mr. Batestone, assisted by Rev. J. H. Henry, of Tamworth. The words, "Dust to dust, Gen. 3:19, were surely the expression of the inmost heart of deceased. The late Mr. Perry leaves a family of two sons and four daughters, Mr. Stanley Benn on the homestead; Mrs. Wm. Forin, Mrs. Thomas Wilson, of Centreville; Charles, of Syracuse, New York; Mrs. Henry Salisbury, of Regina, Saskatchewan. His wife died four years ago last May. Mr. Perry had been a life long member of the Methodist church, and an earnest worker in the Sabbath School. He was beloved by both old and young, and many are the expressions of sympathy and regret at his deceased. One more has gone to swell the millions in Glory.

LONG LIFE OF USEFULNESS ENDED

Nathan Bicknell, Pioneer Merchant of Clare, Mich., Passed to Eternal Rest on Wednesday Evening—Identified with Business Interests of the City for More than Thirty Years.

Clare Courier, Clare, Mich., Jan. 15th, 1909.

On Wednesday evening at about 7.30 o'clock, Nathan Bicknell of this city passed into the great Beyond, after an illness from heart trouble covering the greater portion of two years. He had reached the age of 81 years and seven months, and was surrounded by his entire family during his last hours. The funeral will be held from the home on Sunday at one o'clock, conducted by Rev. S. A. Long, of Byron. Friends, former pastor of the Congregational church, assisted by Rev. Walker of the M. E. and Mc-Donald, Baptist. Masonic services and interment will be made at Cherry Grove.

With the passing of Nathan Bicknell departs the oldest merchant of Clare, in point of years engaged in continuous business. He came to Clare in 1874, and was continously engaged in mercantile pursuits to the date of his death. He was born in Camden East, Ont., June 14, 1847, and on March 3, 1867, was united in marriage with Martha Henry. To the union came six children, four of whom are living, and all residing in Clare, as follows: Mrs. Nettie Dunlop; Mrs. F. H. Ballinger; Jas. ——, and Wm. H. Bicknell. Mrs. Ballinger and Wm. H. Bicknell were the only children to survive, as follows: Wm. of Camden East, Ont., Joseph, of Dunnville Ont., and Mrs. Hannah Grear, of Gladwin, Mich.

Synonomous with the commercial progress of Clare has been the name now under consideration. So long has the people been familiar with the term in connection with all that went to advertise Clare as a popular point for trade, that his death in the most universally deplored. A man of untiring energy, remarkable devotion to business and possessing an acquaintance probably wider than that of any other business man in the city, he will be long remembered. Without possessing a tender heart and ever ready to extend a helping hand to a friend or member in time of need or distress, Nathan Bicknell was in ways without number a benefactor. He was devoted in his family to an extent which ever elicited most favorable comments from his veriest enemy, and his manner of business during his declining days was those spent furnishing innocent amusement and joy to his little grandchildren, all of whom ever held him in the highest reverence.

Among whatever faults he may have had to the unknown cause which has brought criticism to all mankind, Nathan Bicknell was a good citizen, valued neighbor and most loving parent. His demise will be mourned by the community for many a day.

He was a member of the M. W. A., R. Chapter, of the M. A. O. U. W., and N. P. L., all fraternal insurance orders.

Scott's Emulsion

probably saved this child's life. Four doctors had been tried. SCOTT'S EMULSION seemed to be just the thing needed, and it is just the thing needed by thousands of other children. It is so easily digested, so pure and harmless, yet most powerful in building up the most delicate child or adult. But be sure to get SCOTT'S EMULSION, there are so many worthless and harmful imitations.

Sophy of Kravonia

by ANTHONY HOPE

Author of "The Prisoner of Zenda"

Copyright, 1903, Anthony Hope Hawkins

The scene before her, if not quite living up to the name of the hotel, was yet animated enough. A score of handsome carriages drove by, some containing gayly dressed ladies, some officers in smart uniforms. Other officers rode or walked by. Civil functionaries, journalists and a straggling line of onlookers swelled the stream which set toward the palace. Awakening from a reverie to survey the unwonted air, Sophy saw the leaders of the informal procession crossing the ornamental iron bridge which spanned the Krath, a quarter of a mile from where she sat, and gave access to the king's demesne on the left bank.

"Right bank—left bank! It sounds like home!" she thought to herself, and the thought was perhaps rather bitter. "Home! How home now goes a single rode over a goldenhilt sword, his father she had beyond his telegram Marie Zerkovitch from a hospitality too burdensome, as Sophy feared, for her existing resources to satisfy.

The reverie bore no thing. It had been none too pleasant. In it sad memories disputed place with present difficulties. Some of these remained of Lady Meg's hundred pound note. Necessity had forced the use of the money at any cost to pride. When all was gone Sophy would have to depend on what is so often a last and so often a vain refuge—the teaching of French. It was the only subject which she could claim to teach. Verily, it was a poor prospect. It was better to look at the officers and the ladies than to think of it—ay, better than to think of Castlemir and of what lay in the past. With her strong will she strove to steel herself alike against recollection and against apprehension.

The cafe was nearly deserted. The hour was too early for the citizens, and Sophy's own chocolate had been served an excuse to sit down. Yet presently a young officer in a lussar uniform stopped his horse opposite the door and, giving over the reins to an orderly who attended him, nimbly dismounted. Tall and fair, with a pleasant, open face, he wore his finery with a dashing air and caressed a delicate upturned mustache as he glanced around, choosing his seat. The next moment he advanced toward Sophy. Giving her a polite salute, he indicated a little table next to hers.

"Mademoiselle permits?" he asked. "She has, I fear, forgotten, but I have the honor to be an acquaintance of hers."

"I remember," smiled Sophy. "Captain Markart? We met at Mme. Zerkovitch's."

"Oh, that's pleasant of you!" he cried. "I hate being clean forgotten. But I fear you remember me only because I sang so badly!"

"I remember best that you said you wanted to go and help France, but your general wouldn't let you."

"Ah, I knew why you remember that —you especially! Forgive me. Our friend Marie Zerkovitch told me." He turned away for a moment to give an order to the waiter.

"What's going on today?" asked Sophy. "Where's everybody going?"

"Why, you are a stranger, mademoiselle!" he laughed. "It's the king's name day, and we all go and congratulate him."

"Is that it? Are you going?"

"Certainly. In attendance of my general—General Stenovics. My leggings are near here, his house at the other end of the town, and so he gave me leave to meet him here. I thought I would come early and fortify myself a little for the ordeal. To Mademoiselle's good health!" He looked at her with openly admiring eyes, to which tribute Sophy accorded a gay, unembarrassed smile. She leaned her chin in her hand, turning her right cheek toward him. Sophy was never disdainful, never neglectful. Her pose now was good.

"What sort of a man is the king?" she asked.

"The king is most emphatically a very good sort of fellow—a very good old fellow. I only wish his son was like him! The prince is a Tartar. Has he gone by yet?"

"I don't think so. I suppose he'd have an escort, wouldn't he? I don't know him by sight yet. Does everybody call the king a good fellow?"

"Some people are so extremely righteous!" pleaded Markart ruefully. "And anyhow, he has reformed now."

"Because he's old?"

"Fifty-nine, is that so very old? No; I rather attribute it to prov'e discreet, I hope? I'm putting my fortunes in your hands) to Mme. la Comtesse."

"The Countess Ellenburg? Marie has told me something about her."

"Ah! Mme. Zerkovitch is a friend of hers?"

"Not intimate, I think. And is the countess oppressively respectable, Captain Markart?"

"Women in her position always are," said the captain, with a discreet shrug. His round, chubby face was wrinkled with merriment. "You see, a morganatic marriage isn't such a very usual, lawful institution here or in some other countries. Oh, it's legal enough no doubt if it's agreed to on that basis, but the Stefanovitches have for the most part often made morganat marriages—with their own subjects generally. Well, there was nobody else for them to marry! Alexis got promoted in his first marriage—an Italian Bourbon, which is always respectable if not very brilliant. That gave us a position, and it couldn't be thrown away. So the second marriage had to be morganatic. Only—well, women are ambitious, and she has a young son who bears the king's name, a boy twelve years old."

He looked reflectively at his polished boots. Sophy sat in thoughtful silence. A jingle of swords and the clatter of hoofs roused them. A troop of soldiers rode by. Their uniform was the same smart tunic of light blue, with black facings, as adorned Captain Markart's shapely person.

"Ah, here's the prince!" said Markart, rising briskly to his feet. Sophy followed his example, though more in curiosity than in respect.

The young man at the head of the troop returned Markart's salute, but was apparently unconscious of the individual from whom it proceeded. He rode by without turning his head or giving a glance in the direction of the cafe terrace. Sophy saw a refined profile, with a straight nose, rather thin lips, and a pale cheek. There was little trace of the Bourbon side of the pedigree.

"He's on his promotion, too," continued the loquacious and irreverent captain as he resumed his seat. "They want a big fish for him—something German, with a resounding name. Poor fellow!"

"Well, it's his duty," said Sophy.

"Somebody who'll keep the countess in order," said Captain Markart, twirling his mustache. "That's about the size of it, I expect, though naturally the general doesn't show me his hand on that point. Can you guess, mademoiselle?"

"I think you hardly do yourself justice. You've been very interesting, Captain Markart."

"I tell you what," he said, with an engaging candor, "I believe that somehow the general makes me chatter just to the extent he wants me to and then stops me. I don't know how he does it. It's quite unconscious on my part I seem to say just what I like!"

They laughed together over this puzzle. "You mean General Stenovics?" asked Sophy.

"Yes, General Stenovics. Ah, here he is!" He sprang up again and made a low bow to Sophy. "Au revoir, made moiselle. A thousand thanks!"

He saluted her and hurried to the side of the pavement. General Stenovics rode up, with two orderlies behind him. Saluting again, Markart mounted his horse. The general brought his to a stand and walked the necessary moment or two with a good humored smile. His eyes wandered from the young officer to the presumable cause of his lack of vigilance. Sophy felt the glance rest on her face. In her turn she saw a stout, stumpy figure clad in a rather ugly dark green uniform, and a heavy, olive tinted face adorned with a black mustache and a closely cropped gray beard. General Stenovics, president of the council of ministers, was not an imposing personage to the outward view. But Sophy returned the scrutiny of his prominent pale blue eyes, which sorted oddly with the complexion of his face, with vivid attention. The general spoke on. Markart followed suit, but turning in his saddle to salute once more and to wave his hand in friendly farewell.

For the first time since her arrival in Stefanovitch she was conscious of a stir of excitement. Life had been dull and dreary. Her mind had enjoyed little food save the pâté of an unhung Today she seemed to be brought into sight of living interests again. They were far off, but they were there. Markart's talk had made a link between them and her. She sat on for a long while, watching the junction of the streams and the broad current which flowed onward to the sea, and on the long journey to the sea. Then she rose with a sigh. The time drew near for a French lesson. Marie Zerkovitch had already got her two pupils.

This day Sophy began the diary. The first entry is dated that afternoon. Her prescience—or presentiment—was not at fault. From today events moved fast, and she was strangely caught up in the revolutions of the wheel.

Chapter Eleven

It was the evening of the king's name day. There was a banquet at the palace, and the lights in its windows twinkled in sympathetic response to the illuminations which blazed on the public buildings and principal residences of Slavna. Everywhere feasting and revelry filled the night. The restaurant of the Hotel de Paris was crowded, every seat on its terrace occupied. The old inn of the Golden Lion, opposite the barracks in the square of St. Michael, a favorite resort of the officers of the garrison, did a trade no less good. Humbler festivities were full of private soldiers and the stronger themselves of revelers, male and female, military and civil, housed and dishoused, drunk and sober. Slavna had given itself up to a frolic for, first, a fete is a fete, no matter what its origin; second, King Alexis was the most popular man in his dominions, though he never did a decent day's work for them; last, there is often no better way to show how much you hate the man than by making a disproportionate fuss about another. It was well understood that by thus honoring King Alexis, its monarch, by thus vociferously and unstintingly wishing him the longest of reigns, Slavna was giving a stinging back hander to Prince Sergius, its titular prince and commandant. You would see the difference when the prince's day come round! When General Stenovics pointed to the lights gleaming across the Krath from the palace windows and congratulated his royal highness on the splendid popularity of the reigning house the prince's smile may well have been ironical.

"I shall go and see all this merriment for myself at close quarters presently, general," he said. "I think the commandant had best return to the city tonight as early as the king will allow."

"An admirable devotion to duty, sir," answered the general gravely and without any effort to dissuade the zealous prince.

But even in this city there was one spot of gloom, one place where sullen rancor had not been ousted by public joss merriment. The first company of his majesty's guards was confined to its barracks in the square of St. Michael by order of the commandant of Slavna. This by reason of high military misdemeanors—sleepiness when on duty, and rioting and drunkenness when on leave. Nor were the officers any better than the men.

Captain Mistitch cuppeth out a victorious fling.

"May I go and see them and cheer them up a bit, sir, instead of coming with you to the palace?" asked good natured Markart of General Stenovics.

"If his royal highness gives you leave, certainly," agreed the general.

The commandant liked Markart. "Yes —and tell them what fools they are," he said, with a smile.

Markart found the imprisoned officers at wine after their dinner. The men had resigned themselves to fate and gone to bed. Markart delivered his message with his usual urbane simplicity. Lieutenant Rastatz giggled uneasily. He had a high falsetto laugh Lieutenant Sterkoff frowned peevishly. Captain Mistitch rapped out a violent oath and brought his great fist down on the table. "The evening isn't finished yet," he said. "But for this cursed fellow I should have been dining with Vera at the Hotel de Paris to night!"

Whereupon condolences were offered to their captain by his subalterns, who, in fact, held him in no small degree of fear. He was a huge fellow, six feet three and broad as a door. A great bruiser and duellist of fame. His nickname was Hercules. His florid face was flushed now with hot anger, and he drank his wine in big gulps.

"How long are we to stand it?" he growled. "Are we schoolgirls?"

"Come, come, it's only for one evening," pleaded Markart. "One quiet evening won't hurt even Captain Hercules!"

The subalterns backed him with a laugh, but Mistitch would have none of it. He sat glowering and drinking still, not to be soothed and decidedly dangerous. From across the square came the sound of music and singing from the Golden Lion. Again Mistitch thumped the table.

"Listen there!" he said. "That's pleasant hearing while we're shut up like rats in a trap and all Slavna laughing at us!"

Markart shrugged his shoulders and smoked in silence. To argue with the man was to exert a quarrel. He spoke in respect of his well meant visit. Mistitch drained his glass.

"But some of us have a bit of spirit left, and so Master Sergius shall see," he went on. He put out a great hand on either side and caught Sterkoff and Rastatz by their wrists. "We're the fellows to show him!" he cried.

Sterkoff seemed no bad choice for such a purpose—a wiry, active fellow, with a determined, if disagreeable, face and a nasty squint in his right eye. But Rastatz, with his slim figure, weak mouth and high laugh, promised no great help. Yet in him fear of Mistitch might overcome all other fear.

"Yes, we three'll show him! And now!"—he rose to his feet, dragging the pair up with him—"for a song and a bottle at the Golden Lion!"

Rastatz gasped. Even Sterkoff started. Markart laughed. It could be nothing more than a mad joke. Cashiering was the least punishment which would await the act.

"Yes, we three together!" He released them for a moment and caught up his sword and cap. Then he seized Rastatz's wrist again and squeezed it savagely. "Come out of your trap with me, you little rat!" he cried in savage amusement at the young man's frightened face.

Rastatz gained courage. "I'm with you, Hercules!" he cried. "I'm for tonight—the devil take tomorrow morning!"

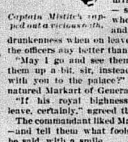
"You're all drunk," said Markart in despairing resignation.

"We'll be drunker before the night's out," snarled Mistitch. "And if I meet that fellow when I'm drunk, God help him!" He laughed loudly. "Then there might be a chance for young Alexis, after all!"

The words alarmed Markart. Young Count Alexis was the king's son by Countess Ellenburg. A chance for young Alexis!

Mistitch turned to him "I don't want to quarrel with anybody in Slavna tonight unless I meet one man. But you can't stop me, Markart, and you'll only do mischief by trying. Now, my boys!"

They were with him. Sterkoff with a gleam in his squinting eye, Rastatz with a forced, uneasy giggle and shaking knees. Mistitch clapped them on the back.



"Come out of your trap with me, you little rat!"

"Another bottle apiece and we'll all be heroes," he cried. "Markart, you go home to your mamma!"

Though given in no friendly way, this advice was wise beneath its metaphor. But Markart did not at once obey it. He had no more authority than power to interfere. Mistitch was his senior officer, and he had no special orders to act, but he followed the three in a fascinated interest and with the hope that a very brief proof of his freedom would content the captain. Out from the barracks the three swaggered. The sentry at the gate presented arms, but tried to bar their progress. With a guffaw and a mighty push Mistitch sent him sprawling. "The commandant wants us, you fool!" he cried and the three were in the square.

"What the devil will come of this business?" thought Markart as he followed them over the little bridge which spanned the canal and thence to the door of the Golden Lion. Behind them still, he passed the seats on the pavement and entered the great saloon. As Mistitch and his companions came in three-fourths of the company sprang to their feet and returned the salute of the newcomers. So strongly military a composition was the company—officers on one side of a six feet high glass screen which cut the room in two, sergeants and their inferiors on the other. A momentary silence succeeded the salute. Then a young officer cried, "The king has interfered?" It did not occur to anybody that the commandant might have changed his mind and reversed his decree. For good or evil, they knew him too well to think of that.

"The king interfered?" Mistitch echoed in his sonorous, rolling, thick voice. "No. We've interfered ourselves and walked out! Does anybody object?"

He glared a challenge around. There were officers present of superior rank. They drank their new wine drinkingly. The juniors broke into a ringing cheer. It was taken up and echoed back from behind the glass screen, to which a battered face were in an instant glued, over which here and there the head of some soldier more than common tall suddenly projected.

"A table here!" cried Mistitch. "And champagne! Quick! Sit down, my boys!"

A strange silence followed the impulsive cheers. Men were thinking. Cheers first, thoughts afterward, was the order in Slavna as in many other cities. Now they recognized the nature of this thing, the fateful change from sullen obedience to open defiance. Was it only a drunken frolic, or, besides that, was it a summons to each man to choose his side? Choosing his side might well mean staking his life. Mistitch rose from his chair, glass in hand.

"Long life to the king!" he shouted. "That's loyal, isn't it? Aye, immortal life!"

The cheers broke out again, mingled with laughter. A voice cried, "Hard on his heir, Captain Hercules!"

"Aye!" Mistitch roared back. "Hard as he is on us, my friend!"

Another burst of cheering, and again that conscience smitten silence.

Markart had found a seat near the door and a good way from the redoubtable Mistitch and his companions. He looked at his watch. It was past 10. In half an hour General Stenovics would be leaving the palace, and it was meet that he should know of all this as soon as possible. Markart made up his mind that he would slip away soon, but still the interest of the scene, the fascination of the prelude—such it seemed to him—held his steps bound.

A BAPTIST ELDER

Restored to Health by Vinol

"I was run down and weak from indigestion and general debility, also suffered from vertigo. I saw a good liver preparation called Vinol advertised and decided to give it a trial, and the results were most gratifying. After taking two bottles I regained my strength and am now feeling unusually well. Henry Cunningham, Elder Baptist Church, Kingston, N. C.

Vinol is not a patent medicine but a preparation composed of the medicinal elements of cods' livers combined with a tonic iron and wine. Vinol creates a healthy appetite, tones up the organs of digestion and makes rich, red blood. In this natural manner Vinol creates strength for the run-down, overworked and debilitated, and for delicate children and old people. For chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis Vinol is unexcelled.

All such persons in this vicinity are asked to try Vinol on our offer to refund the money if it fails to give satisfaction.

Vinol is sold in Napanee by T. B. Wallace, Druggist.

DAYS OF DIZZINESS

COME TO MANY NAPANEE PEOPLE.

There are days of dizziness, spells of drowsiness, headache, sideache, backache.

Sometimes rheumatic pain after urinary trouble.

You are plainly told that the Kidneys are out of order.

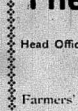
Booth's Kidney Pills cure all Kidney ills.

Mrs. Benjamin Johnson, Bridge St., Napanee, Ont., says:

"Headaches were frequent and usually accompanied by spells of dizziness and spots before the eyes. I would be scarcely able to walk across the floor at times, and I had to support myself to keep from falling. My back was weak and a dull, bearing down pain settled across the small of it, and in the region of the kidneys. I would be more tired and done out on waking than on going to bed as I was restless and would get but little sleep. Booth's Kidney Pills were recommended and procuring a box at Mr. Wallace's Pharmacy I commenced treatment. I soon found relief and it was but a short time until I was well and strong again and I have felt better in every way."

Sold by dealers. Price 50 cents. The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont., Sole Canadian Agents.

Suddenly a young man of aristocratic appearance rose from a table at the end of the room, where he had been seated in company with a pretty and smartly dressed girl. A graceful gesture excused him to his fair companion, and he threaded his way deftly between the jostling tables to where Mistitch sat. He wore court dress and a decoration.



"Will, who follows me?" he cried.

Markart recognized in the young man Baron von Hollbrandt, junior secretary of the German legation in Slavna.

Hollbrandt bowed to Mistitch, with whom he was acquainted, then bent over the giant's burly back and whispered in his ear:

"Take a friend's advice, captain," he said. "I've been at the palace, and I know the prince has permission to withdraw at half past 9. He was to return to Slavna then to duty. Come, go back. You've had your spree."

"By the Lord, I'm obliged to you!" cried Mistitch. "Lads, we're obliged to Baron von Hollbrandt! Could you tell me the street he means to come by? Because"—he rose to his feet again—"we'll go and meet him!"

Half the hall heard him, and the speech was soon passed on to any out of hearing. A sparse cheer sputtered here and there, but most were silent. Rastatz gasped again, while Sterkoff frowned and squinted villainously. Hollbrandt whispered once more, then stood erect, shrugged his shoulders, bowed and walked back to his pretty friend. He sat down and squeezed her hand in apology. The pair broke into laughter a moment later. Baron von Hollbrandt felt that he, at least, had done his duty.

The three had drunk and drunk. Rastatz was silly, Sterkoff vicious, the giant Mistitch jovially and cruelly reckless, exalted not only by liquor, but with the sense of power he played. Suddenly from behind the glass screen rose a mighty roar:

"Long live Mistitch! Down with tyrants! Long live Captain Hercules!"

It was fuel to the flames. Mistitch drained his glass and hurled it on the floor.

"Well, who follows me?" he cried.

Half the men started to their feet. The other half pulled them down. Consending certain of feeling run through the crowd. To one his neighbor gave warning, to another instigation. They seemed poised on the point of a great decision. Yet what was it they were deciding? They could not tell.

Markart suddenly forgot his caution. He rushed to Mistitch, with his hands out and "For God's sake!" loud on his lips.

"You!" cried Mistitch. "By heaven, what else does your general want? What else does Matthias Stenovics want? Tell me that!"

"Neither, gentlemen," was the reply. "The apple is always an extra. It is sliced.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Horace said a wise thing when he declared stories about the Trojan war would not instruct, would not please, unless applied to some day when the siege was over. But that is a thing that many people will never learn. They persist in applying ancient stories to present days, and then they wonder why they are not interested.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

The ladies of Marlbank gathered at the home of Mrs. Nelson Richmond and presented her with a beautiful rocking chair on last Tuesday evening, Jan. 19th. Mrs. Richmond is about to leave these parts and the ladies thought they would show her that she was very highly respected by presenting her with the chair. The following address was read by Mrs. T. Allen, and Mrs. Geo. Young presented the gift:

Dear Mrs. Richmond—We deeply regret that you have decided to leave our village and go back to your former home, but believing, as you do, that it is for the best, we join in wishing you God's blessing. We would not, however, let you go without showing you, though in a feeble manner, our friendly feeling toward you. We would, therefore, present you with this chair, and we hope as often as you see it you may be cheered by knowing it carries with it the good wishes of the Marlbank people.

(Signed), MRS. GEO. YOUNG

Though greatly surprised, Mrs. Richmond replied by thanking the ladies for the esteem in which they held her in presenting her with that beautiful and useful present. She will never forget the many warm friends in and around Marlbank. She extended to all her sincere thanks.

TO THE WHIP-POOR-WILL.

Whip-poor-will! Oh, Whip-poor-will!
Sing not sad songs to me,
The world is bright, but thou art ad
Oh dear! How can it be?
Bright the night may be and soft
The cooling breeze, but still
The lone night-keeper cries
Whip-poor-will! Whip-poor-will!

Whip-poor-will! Oh, Whip-poor-will!
Sing one a joyous strain;
Sing as other birdies sing,
Sing not a sad refrain.
Early at night the birdies cease
Their melody so sweet but still
On the midnight air there comes
Whip-poor-will! Whip-poor-will!

Whip-poor-will, you still shall sing
That sad, homesick refrain,
In summer and in spring-time
In moon shine and in rain
When the leaves fall down to earth
You leave us for the south, but still,
I hear at my window for
Whip-poor-will! Whip-poor-will!

EGGS AS FOOD.

Almost everybody eats eggs. There is perhaps no article of diet that is more commonly eaten in all countries.

Hens' eggs are used more than any other kind, although some people eat duck eggs, goose eggs, and the eggs of the guinea fowl. Turkey eggs are not so often eaten, they are generally kept for hatching.

Eggs are said to be a perfect food, the same as milk—that is, containing all the food elements necessary for the growth and maintenance of the young chick, just as milk does for the young animal. While it is true, of course, that the egg does contain all the elements necessary for the young chick, yet it would not follow that these elements are in the right proportion for the sole nourishment of an adult person. That eggs are a splendid food is not to be questioned, but that eggs alone would furnish sufficient diet for a grown person is hardly probable.

Eggs consist of protein and fat, water and mineral matter. It is the protein, or nitrogenous matter that builds up and repairs the tissues of the body, while the fat supplies energy. The whole of an egg is often said to be pure albumen, but it also contains phosphoric acid and sodium chloride, or common salt. The yolk contains the fatty part of the egg, phosphorus, calcium, magnesium, potassium and iron. Eggs also contain sulphur, and that, probably accounts for the dark stain left by eggs on silver, forming silver sulphide. Eggs are very easily digested.

Raw eggs are more easily digested than cooked eggs. Soft-boiled eggs, roasted eggs, and poached eggs are more easily digested than fried, or hard boiled eggs. The stomach will digest a raw egg in from one to two hours. Soft-boiled eggs and roasted eggs require from two and a half to three hours, while hard-boiled or fried eggs must be allowed from three and a half to four hours for digestion. Eggs furnish a good substitute for meat, and we believe it would be far better for the average person if eggs were more frequently used in place of meat. Especially do they make a light, nutritious dish for breakfast, instead of the usual bacon, or ham, or sausage.

WEDDING BELLS.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, Jan. 20th, at 3 p.m., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Smyth, Newburgh, when their eldest daughter, Ella May, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Reginald J. Perry, of Winnipeg, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Perry, Camden East. The bride entered the parlor on the arm of her father, who gave her away, to the strains of a wedding march, beautifully played by Mrs. J. Douglas, of Napanee, and met the groom under an artistic arch of evergreens. The bride was unattended, and looked charming in an Alice blue silk, with point de sprit trimmings, and wore a gold watch and chain, a present from the groom. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Seysmith. The happy young couple then repaired to the dining room, where they partook of a dainty lunch. The groom's brother and sister, Mr. John and Miss Violet Perry, waited on the table. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents, showing the high esteem in which she was held. Mr. and Mrs. Perry left amidst showers of rice and good wishes, on the 4.40 train east. The bride travelled in a green broadcloth suit, with silk blouse, and hat and gloves to match. Their many friends wish them long and happy journey through life.

NAPANEE RINK WINS FIRST PRIZE IN CONSOLATION EVENT.

The Evening Examiner, Peterboro', Friday, January 15th, 1909.

What has proved one of the most successful bonspiels in the history of the Peterborough Curling Club was brought to a close early last evening by the playing of the finals in the consolation event resulting in Skip Ham of Napanee defeating Skip L. V. O'Connor, of Lindsay, in the last game by 5 shots, the score being Ham 20, O'Connor 15. Skip Morrow of Peterboro', defeated Skip Reid of Bobcaygeon for third prize in the consolation event by 8-7 being the only Peterboro rink to win a prize in the spiel.

The fourth round of the consolation played yesterday morning resulted in L. V. O'Connor of Lindsay, W. G. Morrow of Peterboro, J. S. Ham of Napanee, and W. J. Reid of Bobcaygeon being left for the semi final round in the afternoon.

There was a big crowd of spectators on hand in the afternoon to watch the play off, and they saw two highly interesting games. O'Connor and Morrow were drawn against each other and the Lindsay quartette won an interesting game by eight up. At the same time two well known curlers, Ham, of Napanee, and Reid, of Bobcaygeon, were battling it out on another sheet, the easterners winning out by 4 shots after a splendid game.

This left it for Napanee and Lindsay to fight it out in the finals, which were commenced immediately afterwards and the result was another clean cut victory for Skip Ham's rink. The Lindsay quartette were well ahead in the early stages, being seven ahead at one time, but the Napanee men curled brilliantly in the nine ends and won out by 5 shots. It was fine curling all through and the big crowd found the match most interesting.

Skip Morrow of Peterborough and Skip Reid of Bobcaygeon played off for third prize, the honours falling to Peterborough after a bitter game by one shot, the score being Morrow 8, Reid 7.

The rinks and scores in the finals were as follows:—

FOR 1st PRIZE.

R. H. Travers	R. Bartlet
C. I. Maybee	F. Knowlson

MADE A BIG HIT.

A Speech That Hanlan, the Oarsman Delivered in England.

Edward Hanlan, once champion oarsman of the world, related a good story of how he delivered a speech after winning his second race in England. His first victory had found him unprepared. He was ready for the second with a speech composed for him by a newspaper friend neatly copied out on paper and stored away for use in his coat pocket.

When the crowd outside the clubhouse insisted upon seeing and hearing the winner he was helped out upon a window ledge by his friends and held there by the coattails and the legs. The crowd cheered him wildly. He was too confused to speak. They cheered him again. He threw out his hand in a gesture of helplessness and moved his lips in some inaudible mumble of apology for his inability to deliver a speech. They could not hear on account of the noise that they were themselves making, but they encouraged him with generous applause. He saw his escape and proceeded to shake his head and work his lips in a fine frenzy of oratory, gesticulating eloquently and smiling his thanks. The noisy and good natured crowd cheered him to the echo, and his friends drew him in from his precarious position on the window ledge.

"You carried that crowd along in style," they congratulated him. "What did you say? We couldn't hear you."

"Yes. Give us an idea of your speech," the reporters put in, drawing out their notebooks.

Hanlan took the manuscript from his pocket. "Here's the whole thing," he said. "Do you want it all?"

"Well, rather," they answered. "That speech made a hit."

AN ANCIENT YOKEL.

Not Quite Sure of His Age, but Knew It Was Something Fearful.

During a Saturday stroll in the country a pedestrian came upon an ancient rustic engaged in breaking stones. Drawing him into conversation, the pedestrian eventually asked the old fellow how old he was.

"Oh, I dunno," was the reply, "but I know I be a fearful age."

"But you must have some general idea how old you are."

"No, I dunno, but I know I be a fearful age. Was the only estimate that could be drawn from him.

"All right; well I try to get at it in another way," said the pedestrian, bringing out his pencil and notebook. "Now, how old were you when you left school?"

"I be nine, sire, when I finished schulin'."

"And what did you do then?"

"Well, I was boy for Farmer Giles for fifteen year."

"And after that?"

"After that I worked for Squire Brown for seven and thirty year."

"And what next?"

"Well, I was waggoner for Craker, the carrier, for four and forty year."

And so on and so forth until the first fact was elicited that he had been engaged on breaking stones for a quarter of a century. Then the inquirer observed, with withering sarcasm:

"So you do not know how old you are? Well, I'll tell you. You're 378 years old on your own showing."

I dessay," murmured the ancient yokel, with undisturbed serenity. "I know I be a fearful age."—Liverpool Mercury.

Scalloped Apples.

Select a half dozen apples. Wash and core. Slice across apple so that each piece will be encircled by the skin of the apple. Place in a stewing or frying pan, pouring over them about one-fourth of a cupful of water, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar—though amount of sugar is best determined by acidity of apples—and a tablespoonful of butter. Cover and allow to simmer. When soft remove, cover and fry. When sufficiently brown place in a rather deep dish, alternate layers of the apples and grated cheese. Place in the oven for five or ten minutes and serve in the same dish in which they were scalloped.

What Korea Was.

Few are aware that Korea preceded Europe in inventing three things which have had a vast influence upon the world. Printing with movable types originated in Korea in 1234, 126 years before the invention of the art in Europe. The two other inventions in which the Koreans seem to have anticipated Europe were the mortar and the ironclad, both used with considerable effect during the Japanese-Korean war of 1592-8.—Japan Chronicle.

Ontario's Game Preserve.

Algonquin Park, in the highlands of Ontario, containing 2,000 square miles of woods and water, is a national breeding ground for all the hoofed-horned, furred and feather creatures that inhabit the northern wilds. Here no man may hunt in or out of season. No one is allowed in the park, with any sort of firearm that measures more than six inches.

Though hunting in park limits is contrary to law, capital sport may be secured outside the boundaries of the reservation, where the season for deer hunting opens Nov. 1 and continues fifteen days, and where the laws governing the open season in Ontario are observed.

Big Yield of Grain.

Weekly papers have of late been reporting big yields of grain in Ontario. Here is the report of a small wheat-grower in the West. Fred Pelletier, a Pincher Creek farmer, has finished threshing his crop of No. 1 Alberta red off 134 acres. The yield was 5,490 bushels or 41 bushels to the acre. The land on which it was grown was fresh breaking. The cost of production was $13.25 per acre and the wheat was sold at 80 cents per bushel, which brings a return of $32.80 per acre.

Toronto Negroes Decrease.

The negro "colony" in Toronto has now dwindled to about a thousand members. The negroes of Toronto, however, are a respectable and respected element.

MEAT IN ITALY.

The Way the Slaughter Houses Are Operated by Law.

Slaughter houses in Italy are public institutions. The law prescribes that every town of more than 6,000 inhabitants shall build and maintain a municipal slaughter house, where all butchers are compelled to bring their live stock to be killed. The slaughtering itself is done by the individual butchers and their assistants. The conveyance of the cattle, the removal of the carcasses and the dressing of the meat are likewise the affair of the butchers. The city provides the building, keeps it clean and furnishes veterinary inspectors to examine and pass upon the carcasses.

The Milan slaughter house is situated within the city and occupies several acres of ground. It consists of a number of long, single story buildings made of cement and stucco. The buildings consist of either a single large hall or else a row of small box stalls about twenty-five feet wide and either fifteen or thirty feet deep. Each stall has a wide double door in front and a window behind. The buildings are arranged in parallel pairs, each pair being connected by a covered passage thirty feet wide, whose roof is raised many feet above that of the buildings, being supported by pillars rising from the roofs on either side. The air thus circulates under the roofs of the passages or corridors and over the buildings.

WHEN LOST IN THE WOODS.

The Chief Dangers Lie in Panic and Overexertion.

Let the man who is lost in the woods be very careful not to overexert himself. His chief dangers lie in panic and overexertion, and, though he may be in a great hurry to find shelter, I must warn him to go slowly. Two miles an hour, on an average, through the snow in the woods is all that a man in his condition will be able to stand without overfatigue and its attendant dangers, overheating and perspiration. By exercising caution a man may live through a week of what he is undergoing.

To make this article brief, however, we shall suppose that he regains the road by the afternoon of the first day. He doesn't yet know, of course, just where he is. He should examine the tracks of the person who last passed that way. If the afternoon be near, follow in the direction taken by the last passing vehicle or team, as shelter will be nearest in that direction. Had it been morning he would have taken the opposite direction, as whoever made the tracks must have come from the place where he obtained shelter the previous night.—A. B. Carleson in Outing Magazine.

The Cure.

He talked too much—far, too much.

Already he had driven his taciturn companion nearly wild. He had touched on subjects innumerable, discoursed with volubility on anything and everything. Onward went the unending stream of speech. And all the while the voluble one danced about and fidgeted and squirmed until the other was well nigh beside himself with disgust.

Finally the walking dictionary took from his pocket a cigarette.

"I'm a great smoker," he remarked. "Yes, I'm a great smoker—great smoker. I'm one of those nervous men, you know; one of those high strung, restless fellows who always must have something in their mouths. Yes, you see, I'm so nervous, as I said, that I simply must—yes, must—have something all the time in my mouth."

"Try a gag," suggested his companion.

What's Yours?

It was 1:30 a. m. in the cheap, all night restaurant.

"What's yours?" said the "tough" waiter, arms akimbo.

We gave our orders and in about ten minutes the waiter served my friends, who fell to eating.

"What's yours?" he asked, addressing me.

"Why," said I, surprised and reproachful, "I ordered corned beef and cabbage at least ten minutes ago."

The waiter's jaw became a trifle more pugnacious than usual.

"Well," he said grimly, "do you still stick to it?"

Memory of Animals.

"The elephant's memory is proverbial," said F. Martin Duncan, F. Z. S., "but that of the other beasts of the jungle is hardly less noteworthy. Tigers in captivity always remember a kindness and recognize a friend even after the lapse of months. Lions which have been in a zoological garden for years have also been known to show signs of object fear when visited by native hunters from the country where they had their early home."—London Mail.

Might Be Worse.

"Where do you work, my good man?"

"In a powder factory."

"Mercy! What a hazardous occupation!"

"Oh, no, mum. I seldom meets any automobiles on my way to or from work."

A Distinction.

"I say, do you think that Wiggins is a man to be trusted?"

"Trusted? Yes; rather. Why, I'd trust him with my life!"

"Yes, but with anything of value, I mean."

With Reason.

Smith—Why don't you play poker? Are you against gambling?

Brown—Yes—up against it.—Detroit Free Press.

A SURGICAL OPERATION

If there is any one thing that a woman dreads more than another it is a surgical operation.

We can state without fear of a contradiction that there are hundreds, yes, thousands, of operations performed upon women in our hospitals which are entirely unnecessary and many have been avoided by

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

For proof of this statement read the following letter.

Mrs. Letitia Blair, Cannifton, Ont., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was sick for five years. One doctor told me it was ulceration, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor, and advised an operation. No one knows what I suffered, and the bearing down pains were terrible.

"I wrote to my sister about it, and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"It has cured me of all my troubles, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me to pass safely through Change of Life."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains and backache.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

The Remains of a River.

In the valley between the Pecos and the Rio Grande, beginning near Sandia mountain, in the bed of an old river with all its tributaries, its falls, its shallows and its bends. It is 300 miles long and many feet wide, but it is only the ghost of a river, for there is no water there. It passes by the ruins of Gran Quitrra, its bed is strewn with broken lava, and it terminates in a salt marsh. The Indians have a legend that long ago the waters were deep and swift there until one day a great fire swept down the valley, lapping up the waters, leaving the bed empty, the banks barren and the valley desolate forevermore.

Sweet Idleness In Samoa.

In a letter from Samoa to the Chicago Daily News R. C. Givens says that the natives toil little and spin only when their clothes are worn out, for the wonderful trees produce all the food they require. Breadfruit, cocoanuts, pineapples and numerous berries, together with an unlimited supply of good fish, make it possible for the exist without much labor. These also themselves very little clothes, and thus America's new found, red skinned citizens dream their lazy lives away under the shades of the old palms without the slightest worry about frenzied finance.

Largest Admiral's Flag.

To Admiral Sir A. K. Wilson, the new admiral of the fleet, belongs the distinction of having flown the largest admiral's flag used in a modern warship. The flag measures twenty-two feet two inches by fifteen feet. It was made by the yeoman of signals on board the Exmouth, and it was hoisted in place of the more commonly used paying off pennant.—London Graphic.

Late Dandelions.

The flowers that bloom in the spring, tra-la, have nothing to do with the case reported by Reeve Scott of Smith, Ont., recently.

He was a great variance between the statements of the observatory reports and of Mr. Scott regarding the weather. Mr. Scott specialized in meteorological office said that the average temperature in the province was ten degrees. While, in an interview with The Peterboro Times, the reeve said that on his way into that city with a drove of cattle he noticed several places dandelions were blooming along the roadside. He confesses he was greatly surprised, as it is seldom those yellow heads have much to sky at this time of the year, but attributed it to the "very mild weather."

Parties having logs to saw would do well to consider that Breeze Bros. are prepared to saw lumber at $2.00 per 1000 for soft, and $3.00 for hard timber. In about two weeks we will have in operation a Band Log Saw, which will produce at least one-seventh more lumber to the log. Our Band Shingle machine produces one and one half thousand shingles to the cord more than the ordinary circular saw. It has proven a perfect success. The public are invited to bring their logs and shingle bolts and we warrant good satisfaction.

After a dead silence he went out, his footsteps echoing after him. He and Sophy walked firm and true. Rastatz trod in his gait. A thousand eyes peered at him. And from 500 throats welled up a long sigh of relief when they were gone. But what had gone to do? The company decided it was just as well for them, collectively or as individuals, not to know much about that. Let it be hoped that the cool air outside had a sobering effect and sent Rastatz to bed! Yet from behind the screen there soon arose again a murmur of voices, like the hum of a gathering swarm of bees.

Only Mistitch had crossed the room to the corner where the Fountain opens on to St. Ignace. "What say you to a visit to the Hotel de Paris, lads?" he asked.

Sterkoff whispered. "Do you stop coming up the street."

The conversations turned still in the direction of the light down the street. The three stopped at their heads. Sterkoff pointed, scowled and smacked his lips. "Right."

Chapter Twelve

WHILE Mlle. Zerkovitch's guests were thus taking counsel on her and turned their backs upon it was she herself stole softly to the window and looked out upon the square. [illegible] a dark figure [illegible] the corner of the [illegible] the decent old [illegible] lived and [illegible] the palace [illegible] the Silver [illegible] the building was [illegible] of great [illegible] The door of the [illegible] had been [illegible] and an [illegible] the [illegible] people of [illegible] Mlle. Zerkovitch [illegible] the light [illegible] to see what [illegible] standing in [illegible] landlord's assumed [illegible] of a mortal [illegible]

The room was dark, [illegible] the [illegible] roadway below [illegible] a glean on to its [illegible] Sophy had no need [illegible] to save her [illegible] the gloom, knew in [illegible] sweeping air breath- [illegible] her brow from the [illegible]

[illegible] her head. There [illegible] a volley of cheering [illegible] the Golden Lion, whose [illegible] as a sideways [illegible] enabled her to see. [illegible] silence for a few min- [illegible] and broke out again, [illegible] shadings of a name [illegible] not make out. Yes—what [illegible] Mistitch! That was [illegible] and he sank back [illegible]

The lights, the stir, the [illegible] her, her cheeks [illegible] of reaction [illegible] rude calm on her, a moment [illegible] Present, the actual, [illegible] with its dim, [illegible] food [illegible] and sordid needs. [illegible] she bowed her head to meet [illegible] a sob that moaned a fare- [illegible] of love. "Go back [illegible] Sophy Grouch!" What [illegible] and that! She sprang to her [illegible] fists clinched and whispered [illegible] "Fool!"

The street below Mistitch slapped [illegible]

[illegible] pushed her hair back from her [illegible] and looked out of [illegible] window. To the right, some twenty [illegible] away and just at the end of the [illegible] she saw the figures of three [illegible] the middle was one who [illegible] like a young Falstaff—Falstaff [illegible] but not grown. He was [illegible] by two lean fellows who looked [illegible] him. She could not see [illegible] faces plainly since the light from [illegible] square was behind them. They [illegible] to be standing there and look- [illegible] at the sign of the Silver Cock [illegible] the street.

[illegible] measured, military footfall sound- [illegible] on her left. Turning her head, she [illegible] a young man walking, with head [illegible] down and arms behind him. The [illegible] of light struck full on him, so [illegible] plain to see on the broadest day. He wore a costume strange to her eyes [illegible] a black sheepskin cap, a sheepskin [illegible] leather breeches and high unpol- [illegible] boots—plain, plain dress. Yet [illegible] broad red ribbon crossed it, and a [illegible] glittered on the breast. The only [illegible] was a short, curved scimitar. It was [illegible] the ancient costume of the [illegible] of Volsenl, the head of that clan [illegible] shepherds who pastured their flocks [illegible] uplands. The Prince of Slavna [illegible] the venerable office and had been [illegible] in the dress appropriate to it. He had refused to use the [illegible] carriage and side-camp home in it, and walked now through the streets of [illegible] city which he had in charge. It [illegible] constantly his habit thus to walk. [illegible] friends praised his vigilance; his [illegible] revelled his prowling, spying tricks.

Sophy did not know the dress, but [illegible] face she knew. It had been but [illegible] before her dreaming eyes. She had seen it in the flesh that morning from the terrace of the Hotel de Paris.

The three came on from her right, one of the lean men hanging back, lurking a little behind. They were under her window now. The prince was but a few yards away. Suddenly he looked up, with a start—he had become aware of their approach. But before he saw them the three had melted to one. With a shrill cry of consternation —of uneasy courage—one or two taps turned and fled back to the square, heeding at his top speed for the Golden Lion. In the end he was unequal to the encounter. Sterkoff, too, disappeared, but Sophy knew the meaning of that. He had slipped into the shelter of the porch. Her faculties were alert now. She would not forget where Sterkoff was! Mistitch stood alone in the center of the narrow street, his huge frame barely leaving room for a man to pass on either side.

For a moment the prince stood still, looking at Mistitch. Then he stepped briskly forward, and Sophy heard his clear, incisive tones cut the air:

"What extraordinary emergency has compelled you to disobey my orders, Captain Mistitch?"

"I wanted a breath of fresh air," Mistitch answered in an easy, insolent tone.

The prince looked again. He seemed even more disgusted than angry now. He thought Mistitch drunk—more drunk than in truth he was.

"Return to barracks at once and report yourself under stringent arrest. I will deal with you tomorrow."

"And not tonight, Sergius Stefanovitch?" At least he was being as good as his word—he was acting up to the taunts he had thrown out so boldly in the great hall of the Golden Lion.

"Tomorrow we shall both be cooler." He was almost up to Mistitch now. "Stand out of my way, sir!"

Mistitch did not budge. "There's room for you to pass by," he said, "I won't hurt you. But the middle of the road belongs to the tonight."

His voice seemed to grow clearer with every word. The cruel fit of humor was sobering him. "Yet with soldierly cause no diminution of deference," doubtless he saw that he was in for the worst now, that forward was the word and retreat impossible. Probably from this moment he did not intend the prince to pass alive. He would not be intended was the wish of many. He would not lack shelter, friends or purposes if he dared the desperate venture.

For a moment after the big man's taunt the prince stood motionless. Then he drew his scimitar. It flashed the moon's rays in the sword in back hand. "Stand aside!"

"A voice between gentlemen," Mistitch [illegible] cried.

The prince gave a shout [illegible] "You shall have no such place at the court martial," he said. "Gentlemen don't fight their way over another in the streets. Stand aside!"

Mistitch laughed, and in an instant the prince sprang at him. Sophy heard [illegible] blade almost deliciously with the fascination for her eyes—are, for her ears, too, for she heard the quick [illegible] feet and the heavy breathing of [illegible] of a mortal combat. But she would not look—she tried not even to listen. Her eyes were for a man she could not see, her ears for a man she could not hear. She remembered the lean fellow hidden in the porch, straight under her window. She dared not call to warn the prince of him. A turn of the head, a moment of inattention, would cost either combatant his life. She took the man in the porch for her own adversary, his undoing for her share in the fight.

Very cautiously, inching no sound, she took the long, [illegible] massive bronze figure of the girl—raised it painfully in both her hands and poised it halfway over the window sill. Then she turned her eyes down again to watch the mouth of the porch. Her rat was in that hole. Yet suddenly the prince came into her view. He circled halfway around Mistitch, then sank on one knee. She heard him guard the captain's lunges with lightning quick movements of his nimble scimitar. He was trying the old trick they had practiced for hundreds of years at Volsenl —to follow his parry with an upward slipping stroke under the adversary's sword, to strike the inner side of his forearm and cut the tendons of the wrist. This was a big Captain Mistitch, a man of the plains, did not know.

A jangle—a slither—a below of pain, of rage! The prince had made his stroke; the kill was his! Sophy never justified of their pupil. Mistitch's big sword clattered on the flags. Facing

The prince saw a dance figure at his feet.

Yes, a lean hand, with a long knife, a narrow head, a spare, long back, crept out of the darkness of the porch-creep silently. The body drew itself together for a fatal spring on the unconscious prince for a fatal thrust. It would be death—and to Mistitch salvation torn from the jaws of ruin.

"Surrender yourself, Captain Mistitch," said the prince.

Mistitch's eyes went by his conqueror and saw a shadow on the path beside the porch.

"I surrender, sir," he said.

"Then walk before me to the barracks." Mistitch did not turn. "At once, sir!"

"Now?" Mistitch roared.

The crouching figure sprang and, with a hideous cry, fell stricken on the flags. Just below the neck, fell on the spine, had crushed the virgin with the lamp. Sterkoff lay very still save that his fingers scratched the flags. Turning, the prince saw the dance figure at his feet—a bronze figure holding a broken lamp. Looking up, he saw dimly a woman's white face at a window.

Then the street was on a sudden full of men. Rastatz had burst from the Golden Lion, all semblance gone, courage, almost senses gone. He could stammer no more than, "They'll fight!" and could not say who. But he had gone out with Mistitch—and whom had they come to meet?

A dozen officers were around him in an instant, crying: "Where? Where?" He broke into frightened sobs, hiding his face in his hands. It was Max von Hollbrandt who made him speak. For getting his pretty friend, he sprang in among the officers, caught Rastatz by the throat and put a revolver to that head. "Where? In ten seconds, where?" Terror beat terror. "The Street of the Fountain—by the Silver Cock!" the cur stammered and fell to his blubbering again.

The dozen officers and more were across the square almost before he had finished. Max von Hollbrandt was but half the now lessened company in the inn, was not on their heels.

For that great act was at an end. Sterkoff was picked up, unconscious now. Sullen, but never cringing, Mistitch was marched off to the guardroom and the surgeons were summoned. Every soldier was ordered to quarters, the townsfolk slunk off to their homes. The street grew empty, the glare of the illuminations was quenched. But of all this Sophy saw nothing. She had sunk down in her chair by the window and lay there, save for her tumultuous breathing, still as death.

The commandant had no fear and would have let her be. He stood about now in the street, looking from the dark splash of Mistitch's blood to the virgin with her broken lamp and up to the window of the Silver Cock, whence had come salvation.

Chapter Thirteen

THE last of the transparencies died out. The dim and infrequent oil lamps above lit up the Street of the Fountain and St. Michael's square. They were still down at the Hotel de Paris, whither Max von Hollbrandt and a dozen others had hurried with the news of the evening's great event. But here, on the borders of the old north quarter, all grey still—the Golden Lion empty, the townsmen tucked in beds, the soldiers in barracks, full of talk and fears and threats. Yet a light still burned in the round room in the keep of Suleiman's tower, and the commandant's wife could still expect ed his royal master. Peter Vassip, a sturdy son of Volsenl, had no apprehensions, but he was very hungry, and he and the sentries were the only men awake. "One might as well be a soldier at once," he grumbled, for the men of the hills did not esteem the regular army so high as it rated itself.

The commandant lingered in the Street of the Fountain, Sergius Stefan Ovitch was half a Bourbon, but it was the intellectual half. He had the strong, concentrated, rather narrow mind of a Bourbon and the love for finesse. He broke suddenly into a low laugh. "There—that's what Zerkovitch calls my fixed idea. He declares it's written on my heart—big guns!"

"If you had them you'd be master?"

"I could make some attempt at a defense, anyhow. At least we could cover a retreat to the hills if war came." He paused. "And in peace—yes, I should be master of Slavna. I'd bring my men to Volsenl to serve the guns." His voice had grown vindictive. "Sinovics knows that, I think." He roused himself again and spoke to her earnestly. "Listen. This fellow Mistitch is a great hero with the soldiers and the mob. When I have him shot, as I shall, not on my own account—I could not have killed him tonight—but for the sake of discipline, there will very likely be a disturbance. What you did tonight will be all over the city by tomorrow morning. If you see any signs of disturbance, if any people gather around here, go to Zerkovitch at once, or, if that's not possible for safe, come to me in Suleiman's tower, and I'll send for Marie Zerkovitch too. Will you promise? You must run no risk."

"I'll come if I'm afraid."

"Or if you ought to be?" he insisted, laughing again.

"Well, then—or if I ought to be," she promised, joining in his laugh. "But the King—isn't he with you?"

"My father likes me. We're good friends. But, like father, unlike son, they say of the Stefanovitches. I'm a martinet, they tell me. Well, he—Rastatz, Nero riddled—you remember? The king goes fishing. He's remarkably fond of fishing, and his advisers don't discourage him. I tell you all this because you're committed to our side now."

"Yes; I'm committed to your side. Who else is with you?"

"Is Slavna? Nobody! Well, the Zerkovitches and my hundred in Suleiman's tower, and—perhaps some old lord who has seen war. But it's the send and among the hills they're with me." Again he seemed to muse as he reviewed his scanty forces.

"I wish we had another match. I want to see your face close," said Sophy. He rose, with a laugh, and leaned his elbows on the window. "Oh, no; you're nothing but a blur still!" she exclaimed impatiently.

Suddenly the prince awoke from his reverie—perhaps from a dream. To Sophy he gave the impression, as he was to give it more than once again, of a man pulling himself up, tightening the rein, drawing back into himself.

"I linger too long," he said. "My duty lies at the tower yonder. I've thanked you badly, but what thanks can a man give for his life? We shall meet again. I'll arrange that with Marie Zerkovitch. You'll remember what I've told you to do in case of danger? You'll act on it?"

"Yes, monseigneur."

He sought her hand, kissed it and then groped his way to the stairs. Sophy went with candles in her hand, ungraced by its crowning adventure. He must kiss the hand that saved him before he slept.

The door opened softly. In the deep shadow of the porch, on the winding, windowless staircase of the old house, it was pitch dark. He felt a hand put in his and heard a low voice saying, "Come, monseigneur!" Prom first to last, both in speech and in writing, she called him by that title and by none other. Without a word he followed her, picking his steps till they reached her room. She led him to the chair by the window. The darkness was somewhat less dense there. He stood by the chair.

"The lamp's broken, and there's only one candle in the hall," said Sophy, with a low laugh. "Shall we use it now or when you go, monseigneur?"

"Light it now. My memory rather than my imagination!"

She struck the match. Her face came upon him white in the darkness, with a flare on her cheek a dull red, but her eyes glittered. The match flared and died down.

"It is enough. I shall remember."

"Did I kill him?"

"I don't know whether he's killed he's badly hurt. This lady here is pretty lively."

"Give her to me. I'll put her in her place." She took the figure and set it again on the window sill. "And she's the man who attacked you?"

"Mistitch? He'll be shot."

"Yes," she agreed, with calm, unquestioning emphasis.

"You know what you did tonight?"

"I had the sense to think of the man in the porch."

"You saved my life."

Sophy gave a laugh of triumph. "What will Marie Zerkovitch say to that?"

"She's my friend, too, and she's told me all about you, but she didn't want us to meet."

"She thinks I bring bad luck."

"She'll have to renounce that heresy now." He felt for the chair and sat down, Sophy leaning against the window sill.

"Why did they attack you?"

He told her of the special grudge which Mistitch and his company had against him and added: "But they all hate me except my own fellows from Volsenl. I have a hundred of them in Suleiman's tower, and they're stanch enough."

"Why do they hate you?"

"Oh, I'm their schoolmaster, and a very strict one, I suppose, or, if you like, the pruning knife, and that's not very popular with the rotten twigs."

"There are many rotten twigs?"

She heard his hands fall on the wooden arms of the chair and pictured his look of despair. "All —almostall. It's not their fault. What can you expect? They're encouraged to laziness and to riot. They have no good rides. The city is left defenseless. I have no big guns. He broke suddenly into a low

Chapter Fourteen

KING ALEXIS was minded that all proper recognition should be made of Sophy's services to his family. It had been her fortune to protect a life very precious in his eyes. Allen from his son in temperament, the father's feelings were the less, considerable affection for him. But there was more than this. With the prince was bound up the one strong feeling of a nature otherwise easy and careless. The king might go fishing on most lawful days, but it was always in Stefanovitch who fished—a prince who had married a princess of a great house and had felt able to offer Countess Ellenburg no more than a morganatic union. The work his marriage had begun his son's was to complete. The royal house of Kravonia was still on its probation. It lay with the prince to make its rank acknowledged and secure.

Thus Sophy's action loomed large in the king's mind, and he was indolently indifferent to the view taken of it in the barrack rooms and the drinking shops of Slavna. Two days after Mistitch's attempt he received Sophy at the palace with every circumstance of compliment. The prince was not present—the military duty an excuse—but Countess Ellenburg and her little son were in the room, and General Stenovics, with Markart in attendance, stood beside the king's chair.

Sophy saw a tall, handsome, elderly man, with thick iron gray hair most artfully arranged. Sophy of it was no small part of the duty of Lepage, the king's French body servant. His majesty's manners were dignified, but not formal. The warmth of greeting which he had prepared for Sophy was evidently increased by the impression her appearance made on him. He showed her in terms of almost overwhelming gratitude.

"You have preserved the future of my family and of our dynasty," he said.

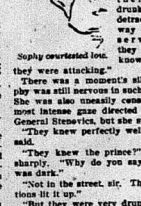
Countess Ellenburg closed her long, narrow eyes. Everything about her was long and narrow, from her eyes to her views, taking in on the way her nose and her chin. Stenovics glanced at her with a smile of uneasy propitiation. It was so particularly important to be gracious just now—gracious both over the preservation of the dynasty and over its preserver.

"No gratitude can be too great for such a service, and no mark of gratitude too high." He glanced around to the group of courtiers. "Is it not so, gentlemen?"

"Yes, Markart there, a chair for this lady!"

Markart got a chair. Stenovics took it from him and himself prepared to offer it to Sophy, but the king rose, took it and, with a low bow, presented it to the favored object of his gratitude. Sophy courtesied low; the king waited till she sat. Countess Ellenburg bestowed on her a smile of wintry congratulation.

"But for you these fellows might, or, rather, would, think, have killed my son in their blind drunkenness. It detracts in no way from your service that they did not know whom they were attacking."



Sophy courtesied low.

There was a moment's silence. Sophy was still nervous in such company. She was also unusually conscious of a certain constraint diverted her by General Stenovics, but she spoke out.

"They knew perfectly well, sir," she said.

"They knew the prince?" he asked sharply. "Why do you say that? It was dark."

"Not in the street, sir. The illuminations lit it up."

"But they were very drunk."

"They may have been drunk, but they knew the prince. Captain Mistitch called him by his name."

"Stenovics!" The king's voice was full of surprise and question as he turned to his minister. The general was surprised, too, but very suave.

"I can only say that I hear Mlle. de Grueche's words with astonishment. Our accounts are not consistent with what she says. We don't, of course, lay too much stress on the protests. Some of the two prisoners, the Lieutenant Rastatz is clear that the street was decidedly dark and that they all three believed the man they encountered to be Colonel Stafnitz of the Hussars. That officer much resembles his royal highness, and in the dress of the dark the difference of uniform would not be noticed, especially by men in their condition." He addressed Sophy: "Mistitch had an old quarrel with Stafnitz. That's the true origin of the affair." He turned to the king again. "Your majesty's mercy, sir, as well as Mistitch's own, though Mistitch is, of course, quite aware that his most unseemly and, indeed, criminal talk at the London Legation seriously prejudices his case. But we have no reason to distrust Rastatz."

"Lieutenant Rastatz ran away only because he was afraid," Sophy remarked.

"He ran to bring help, mademoiselle," Stenovics corrected her, with a look of gentle reproach. "You were naturally excited," he went on. "Isn't it possible that your memory has played you a trick? Think carefully. Two men's lives may depend on it."

"I heard Captain Mistitch call the prince 'Sergius Stefanovitch,'" said Sophy.

"This lady will be a most important witness," observed the king.

"Very, sir," Stenovics assented dryly.

Sophy was drawn eager. "Doesn't the prince say they knew him?"

"His royal highness hasn't been ask ed for any account at present," Stenovics answered.

"If they knew who it was, they must die," said the king, in evident concern and excitement.

Stenovics contented himself with a bow of obedience. The king rose and gave Sophy his hand.

"We shall hope to see you again soon," he said very graciously. "Meanwhile General Stenovics has something to say to you in my name which will, I trust, prove agreeable to you." His eyes dwelt on her face for a moment with a look of favor.

Stenovics made his communication later in the day, paying Sophy the high compliment of a personal visit at the sign of the Silver Cock for that purpose. His manner was most cordial. Sophy was to receive an honorary appointment in the royal household at an annual salary of 10,000 paras, or some £400.

"It isn't riches—we aren't very rich in Kravonia—but it will, I hope, make you comfortable and relieve you from the tiresome lessons which Markart tells me, you've been forced with."

Sophy was duly grateful and asked what her appointment was.

"It's purely honorary," he smiled. "You are to be keeper of the tapestries."

"I know nothing about tapestries," said Sophy, "but I dare say I can learn. It'll be very interesting."

Stenovics leaned back in his chair, with an amused smile.

"Tapestries aren't all tapestries," he said. "They were sold a good many years ago."

"Then why do you keep it?"

"When you're older in the royal service you'll see that it's convenient to have a few sinecures," he told her, with a good humored laugh. "See how handy this one is now!"

"But I shall feel rather an impostor."

"Merely the novelty of it," he assured her confidingly.

"You are to [illegible] as keeper of the tapestries."

Sophy began to laugh, to be keeper of and the general joined in heartily. "Well, that's settled," said he. "You make three or four appearances at court, and nothing more will be necessary. I hope you like your appointment."

Sophy laughed delightedly. "It's charming—and very amusing," she said. "I'm greatly much interested in your country, general."

"My country is returning your kind compliment, I can assure you," he replied. His tone had grown dry, and he seemed to be watching her now. She waved her hands toward the Virgin with the lamp, the massive figure stood in its old place by the window.

"What a lot I owe to her!" she cried. "We all owe much," said Stenovics.

"Yes, but in a different sense—people might be angry with me, because Captain Mistitch is a favorite."

"Very possible, I'm afraid, very possible," he said. "In this world we must do our duty, and—"

"Risk the consequences? Yes!"

"If you will permit me, Mlle. de Gruche." He paused a moment and then went on: "The court martial on Mistitch is resumed for Saturday. Lieutenant Rastatz will need to be tried for another two or three weeks."

"I'm glad he's not dead, though if he recovers only to be shot— Still, I'm glad I didn't kill him."

"Not by your hand," said Stenovics.

"But you mean in effect? Well, I'm not ashamed. Surely they deserve death."

"Undoubtedly—if Rastatz is wrong and your memory right."

"The prince's own story?"

"He isn't committed to any story yet."

Sophy rested her chin on her hand and regarded her companion closely. He did not avoid her glance.

"You're wondering what I mean—what I'm after?" he asked her, smiling quietly. "Oh, yes, I see you are. Go on wondering, thinking, watching things about you for a day or two. There are three days between now and Saturday. You'll see me again before Saturday, and I've no doubt you'll see much."

"If Rastatz were right and my memory wrong"—

He smiled still. "The offense against discipline would be so much less serious. The prince is a disciplinarian. To speak with all respect, he forgets sometimes that discipline is, in the last analysis, only a part of policy—a means, not an end. The end is always the safety and tranquility of the state." He spoke with weighty emphasis.

"The offense against discipline! An attempt to assassinate"—

"I see you cling to your own memory. You won't have anything to say to Rastatz." He rose and bowed over her hand. "Much may happen between now and Saturday. Look about you, watch and think."

The general's final injunction, at least, Sophy lost no time in obeying, and on the slightest thought there was how obvious—the king was very grateful to her. Stenovics wished, at any rate, to appear very grateful to her and, for some reason or another, Stenovics wished her memory to be wrong to the end that the life of Mistitch and his companion—the greater included the less—might be spared. Why did he wish that?

Presumably—his words about the relation of discipline to policy supported the conclusion—to avoid that disturbance which the prince had forecasted as the result of Mistitch's being put to death. But the prince was not afraid of the disturbance. Why should Stenovics be? The commander was all confidence. Was the minister afraid?

In some sense he was afraid. That she accepted. But she hesitated to believe that he was afraid in the common sense that he was either lacking in nerve or overburdened with humanity, that he either feared fighting or would shrink from a salutary severity in a repressing tumult. If he feared, he feared neither for his own skin nor for the skin of others. He feared for his policy or his ambition.

These things were nothing to her. She was for the prince, for his policy and his ambition. Were they the same as Stenovics'? Even a novice at the game could see that this by no means followed of necessity. A king was elderly and went a-fishing. The prince was young and a martinet. In age Stenovics was between the two—nearly twenty years younger than the king, a dozen or so older than the prince. Under the present regime he had matters almost entirely his own way. At first sight there was of a certainty no reason why his ambitions should coincide precisely with those of the prince. Fifty-nine, forty-one. Over the heads—the ages of the three men in themselves illuminated the situation—that is, if forty-one could manage discipline, but had no such power over twenty-eight.

New to such meditations, yet with a native pleasure in them, taking to the troubled waters as though born a swimmer, Sophy thought and watched and looked about. As to her own part she was clear. Whether Rastatz were right, whether that need yield and indelible memory of hers was wrong, were questions which awaited the sole determination of the Prince of Slavna.

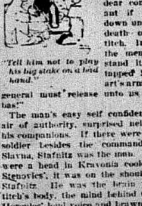
Her attitude would have been unchanged, but her knowledge much increased, could she have been present at a certain meeting on the terrace of the Hotel de Paris that same evening. Markart was there, and little Rastatz, whose timely flight and accommodating memory rendered him today not only a free man but a personage of value. But neither did more than wait on the words of the third member of the party —that Colonel Stafnitz of the hussars who had an old feud with Mistitch, for whom Mistitch had attempted the life of Slavna. A most magnanimous, forgiving gentleman apparently, this spare, slim built man with thought ful eyes. His whole concern was to get Mistitch out of the mess! The feud he seemed to remember not at all. It was a fond of convenience, a feud to sever to end the court martial. He was as ready to accommodate Stenovics with the use of his name as Rastatz was to offer the pitiable medley of stories of his memory. But there, with that supply of a convenient fiction, his pliability stopped. He spoke to Markart of having him as a colonel [illegible] the words would flow through to General Stenovics.

"If the general doesn't want to see me now—and I can understand that he mustn't be caught confabbing with any supposed parties to the affair—you must make it plain to him how matters stand. Somehow and by some means our dear Hercules must be saved. Her rules be an ass, but so are most of the men and all the rowdies of Slavna. They love their Hercules, and they won't let him die without a fight—and a very big fight, too. That fight is what might happen to his royal highness, the commandant. And if anything did happen to him, what might happen to General Stenovics? I don't know that either, but it seems to me that he'd be in an awkward place. The king wouldn't be pleased with him, and with Slavna, are we going to trouble ourselves about the man who couldn't save our Hercules?"

The general, Markart nodded in a perplexed fashion. Stafnitz clapped him on the shoulder, with a laugh.

"For heaven's sake don't tell them about it or you'll get it all mixed! Just try to remember it. Your only business is to report what I say to the general." Rastatz sniggered again. "When the wine was hot in him he was a cunning little rogue—a useful tool in any matter which did not ask for courage.

"If I'd been there Mistitch wouldn't have done the thing at all—or done it better. But what's done is done, and we expect the general to stand by us.



"Tell him not to play his big stake on a lead head."

If he won't we must act for ourselves, for there'll be no hearing our dear command ed if we sit down under the death of Mistitch. In short, the men won't stand it." He tapped Markart's head. "The general must release unto us Barabbas."

The man's easy self confidence, his air of authority surprised neither of his companions. If there were a good soldier besides the commandant in Slavna, Stafnitz was the man. If there were a head in Kravonia cooler than Stenovics', it was on the shoulders of Stafnitz. He was the brain to Mistitch's body. He had behind Captain Hercules' loud voice and brawny fist.

"Tell him not to play his big stake on a bad hand. Mind you tell him that."

"I'll make every endeavor," said Markart. "What do I understand to that?"

"Nothing and you weren't meant to. But tell Stenovics—tell the general."

Rastatz laughed his rickety giggle

A deputation from Kingston General Hospital, consisting of Dr. Duff and Mr. Mills, were heard.

Dr. Duff congratulated the Warden on his election, and expressed great pleasure for the manner in which the County had used the institution which he represents. Last year the hospital went behind $3,989.00, and he appeared before the Council to ask them for an increased grant. The hospital had ever been turned away on account of poverty. The hospital was run very cheaply. He asked the Council for $750.00 this year.

Mr. Mills had come to thank the Council for past favors and to ask for an increased grant. The patients in the Kingston General Hospital for the year had cost 96c per patient per day. In other similar institutions throughout the Province the amounts were $1.39, $1.22, $1.51, $1.20, $1.10, $1.04 and $1.07. While the cost is less in the Kingston Hospital, the management had endeavored to keep up the high standing. There are 36 nurses employed. In 1908 the matter of butter alone had cost $250.00 more, and $500.00 more for provisions. The pay patients fell off to the amount of $1750.00. 1859 patients were treated last year, 1,503 from Lennox and Addington the patients occupied the hospital to a total of 1,358 days and cost 93c per day per patient, making a total of $1262.94. To offset this amount they received $650.00 from the County Council and Municipalities of the County, and $158.00 from patients who paid. He appealed to the Warden and Council for an increased grant this year.

It was five minutes before noon. The mayor and the State superintendent had just spent an hour talking to the children in an Ohio school, and just before the stroke of the gong the chairman of the school committee was called upon to follow them.

"Children," he said, pointing toward the window, "as you go out from school in about two minutes you will see a man who is now shoveling cinders into a railway train. They are earning $35 a month.

"Beside them is a timekeeper earning $55.

"At the head of the train is an engineer getting $100, and over him is a superintendent getting $250.

"What is the difference between those men? Education—get all you can of it."

Serious charges of illtreatment are brought against the House of Refuge at Cobourg by John Maynard of Bowmanville, a former inmate.

ONTARIO ARCHIVES

Strange Facts

Because we refused to join the combine and retail coal out at 25c. per ton more than cost, and other things in proportion, some of our competitors boasted that to-day cutting and manufacturing are about selling-out and arranging among themselves that one out-side-artist and one engraver for Rhode Island Red Cuts would suffice and would regard cuts of that breed from other sources as the entire end have perished.

Strange that we refused to KELLY'S Amperage and Voltage and all such kinds at both prices during both from the same tap.

Strange that we refused to sell Canadian coal and then have to peddle it in American.

Only prices at first compared, general prices in Napanee seemed on reasonable low for the time, and we refused to meet the ladies' prices that lost money on sales, and refused to meet the low prices of the Present Incumbent in Hills.

This meeting is open for the public to call the estimates in free. Every one welcome.

FARMERS REPRESENTED AT OTTAWA.

The farmers of Canada are to have a representative in the House of Commons during this session. The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal has engaged a practical farmer to attend the session and write a weekly letter to that paper, telling the farmers of Canada how Parliament is conducted, as he sees it. The man engaged is not only a practical farmer, but is able to write such a letter. He is said to be a man absolutely free from political prejudice, and no doubt his weekly letter will be of great interest to all Canadian farmers.

The Family Herald and Weekly Star costs only one dollar a year, or will be sent on trial to new subscriber, for the Session (about six months) for only twenty-five cents.

"Ilastatz does that to make you think he understands betting than you do. Be comforted—he doesn't."

Ilastatz's laugh broke out again, but now forced and uneasy. "And the girl who knocked Sterkoff out of time—I wish she'd killed the stupid brute—what about her, Markart?"

"She's—er—a very remarkable person, colonel."

"Er! Is she? I must make her acquaintance. Gossip, Markart—"

Markart had meant to stay for half an hour, but he went.

"Goodby, Ilastatz."

Ilastatz had just ordered another liqueur; but, without waiting to drink it, he, too, went. Stafnitz sat on, quietly smoking his cigar. There were no signs of care on his face. Though not gay, it was calm and smooth. No wrinkles witnessed to worry nor marred the homely remains of youth which had survived his five and thirty years.

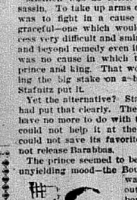
Chapter Fifteen

STENOVICS was indeed in a quandary. Mistitch had precipitated an unwelcome and premature crisis. The minister's deliberate, slow moving game was brought to a sudden boom which he was not ready to face. It had been an essential feature, a governing rule of his campaign to avoid any open conflict with the Prince of Slavna until an occasion arose on which both the army and the king would be on his side. The king was a power not merely by reason of his steady won popularity, but also because he was, while he lived, the only man who could crown Stenovics' operations with the consummation for which the minister and his ally, Countess Ellenburg, looked forward with distant yet sanguine hope. The army was with him now; for the other it was lacking. The king's pride as well as his affection was enlisted in his son's interest. Moreover, this occasion was very bad.

Mistitch was no better than an assassin. To take up arms on his behalf was to fight in a cause plainly disgraceful—one which would make success very difficult and snirch it forever and beyond remedy even if it cause. It was no cause in which to fight both prince and king. That would be playing the big stake on a bad hand, as Stafnitz put it.

Yet the alternative? Stafnitz, again, had put that clearly. The army would leave no more to do with the man who could not help it at the pinch, who could not save its favorite, who could not release Barabbas.

The prince seemed to be in his most unyielding mood—the Bourbon in him was peeping out. For the honor of the royal house and for the sake of discipline Mistitch must die. He had packed his court martial with the few trustworthy friends he had among the officers, using the justification which jury packers always use and sometimes have. He had no fear of the verdict and no heed for its unpopularity.



The square of St. Michael was full of life and bustle; the center of interest was on the north wall.

He knew the danger—Stenovics made no secret about that—but mild plainly that he would sooner be beaten by a mutiny than yield to the threat of one. The first meant for him defeat, perhaps death, but not dishonor and ignominy. The more Stenovics prophesied or threatened a revolt of the troops, the more the commandant stiffened in his neck.

Meanwhile Slavna waited in ominous, sullen quiet, and the atmosphere was so stormy that King Alexis had no heart for fishing.

On Friday morning—the day before that appointed for Mistitch's trial—the names of the members of the court were published. The list met with the reception which was no doubt anticipated even by the prince himself. The streets began to fill with loiterers, talkers and watchers; barrack rooms were vociferous with grumbling and wild speculation; Stafnitz, with Rastatz always at his heels, was busy with many interviews; Stenovics sat in his room moodily staring before him, adding a food out of his blind alley, and a carriage drew up before the sign of the Silver Cock as the cathedral bells chimed noon. It was empty inside, but by the driver sat Peter Vassip, the prince's personal attendant, wearing the sheepskin coat, leather breeches and high boots that the men of the hills wore. His business was to summon Sophy to Sulieman's tower.

The square of St. Michael was full of life and bustle. The Golden Lion did a fine trade. But the center of interest was on the north wall and in the adjacent quays under the shadow of Sulieman's tower. Within those walls were the two protagonists, Slavna's prince bound his orders.

A crowd of citizens and soldiers was chattering and staring at the tower when Sophy's carriage drew up at the entrance of the bridge which, crossing the North river, gave access to the fort. The mouth of the bridge was guarded by a file of Royal Guard mamelukes. They had but to retreat and raise the bridge behind them, and Mistitch was safe in the trap. Only—and the crowd was quick enough to understand the situation—the prisoner's trap could be made a snare for his jailer too. Unless provision could be obtained from the country around it would be impossible to hold the tower for long against an enemy controlling the land-force. In a battle Sophy of Slavna. Yet it could be help long enough to settle the business of Captain Horvitch.

Sophy crossed the time worn walls of Sulieman's tower with a thrill of pleasure and followed Peter Vassip up the narrow stair with a delighted curiosity. The prince received her in the large round room which constituted the first floor of the central tower. Its furniture was simple, almost rude, its naked stone walls quite bare save for some pieces of ancient armor. Narrow slits, deep set in the masonry, served for windows and gave a view of the river and of the country around on every side. They showed the seething throng on the north wall and on the quays. The distant sound of a thousand voices struck the ear.

Zerkovitch and his wife were with the prince, seated over a simple meal, at which Sophy joined them. Marie had watched Sophy's entrance and the prince's greeting closely. She marked Sophy's excitement betrayed in the faultier signal on her cheek. But the journalist was too excited on his own account to notice other people. He was talking feverishly, throwing his head back and forward, dashing his hands up and down. He hardly paused to welcome the newcomer. He had a thousand plans by which the prince was to overcome and hold down Slavna. One and all, they had the same defect. They supposed the absence of the danger which they were contrived to meet. They assumed that the soldiers would obey the commandant even with the sound of the rifles which Mistitch fresh in their ears.

He was talking feverishly.

At last the prince patted Zerkovitch's shoulder indulgently.

"Well, it's good not to fear," he said. "We didn't fear the other night, Milende Gruche and I, and all ended well!"

"Ended?" Marie murmured half under her breath.

The prince laughed. "You shan't make me afraid," he told her, "any more than Zerkovitch shall make me trust Colonel Stafnitz. I can't say more than that." He turned to Sophy. "I think you'd better stay here till we see what's going to happen tonight, and our friends here will do the same. If all's quiet you can go home to sleep. If not, we can give you quarters—rough ones, I'm afraid." He rose from the table and went to a window. "The crowd's thinner. They've gone off to eat and drink. We shall have one quiet hour at all events."

An orderly entered and gave him a letter.

He read it and said, "Tell General Stenovics I will receive him here at 2 o'clock." When the messenger had gone he turned round toward the table. "A last appeal, I suppose! With all the old arguments! But the general has nothing to give in exchange for Mistitch. My price would be very high."

"No price! No price!" cried fiery Zerkovitch. "He raised his sword against you! He must die!"

"Yes; he must die," he turned to the window again. Sophy rose from the table and joined him there, looking over the city. Directly beneath was the great gate, with an outlook on either side from its massive walls, which seemed to grow out of the waters of the river. He was aware of her movement, though he had not looked round at her. "I've brought you, too, into this trouble—you, a stranger," he said.

"You don't think I'm sorry for that?"

"No, but it makes my impotence worse." He waved his arm toward the city. "There it is—here am I! And yet I'm powerless!"

Sophy followed his gesture and understood what was passing in his mind—the pang of the soldier without his armament, the workman without his tools. Their midnight talk flashed back into recollection. She remembered his bitter complaint. Under her breath and with a sigh she whispered, "If you had the big guns now!"

Low as the whisper was he heard it, and it seemed to shoot through his brain. He turned sharply round on her and gazed full into her eyes. So he stood a moment, then quickly turned to the table and sat down. Sophy followed, her gaze fixed on his face. Zerkovitch ceased writing. He had been drawing up an iter plan. Both he and Marie now watched the prince. Moments went by in silence.

At last the prince spoke—in a low voice, almost dreamy. "My guns for Mistitch! Mistitch against my guns! That would be a price—a fair price!"

The three sat silent. The Zerkovitches, too, had heard him talk of the guns. How on them hung the tranquility of the city and how on them might hang the country's honor and existence. Stenovics could give them if he would in return for Mistitch, but to give up Mistitch was a great surrender. Sophy's whisper, almost involuntary, the coloring of a regret, hardly even of a distant aspiration, had raised a problem of conduct, a question of high policy. The prince's brain was busy with it and his mind perplexed. Sophy sat watching him, not thinking now, but waiting, conscious only that by what seemed almost chance a new face had through her been put on the situation.

Suddenly Zerkovitch brought his clinched fist down on the table. "No!" he almost shouted. "They'll think you're frightened."

"Yes, they'll think that, but not all of them. Stenovics will know better, and Stafnitz too. They'll know I do it not because I'm afraid, but in order that I never need be."

"Then Stenovics won't give them!" cried Marie.

"I think he must give anything or everything for Mistitch." He rose and paced restlessly about the room. So Sophy still followed him with her eyes but she alone of the three offered no argument and made no suggestion. The prince stood still for a moment in front of her. Then his face cleared. He came quickly up to Sophy, took her hand and kissed it.

"Thank you," he said. "I don't know how it will turn out for me. The case is too difficult for me to be able to foresee that. For me it may be mastery—I always thought it would mean that—or perhaps, somehow, it may turn to ruin." He pressed Sophy's hand now and smiled at her. She understood and returned his smile. "But the question isn't one of my interest. My duty is plain."

He walked quickly to his writing table and unlocked a drawer. He returned to the table with an envelope in his hand and sat down between Marie and Zerkovitch.

The orderly entered again, announcing Stenovics. "Let him come in here," said the prince. His manner grew lighter, and the smile which had confronted Sophy remained on his face.

Stenovics came in. His air was nervous, and he looked at the prince's three companions with a visible access of embarrassment. At a nod from the prince the orderly placed a chair for the general and withdrew.

"The same matter we discussed last night, general?"

"There can be but one matter in the thoughts of all of us now, sir. Pardon me; I understood your royal highness would receive me alone."

The prince gave a low laugh. "When I'm negotiating I'm never alone," he said, "and I offer you a good margin of profit. I'll change two words if you'll change one—turn for you against one for me. 'Sergius Stefanovitch' becomes 'Nikolas Stafnitz' if 'Impossible' becomes 'Immediate.'"

Stenovics gave one slight start, then leaned back in his chair and looked past the prince out of the window opposite to him.

"Make that change, and we'll settle details afterward. I must have full guarantees. I must see the order sent and the money deposited in my name and at my disposal."

"This afternoon, sir?"

"Wouldn't it be well to release Captain Mistitch from Sulieman's tower before tonight?"

"The money is difficult today."

"The release will be impossible to-morrow."

Again Stenovics' eyes wandered to the window, and a silence followed. Perhaps he saw the big guns already in position, pointing at the city. Perhaps he listened to the hum of voices which again began to swell in volume from the wall and from the quays. There are times when a man must buy the present with a mortgage on the future, however onerous the terms may be. It was danger against destruction. He put out his hand and took from Zerkovitch a quill which the journalist was twiddling in his fingers. He made a scratch and a scribble on the paper which the prince had taken from the envelope.

"Impossible' has become 'immediate,' sir."

"And 'Sergius Stefanovitch' 'Nikolas Stafnitz,'" said the prince. He looked at Sophy for confirmation, and she softly clapped her hands.

Chapter Sixteen

THE troops of the garrison and their allies, the scum of the streets, thought that they had won a great victory. They inflicted deep humiliation on the unpopular martinet who ruled and herded them. They celebrated the event with a riot, but harmless revels, and when Captain Hercules was seen about again—he submitted to a fortnight's confinement—he was greeted with feelings in which thankfulness, though not gratitude, predominated—he found his popularity with them greater than ever. But in the higher circles—the Inner Ring—of the party he served his reception was not so cordial. Stenovics would not see him. Stafnitz saw him only to express a most uncompromising judgment on his conduct.

Yielding in appearance, in point of substance the Prince of Slavna had scored heavily. The big guns were ordered from Germany. The prince had the money to pay for them, and they were to be consigned to him. These were the guarantees which he had asked from Stenovics. When the guns came—and he had agreed to make an extra payment for early delivery—his situation would be very different. With trusty men behind them it would go hard with him if he were not master of Slavna, and he had already obtained the king's sanction to raise and train a force of artillery from among his own men in Volseni and its neighborhood. The men of Volseni were proof against Mistitch's bragging and the subtle indolgence by which Stafnitz held his power over the rank and file of the army. They were true to the prince.

The idle king's family pride was touched. It was the one thing which could rouse him. At his son's express request, and at that only, he acquiesced in the release of Mistitch and his satellite Stefnitz, but he was determined to make his own attitude clear and to do what he could to restore the prestige of his family. The prince said dryly that the prestige would profit best of all by the big guns. The king was minded to supplement their effect by something more ornate. He created a new order and made his son grand master of it. There was no harm in that, and Stenovics readily consented. He declared that something more must be done for the lady to whom his son owed his life. To be made keeper of the tapestries might be a convenient sinecure, but was not honor enough. Stenovics declared that any mark of favor which his majesty designed for Mlle. de Crueche might most properly be hers. Finally the king instructed Stenovics to concentrate all his energies on the matrimonial negotiations. A splendid marriage for Sergius with a German princess would enhance and strengthen the prestige more than anything else. Sophy's presence seemed zealous obedience and withdrew full of thought. The order was an easy matter, and perhaps for Sophy it was no harm. The marriage was ground much more delicate. It touched the "big stake" which Colonel Stafnitz had so emphatically rooted last night. I was thinking of the difference to Captain Mistitch and perhaps to you, general!"

He looked full at Stenovics, and the general's eyes fell. The prince pointed his finger across the table at the paper under Stenovics' hand.

"I'm a lucky gambler," he said, "and I offer you a good margin of profit. I'll change two words if you'll change one—turn for you against one for me. 'Sergius Stefanovitch' becomes 'Nikolas Stafnitz' if 'Impossible' becomes 'Immediate.'"

Stenovics gave one slight start, then leaned back in his chair and looked past the prince out of the window opposite to him.

COAL BUCKET FELL ON HIM.

COULDN'T WALK FOR TWO MONTHS

WORKER OWES HIS RESTORATION TO ZAM-BUK

Mr. Daniel Goddard, of Bay Street, Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, says:—"While employed superintending the unloading of a coal vessel at Cobb's Coal Dock, a heavy coal bucket in descending into the vessel to be filled suddenly overturned, grazing my left leg and scraping the flesh off to the bone. I was compelled to discontinue work and go home for treatment, where I was confined for about two months.

"When able to get out again I got cold in the wound, inflammation started, the wound opened again, and for another month I was unable to move about. I tried all manner of things to get ease and get the wound to heal up, but nothing seemed able to do it. Not only did everything I tried seem useless so far as healing went, but I could get no ease from the aching and the burning pains. At times I was just almost crazy with the intense throbbing pains, and night after night got no sleep whatever.

"One day my wife began applying Zam-Buk did I find relief. When balm quickly soothed the pain, and I remember that the first night this was continued using it each night brought an improvement. The burning pains were soon banished, the inflammation and soreness relieved, and the wound began to heal. I used Zam-Buk continually for two months, and by the end of that time I was completely cured. I have since had no trouble with the limb at all, and it is as sound and strong as before the injury.

"Zam-Buk is a sure cure for cuts, lacerations, bruises, sores, ulcers, boils, eczema, cold sores, chapped hands, poisoned wounds, festering sores, bad legs, and all skin injuries and diseases. It is also a cure for piles. Druggists and stores everywhere sell Zam-Buk at 50 cents per box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, on receipt of price. But be warned against harmful imitations sometimes represented as just as good and cheap.

—Hen coop thieves visited Palace Road farmers one evening last week and helped themselves to a number of thoroughbred fowl. They were seen by one farmer who chased them some distance, but on account of the night being dark they were soon lost sight of.

—The play opened on Thursday morning for the Ladies' Musical Club Concert on Tuesday evening next, and the good seats were all taken by a few who were in the first of the line. It seems hardly fair for one person to reserve ten or twelve seats, and in the future there should be a limit to at least four.

A CONVERSATION OVERHEARD.

Recently a Napanee lady received a letter from a friend in Toronto, in which she repeated a conversation she overheard on the street when she saw two well-dressed women meet and stop for a little chat. Just as she passed them she heard one say:

"Yes, the gown cost $1,000.00."

"One thousand dollars!" gasped the Toronto woman?

She walked slowly, that she might hear more.

"It was fine," the speaker was saying, "and the show was screamingly funny. The Directoire of the cloth of gold was simply stunning."

As the two friends parted, one called to the other:

"Be sure and see 'The Night of the Play.'"

Then the writer said she understood they were talking about Kathryn Osterman, as all Toronto was. So she decided that she would go and see for herself the $1,000.00 gown, and she writes further:

"My dear, don't fail to see her if she ever comes to Napanee."

And now, ladies of Napanee, you are to have the privilege of seeing this beautiful actress in her new play and magnificent costumes. Kathryn Osterman is not only a finished actress, one of the best on the stage to-day, but one of the most beautiful of women, beautiful of face and figure, and in the artistic and exquisite creations she does in "The Night of the Play" she is a study of billowy delight.

The play in itself is specially adapted to Miss Osterman, as in it she has an opportunity to show what excellent work she can do. It is charmingly funny. It is the story of an ambitious playwriter, a woman who gets into all sorts of scrapes, and gets her friends in numerous mix-ups, all by keeping a secret from her husband. The company is exceptionally good and the star is surrounded by a strong support who interprets the lines in a most finished and skillful manner.

FATHER AND SON KILLED AT KINGSTON CROSSING.

Kingston, Jan. 26th.—A frightful catastrophe occurred at the G. T. R. junction at 7.15 o'clock this evening, when engine No. 244, pulling the local passenger train from Brockville to Belleville, struck a team of horses and wagon in which William Spooner, his wife and ten-year-old son, Harold, were seated, and instantly killed the father and son. Mrs. Spooner was badly injured, but may recover.

Mr. Spooner was returning to his home on Glenburnie with his wife and son, and had reached the junction when the suburban train was running in. He stopped his team and waited till it passed, and then continued on, having to drive diagonally over six tracks. He failed to notice the west bound train as it rushed into the yard. In an instant it crashed into the wagon. The horses had crossed the tracks and rushed on uninjured. The wagon was carried on the front of the engine for nearly 100 yards. When the train stopped Mr. Spooner's body was found wedged between the box of the wagon and the front wheel on the right side. He had been instantly killed, but the body was not mangled. One arm was broken. Mrs. Spooner and the boy were found near the crossing alongside the track. The woman was living, but the boy was dead, his head being terribly crushed. Mrs. Spooner was removed in the ambulance to the General Hospital, and the bodies of the dead taken to Corbett's under taking rooms. Mr. Spooner was a prosperous farmer, forty years of age. His wife is a daughter of William Craig of Glenburnie, and a cousin of Alderman William Craig of Kingston. A ten-year-old daughter survives.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

Monday evening, Jan. 25th, the neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Price, Hinch, quietly took possession of their home, and presented their daughter, Mrs. Paul, with the following address and presents. Although taken by surprise, Mrs. Paul, in a few well chosen words, expressed her thanks to her many friends for their kind wishes.

Luncheon was then served and games, music and dancing indulged in into the wee sma' hours, when all departed to their homes, voting Mr. and Mrs. Price an ideal host and hostess. Following is the address:

To Mrs. E. Paul:—

Your many friends of Hinch and neighborhood understand that you are shortly to take up your abode in a distant part of our Dominion. While we rejoice exceedingly in your happiness we feel keenly your removal from our vicinity. Still we are consoled upon realizing how much others shall gain by coming in contact with one possessing so many desirable and beautiful phases of character. Your life has been a model for us all. You have always entered into our joys and sympathized with us in our sorrows. When we have been despondent your presence has lifted the cloud from our spirits, inspiring us to greater efforts, imparting an exceleration, so to speak, thereby enabling us to pursue our tasks with lighter hearts. We can conscientiously say that you have always been a consistent and devoted observer of that noble law, "Never elated while ones oppressed, Never dejected while others blessed."

We have therefore come to express in some tangible way the warm place you have in our hearts. We ask you to accept these gifts as a slight token of our esteem and as a remembrance of the friends you leave behind. Although going so far away you may rest assured that our remembrance of you shall never fade or be obliterated, but that as we gaze down the vista of the past it shall remain as an oasis in the long journey of life. Yet it is our fervent hope that we shall meet often in the future. May God, who has blessed you with so excellent a companion in life, protect you and him while on the way to your new home, to which we bid you God-speed.

Signed on behalf of the people of Hinch,

This woman says she was saved from an operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Frank Ensley, Lindsay, Ontario, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"When I wrote to you some time ago, I was a wreck woman suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the feminine organs and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed and the doctor said, I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman.

"I most heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all women who, suffer with female troubles."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

money in his store and potash works was in a position to buy a better site for a new store and residence, and so opened up on a larger scale. He also built a large stone tenement house near his store.

About this time another hotel was erected, and the next year Mr. C. S. McKim opened up another store. This was afterwards converted into a third hotel. In 1851 Dr. Ash came to the village, two more blacksmith shops were started, a cooper shop, a harness shop, a grocery and two tailoring establishments. Mr. J. S. Lochhead at this time kept store in the village.

In 1867, when Canada came under confederation, Mr. Lapum was the first member of the House of Commons representing Addington, which he was and is still a Conservative convictment.

In 1870 a cheese factory was started by Mr. Lapum and Mr. John S. Miller, as M.P.P. This was afterwards bought by Squire Whelan on whose property the building was erected, and who managed it most successfully until his death, six years ago. The latter, we might mention also, was for forty years Clerk of the Fifth Division Court which always meets at Centreville. It is also worthy of note, that Sir Gilbert Parker's father often appeared here as magistrate.

Shortly after confederation, Dr. Switzer came to the village, and eight years later Dr. M. J. Beeman arrived, making in all three doctors in the village at this time. Before long Dr. Ash, who by this time had a large practice, entered into partnership with Dr. Beeman, and Dr. Switzer left the village. Soon after this, Mr. John Hinch opened up a general store and finally bought the corner lot and built a fine brick store and residence on his new premises.

And now there was a turn in Centreville's prosperity. Several fires destroyed three of the hotels as well as many of the other buildings. The line of Quinte Railway was built about this time and not being on the line, Centreville's trade and business began to decline. Gradually people began to move away. The Methodist parsonage was sold, the Methodist and Episcopal Methodist parsonages were both vacated and the ministers removed to Tamworth and Enterprise respectively as both these villages were at the railroad. Separate school taker Dr. Beeman bought and Dr. Duff in Newburgh and moved. Several other doctors succeeded him, until gradually the medical practice was divided that Centreville could no longer do doctor all alone.

One bright spot in the history of the village during all these years was the erection of the Town Hall in 1874. This took the place of the old frame building.

The Methodist church was the first church destroyed. Mr. Hinch's building the finest in the village, so the Methodists decided to build a new church. The present rather a sad spectacle now, some of the windows are broken and the whole building is rapidly going to ruin. But who knows but what some future generation of Canadian Northern is registered to run from Church Corners, Tamworth, Centreville, and on that line to the city of Toronto. Church Corners would then be prosperous years in Canada. Who knows but the Township Council still through Centreville, the oldest village in the Township, and the present Mr. J. S. Lochhead, its efficient Treasurer, which position he has held for the last twenty years.

In closing, all we can say is that Centreville is now there are better days in store for it. Certifying and that her daughters may not have delegate.

A DANGEROUS COUGH

Ottawa, Ontario, Man Suffered from a Chronic Cough Accompanied by Spitting of Blood.

RESTORED TO HEALTH BY VINOL.

For two years I had a severe cough accompanied by spitting of blood. I was discouraged for I had tried different physicians and medicines obtaining only temporary relief. Hearing of Vinol I decided to give it a trial. The first bottle did me so much good that I made up my mind to continue for several bottles if necessary, but by the time I had finished the third bottle the cough and the spitting of blood had both entirely disappeared.

Allen & Cochrane, The Red Cross Druggists, from whom I procured the Vinol, can vouch for the correctness of this Statement. Peter E. Smith, 17 Bank St., Ottawa, Ontario.

The reason that Vinol is so successful in such cases is because it is a combination of the medicinal properties found together with all the healing oil, actually taken from fresh cod livers, but no oil.

Without hesitation we proclaim our faith in Vinol for chronic coughs colds or bronchites and as a body builder and strength creator it is gold on earth.

Anyway, if you try it and it does not do good we will refund your money on demand. C. B. Wallace, Drug Druggist, Napanee, Ont.

Parties having logs to saw would do well to consider that Breeze Bros. are prepared to saw lumber at $2.00 per 1000 for soft, and $3.00 for hard timber. In about two weeks we will have in operation a Band Log Saw, which will produce about one-seventh more lumber to the log. Our Band Shingle machine produces one and one half thousand shingles to the cord more than the ordinary circular saw. It has proven a perfect success. The public are invited to bring their logs and shingle tolts and we warrant good satisfaction.

Plain Facts About the Hair

IT IS THE DUTY of every one who is interested in hair preservation to learn enough about the subject to tell whether an advertisement for a hair remedy is reasonable or unreasonable. In this connection, the United States Post Office department has begun a much needed campaign against false and misleading statements in advertisements in general. While this work is highly commendable and should be greatly extended, still at the same time it tends to paternalism and is rather unfair to personal self-reliance. If YOU know that the claims for a hair remedy are unreasonable and untrue, that knowledge will save you money and prevent disappointment.

THE TROUBLE LIES in the fact that certain over-ambitious Proprietors employ advertising writers who do not know the composition of the remedies they write about, and even if they did, they are not expected to know the therapeutic action of the various ingredients. Two very familiar and oft repeated statements are that the hair must be watered and fed just, like a plant, and that the color of the hair, once destroyed, can be restored by natural process. While both of these statements are false in every particular, it requires some little knowledge of the hair follicle to understand why the statements are false.

THE HAIR FOLLICLE is a pear shaped sack in the scalp that holds the hair root. At the bottom of the hair follicle and extending up into it for a short distance, is a nipple shaped projection that remains in the scalp when a hair root is forcibly pulled out. This projection is the hair papilla from which the hair "root" grows. The continuous addition to the bottom of the hair root, forces the hair proper out through the scalp.

THE HAIR PAPILLA is surrounded by the hair root, which thus takes a bulbous form. Above the hair bulb, which occupies about three-fourths of the entire follicle, is the neck of the hair follicle, below which the most penetrating fluids known to Medical science cannot penetrate. Therefore, the story of feeding the starved and impoverished hair roots with an external application is all a myth.

THE SHORT PORTION of the hair follicle above its neck opens somewhat like a funnel and is filled with the outer scalp skin. Opening into this outer portion are the highly important oil or sebaceous glands which, from their location, are most exposed to disease. When these oil glands become infected with a certain microbic growth (the cause of dandruff) there is hair disease and finally hair death. Fortunately this outer portion of the hair follicle can be treated by gradually rubbing into the scalp a suitable remedy. What remedy should be used? Manifestly one that will destroy the growth that causes dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE is the first remedy that was prepared for the particular purpose of destroying this invisible vegetable growth. In fact, it is called the "ORIGINAL" remedy that kills the dandruff germ. Newbro's Herpicide was not made until after Prof. Unna, of Hamburg, Germany (ask your doctor about him) discovered that dandruff is a highly contagious disease caused by a microbe. The almost marvelous success of Newbro's Herpicide has caused advertising writers to claim germicidal properties for other hair remedies, many of which were on the market years before Prof. Unna's discovery.

DO YOU THINK that this new claim for Old Remedies is a reasonable one? Hair-follicle rot is the hair gets its life, color and strength direct from the blood, and that good blood, deep breathing and sunlight favor hair development. Out-door exercise, to insure free circulation in the scalp, also scalp massaging for the same purpose, are very helpful. Worry, indigestion and sedentary habits oppose hair growth, while the dandruff germ will actually destroy the hair, unless it is eradicated and kept out of the scalp with Newbro's Herpicide.

HERPICIDE is delightfully cooling and refreshing to the scalp and almost marvelous results sometimes follow its continued use. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

YOUR MONEY will be refunded if Herpicide is not as represented.

Send 10 cents in stamps to The Herpicide Company, Dept. L, Windsor, Ont., for sample and booklet. Two sizes: 50c and $1.00. At Drug Stores. When you call for Herpicide, do not accept a substitute. Applications at Prominent Barber Shops.

INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS.

At a regular meeting of Odessa Lodge A.O.U.W., No. 287, held on Jan. 23rd, the following officers were duly installed for the year 1909, by M. W. Chapter, District Organizer, assisted by Bro. Wm. Henry:

P.M.W. Wm. Henry.
M.W.—B. Oswald.
Foreman—J. Gardiner.
Overseer—Sister Henry.
Guide—S. W. Clark.
Rec.—R. Bennett.
Financier—A. M. Fraser.
Treasurer—Geo. Watts.
Inside Guard—C. Montgomery.
Outside Guard—J. Elson.

After the installation the members and their wives, partook of a grand oyster supper, excellently provided by the Sisters and Brethren, after which all present proceeded in one of the best suppers they had ever attended. After supper Bro. Dr. Jas. E. Mabee was called upon to take the chair, which he did with much credit to himself and also to the A.O.U.W. The chairman made the introductory speech, when all present considered a good time, after which he introduced Bro. M. W. Chapter, District Organizer. All present greeted him with great applause. It was generally decided by all present that Bro. Chapter was the right man in the right place. They considered him one of the best they ever heard, as an A.O.U.W. Organizer. All present went away feeling that the A.O.U.W. was still an up to date fraternal Society after the installed officers spoke briefly, the lodge closed by singing "God Save the King."

Mr. ——'s name is Patrick O'Donnell and I come from Donegal, I am, you know, a tradesman for to trade, I've come and all I want is aid.

For the shooting of James Carey I'll be tried in London town,
And now on to the gallows high they'll lead me up and down.

I sailed on board a vessel, Wellesley, Captain Bell, eight-three,
Bound I landed at Cape Town it was well known to me.
When I saw the James Carey, had sharp words and blows,
The villain I'll be sure he'll suffer for he's aboard the ship Wellesley.

I stood up to defend myself and that I expect you'll own,
I caught poor Carey down below, and on him I came down,
I gave him the second reading sharp, which made him for to cry,
And I left him there the villain, being sent to old Quebec.

Convicts one and one came to the cabin door,
Some to bring oil in his room some to light his candle,
Filled me with damnation, "Confound you," says I, "you villains, what do you want with my husband, Mrs. Carey you did cry,
I've got a gill it is self defence, I'm innocent," then said I.

The captain had me handcuffed, and in irons firmly bound,
He handed me over on a Friday, when I was in Cape Town safe and sound,
Cause then brought back to London and the prosecutors for it, whom was Mr. Poland and Mr. Avory,
Carey you did cry.

He made them up guilty, and the judge made this reply,
"Prisoner at the bar, you've taken away a life, and for this murder you must die,
And you will be hanged on the 23rd of December, and on the gallows high."

There's a health to old Donegal, for glory I'll sing a song,
And to the United States, as it I never will forget,
Take the Virgin Mary as my model,
To pray for the soul of —— I'll be.

I wished I was a free man, and could live another year,
I'd cause all those informers for to leave my cross with fear,
Select Councils banished the serpents from our blessed and holy ground,
Up to Orange lodges, no more, the glorious 12th of July.

Good Christians all, as you I tell, this is my dying day,
This son I am an Irishman, and Christ I trust for to be,
My grave is ready open, and I ready for to die,
And pray for the soul of ——, it is my fate I die.

Little Lives Lost How To Save Them.

The annual report of the Registrar-General for Ontario shows that for every thousand children born one hundred and eleven die before they reach the age of one year.—Most of these deaths are due to disorders of the stomach and bowels, and most of these little lives could be saved if mothers kept always at hand a safe and simple remedy like Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets cure all stomach and bowel troubles, but better still an occasional dose will prevent these troubles coming on.—Mrs. N. Shaffer, The Brook, Ont., says:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for stomach and bowel troubles and always find them satisfactory. I feel that my little ones are safe so long as I have this medicine in the house." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"Peerless Peninsulars"

Are Cast-Iron Ranges Built Like Steel Ranges

"Peerless Peninsular" Ranges have the Drop Oven and Low Closet which have heretofore been exclusive features of the most expensive steel ranges.

They are also the only ranges made with Fire-Box on right or left side, as may better fit the kitchen in which the range is to be placed.

"Peerless Peninsular" Ranges are splendid cookers, are very economical in regard to fuel, are strongly built, and will give a lifetime of service. Let us show you their many features of superiority.

CREAM OF THE WEST FLOUR

When your neighbor tells you of her "wonderful" luck on baking-day don't imagine it's a "fairy-tale." More than likely she uses "Cream of the West" flour—and "good fortune" is certain to follow the use of this superior flour.

"Cream of the West" may cost you a few cents more per bag—but it is made of the highest grade of hard wheat—and is more economical than the usual grades of Manitoba flour. For better biscuits and bread, better baking-day luck, use "Cream of the West" flour.

STOMACH COMFORT.

WHEN THE STOMACH REBELS, HEADACHE, INDIGESTION AND NERVE PAIN FOLLOWS—MI-O-NA BRINGS RELIEF.

Just as soon as you are done eating the healthy stomach commences to churn the food around and mixes it thoroughly with the juices of the stomach.

If the food is not churned, it lay heavily on your stomach, turns sour and causes all kinds of distressing symptoms, such as headache, indigestion, stomach pain and dyspepsia. Mi-o-na helps the stomach to properly mix the food.

John S. May, of Isabella Street, Belleville, Ont., says: "For over seven months I was in constant agony with a case of nervous dyspepsia and indigestion that medical skill could not relieve. I was weak and had lost much weight through loss of appetite. Mi-o-na was the only remedy that would fill me with gas and a feeling of oppression across the stomach after all my life left me in a miserable condition. I was restless at night and as tired and unrefreshed in the morning as when going to bed. A choking sensation in my throat was always constant when I tried to eat, and my heart seemed to flutter and pound as though it were coming out through my side. I was benefited from the first two days use of Mi-o-na. I began to feel like myself again, my appetite returned and the depressive feeling left me. I can enjoy my meals without the least worry of after suffering. I have gained in weight and can sleep the night through in comfort.

Go to T. B. Wallace, the druggist, and get a 50 cent box of Mi-o-na Tablets. Money back if Mi-o-na does not cure.

TO POLICYHOLDERS OF THE L. & A. FIRE INSURANCE CO.

The question has been asked me several times if the Lennox and Addington Fire Insurance Co. had settled and paid our claim in full for loss sustained by fire in October last. A number of persons informed me that the Company had the reputation of cutting claims, etc., and we would not get a "square deal."

In order to set the minds of policyholders at rest in regard to the matter, I wish to state that our claim has been settled and paid in full and to our satisfaction, that the Directors have not paid for anything they were not in duty bound to pay, but a just and fair settlement to an honest claim, without quibbling, and I am satisfied from what I know of other adjustments that any other policyholder sustaining loss will receive as fair treatment as we have. At the same time I consider the Directors as men who will look after and protect the interests of the Company. If they were not, we would not have re-insured with them, which was done before our claim was adjusted. A. W. CATON.

A STORY OF THE SEA AND ITS TERRORS.

No more thrilling story of the sea has ever been told than that which records the incidents connected with the collision between the steamships Florida and Republic, 300 miles off New York, during the darkness and fog of Friday night. The crash in the murky blackness, the instant broadcast flashing of wireless messages, calling for assistance, and the prompt response by vessels from one hundred to two hundred miles distant—this would be sufficient to stir the emotions of people of two continents. But to all this there was added the transfer of the Republic's passengers first to the Florida and, afterwards to the Baltic—the work of transfer being greatly facilitated by the electric searchlights that lighted up a lane in the darkness dividing one ship from the other—and finally, the sinking of the Republic, despite the strenuous efforts made to tow her back to New York.

The whole story is a striking demonstration of how much modern skill and invention have accomplished in the matter of making ocean voyages safe. The water tight compartments with which up-to-date vessels are equipped seem to have been all that prevented both the Florida and Republic from sinking at once, and the wireless telegraph rendered possible the summoning of assistance from points far beyond the line where sky and sea meet, and the electric searchlight greatly assisted in the work of transferring passengers from ship to ship amidst the darkness of the night. But, above and beyond all else, is the record of quiet courage and determined heroism made by officers and crew of the lost steamer.

If all ocean-going vessels were equipped with the appliances necessary for the sending of wireless messages, as they should be, the risk of loss both to life and property on the ocean would be very greatly reduced, and there would be less danger of future displays of heroism such as were witnessed on the Republic, being in vain.

At the Annual Meeting in January, 1908, your Directors in their Report to the Shareholders made reference to the unusual financial conditions then prevailing and the policy which it was considered advisable to pursue in meeting the affairs of the Bank. Since then a marked change has taken place. There has been a steady contraction in the trade of the country, and while this curtailment in commercial operations has been unfortunate, we have also an improvement in this respect, and we confidently look for a gradual return to normal conditions. The crops above the average and generally distributed throughout the country, which has yielded largely increased returns to the producer, and the Bank Reserves of gold have been particularly strong for some months, and the percentage is now above normal.

During 1908 we took over Branches of the Sovereign Bank at Bracebridge, Mount Albert, New Toronto and Pefferlaw. The Pefferlaw Branch has since been closed.

We have also been established at the corner of King and Wellington Streets, Toronto, in the premises of the late Robert Wardell, and intention to shortly erect an office at the corner of St. Clair and Yonge Streets. Land at Port Hope is held for the erection of a Branch there as soon as the business warrants it.

Further expenditures have been made at Avenue Road Branch, Toronto, and at Brockville, Ont., and Winnipeg, Man., and Regina and Moose Jaw, Sask., to enable these Branches to handle the increased business they are doing.

In connection with the increase of $1,000,000 of new Capital Stock in 1907, it will be noted that the amount subscribed for has now been paid-in-full, and your Directors are pleased to report that the Premium received thereon, viz., $118,254.75, is carried forward to the credit of Profit and Loss Account.

The usual Balance Sheet of the Bank as on 31st December, 1908, duly audited, is submitted herewith, and the Auditors' Report thereon is also attached and duly signed. The Cash, Securities, Investments and Assets of the Bank have been thoroughly inspected during the year.

E. R. OSLER, President.

The Report was adopted.

A vote of thanks was then tendered to the President, Vice-President, and the Directors for their services during the year and to the General Manager and other officers of the Bank for the efficient performance of their duties.

The following gentlemen were duly elected Directors for the ensuing year: Messrs. E. R. Osler, Hon. J. J. Foy, W. G. Gooderham, A. W. Austin, H. S. Harwood, A. M. Nanton and H. R. Hodgins.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors Mr. E. R. Osler, M.P., was elected President, and Mr. W. G. Gooderham Vice-President, for the ensuing term.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON BY REV. WM. LISCOMBE FOR THE INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER BIBLE STUDY CLUB FOR FEB. 7th, 1909

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)

True and False Brotherhood—Acts iv: 32 to v: 11.

Golden Text—Lying lips are an abomination unto the Lord; but they that deal truly are his delight. Prov. xii: 22.

Verse 32—Are all who are one with God always one with each other? Is one of heart and one soul?

Should a Christian consider that what he possesses is his own?

Would it be either wise or desirable, that Christians should at this day have all things in common?

Was it God's plan for them to have all things in common in that day, or did they allow their love to run away with their judgment?

Verse 33—What is the secret for witnessing for Christ with great power?

Verses 34-35—Speaking from experience and observation, how many honest, industrious, God-fearing men are there in the church "lack" any necessary thing in this life?

In a church, under obligation, to provide for the necessities of the poor in its midst?

What ever may have been the case in that day, would it be right for the members of the church to sell their possessions and hand over the money to the church?

Can a person be a Christian who does not look to the prosperity of the Kingdom of God for its disposal?

Will a Christian be as glad to give his money at the command of God, as to receive money from God?

Is faithfulness to God a sure cure for the fretfulness of money?

From the account, do you think that they sold literally all their possessions or only their real estate?

Verses 36-37—If Barnabas had sold one-half of his real estate and brought the proceeds of it, or had sold it all, and brought one half the proceeds, if the circumstances did not lead him or direct him to do told the facts, would he have been just as well pleasing to God?

Verse 1—What is the name of Ananias and Sapphira to sell their property?

In what plan do you put the sin of pretending to be better than we are?

Why did they pretend that they had given all the proceeds of their property to the apostles?

Was it of that pride such a terrible sin?

Verses 3-4—Why was the lie of Ananias a lie to the Holy Spirit?

From Peter's remarks, do you conclude that the thing of their property, and the disposition of the proceeds was absolutely at their own disposal?

Verses 5-6—Was the death of Ananias judged by the standards of that day, a just penalty for his sin?

What good did the punishment of Ananias do to the church and to the world?

Verses 7-11—Is there any reason to think that the woman, wanting to add greatly to the enormity of her sin, participated in this and led her husband into it?

What is the difference between the sin of Ananias and Sapphira and the sin of Judas in betraying and selling Jesus for silver?

Suppose Noah, from time to time, thought to GIVE TO THE CAUSE of God does he commit, practically the sin of Ananias and Sapphira? This question must be answered in writing by members of the Study.

What should be our attitude in the distribution of our earnings, to God's cause on Sabbath Day Offerings, and to the poor?

FAREWELL TO THE REV. A. CURRIE M.A. OF THE CHURCH OF THE REDEEMER, DESERONTO

Not only the Church of the Redeemer but our town has been a good deal affected during the past week by the announcement that Rev. Mr. Currie was leaving his present charge to take a course at Theological College in New York. During the three years he has been here he has endeared himself not only to the members of our church, but to many of the citizens, who belong to other denominations. It was arranged to give him and his good wife a farewell social, but the inclement evening made the whole congregation feel at the manse. Unfortunately there was one notable absentee, Mr. Newton, one of Mr. Currie's best friends and one of the contributors to Pleasant Days, who was lying on a bed of sickness, very ill indeed. It pained to read the gloom over the faces of all at the meeting. However, there was lots of good eating and drinking and the manse—one of the largest houses in town, was crammed full to the doors.

After supper the chair, Mr. Currie was called out into the hall, so that all might hear it, they could not. Donald Miss Lottie Crook read this address:

Dear Mr. Currie:—We, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Church of the Redeemer learn with the deepest regret of your intended departure from among us, who were always and ever ready to assist in any work for the welfare of the church. We shall indeed miss the kind words and sunny smile you always greeted us with, and to show our appreciation would ask you to accept this gift as a mark of our friendship for you, and hope as the flowers send forth their fragrance so your life in the future may ever be as bright.

And now we commend you to our Father above, that His blessing may follow you wherever your lot may chance to lead you.

Signed in behalf of the Ladies' Aid Society, Church of the Redeemer,

MRS. F. McMASTER,
MRS. J. PASMORE,
MRS. O. E. GRACEY.

Mrs. Gracey then handed Mrs. Currie a handsome cut glass bouquet holder and mirror.

Mr. Currie was then called upon and the following address was read by Dr. Pasmore:

To the Rev. A. M. Currie, M.A.:—

We, who are gathered in sorrow here, members of the Church of the Redeemer, the same company who have often gathered in joyous mood, are met to-night to express to you our deep regret for the occasion which brings us together, a serious occasion indeed, being the severing of the tie of pastor and people. It is not of our desire that you are going, in the years you have been with us, we have had times of brightness and times of gloom. Not every day did the sun shine, but we do believe that all of us here present, have stood by each other and by you as members of the Church of God should. We are not perfect but we have done our best, and the report for the managers to the congregation for the year 1908 is proof of this, it is the financial statement in ten years.

Like a bolt from a clear sky your resignation came upon us, but we wish you every success in your chosen and we believe appointed work of preaching the gospel of Christ, and profitable and happy time in the Hall of Learning, to which you are going and through the remainder of your life may our love go with you.

We thank you for your efforts among our young people, our sons and daughters, who will be better Christians and citizens of Canada and more than all else, in God's good time, better citizens of that better country we are all trying to reach. We would desire to thank Mrs. Currie for all her work in the church, in the Sunday School, in the Ladies' Aid, and especially in the service of praise.

We feel you both good bye. We bid you God's speed, and if we meet no more here below, may we all meet in the Father's House, where the many mansions be, nearer the great White Throne near to the Crystal Sea.

W. J. PASMORE, M.D. on behalf of the Session

JOHN NESBITT, M.D., on behalf of the Manager.

G. E. GRACEY,
on behalf of the Congregation

At the conclusion of the address Mrs. Gracey handed Mr. Currie a purse. It was several moments before Mr. Currie could speak. He said the congregation would not be more sorry to lose him than he was to go, but that for some years had cherished to take a post-graduate course in The Union Seminary in New York, and he did not want to put it off too long. He had enjoyed his work while here very much and he would say the last day of his life remember. His pastorate in the Church of the Redeemer would be fondly his. God bless them all he him. He thanked them for their expression of esteem for Mrs. Currie and he knew that in the Ladies' Aid and the choir she had enjoyed herself very much. The choir also presented Mrs. Currie with a handsome book of prayer and an address, asking her have a great a help she had been to them in the services. Signed by

MISS I. DALTON,
Choir Leader.
C. GRACEY,
Secretary.

We give an instance of how Mr. and Mrs. Currie's friends feel at leaving them; the hour did not date sing God be with you till we meet again when they left on the flat of quinte train a large crowd was at the station to see them off. We wish them peace and prosperity.

THE NEXT MEETING

The next regular meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society will be held in Historical Hall, Library Building, on Friday evening, February 12th, at 8 o'clock.

Professor J. L. Morrison of Queen's University, Kingston, will be present, taking as a subject "London in the Eighteenth Century." Professor Morrison will undoubtedly be familiar with authority on the period. Those who have heard Professor Morrison before on "Wolfe and Montcalm" will remember the great treat they enjoyed.

The door is open for the public. Entrance free and everyone welcome.

FRIDAY'S MEETING.

The meeting of the Historical Society last Friday night was addressed by Prof. Alexander Laird, who took as a subject "Indian Unrest and Present Discontent in India."

Prof. Laird began by describing the early life in India, having particular attention to the cities of Bombay and Calcutta. He always went out to that country. He followed with an able description of the progress of the Indian. Education, after which he told of the two great peoples with which England has to deal in the present trouble. He explained the position of the native at the courts of princes and Hindu people which England has to face with. He made a very clear matter very clear in joining with this explanation a very description of the Mohammedan people which the numbers would in all of these calamities. It was a very able address and a very thoughtful one and those who were present realized the amount of study that India paid towards the expenditure of England's wars during the last seventy years and the fact that the Empire was practically saved by large sums for those wars which Canada and Australia paid nothing.

Prof. Laird closed his address by referring kindly to the subject of Hudson immigration to Canada and he gave a description of the fight in the Provincial factory of Kazan on the Russian on the Volga in the southern parts of the country, concluding with a few suggestions as to the possible difficulty developing in the country.

The discussion was very ably opened that a vote of thanks be tendered Prof. Laird for his kindness in coming to Napanee to talk to us. This was seconded by Mr. W. T. Gilbard seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously and a hearty thank of the Society was tendered Prof. Laird by the President.

Notwithstanding the bad snow storm the Hall was well filled, and every one was delighted with the evening entertainment. The people of Napanee appreciate the kindness of the Historical Society in giving free to the public. The series of lectures which we are having this year is certainly a great treat for our citizens, and it is unfortunate that more of our Collegiate Institute pupils do not attend the meeting.

A SPLENDID NUMBER.

Canada has a fleet of eight armed cruisers which patrol the boundary lines to see that no poaching is done by foreign fishing vessels. The story of how and why the Dominion protects its fisheries, which are the most extensive in the world, is told in a breezy manner in the February number of Boys' Own Magazine, and elaborately illustrated. There are many other bright features in this attractively edited publication, including an able and comprehensive contribution on "The Finances of the Post Year," by Prof. James Mavor, of Toronto University. "Men and Events in the Public Eye" is delightfully entertaining. It includes selections from the world's periodical press embrace the best in the realm of current literature. "The King as a Guest," "The Health Value of Laughing," "Mapping Out a Career," "Temperament—a Difficult Problem," "The Law of Prosperity" "The Arrangement of a Private Office," "The Truth About the Automobile," "Mortality in Relation to Weight," etc., afford only a slight conception of the varied character of the captivating contents of February Busy Man's.

Sophy of Kravonia

ANTHONY HOPE

Author of "The Prisoner of Zenda"

Copyright, 1908, Anthony Hope Hawkins

Gracious his words were for her deed and gracious his smile for her comely beauty. He could at least look a king —no man denied him that—and speak in kingly phrases. "A service unmatched in courage and immeasurable in importance to us and our royal house, the preservation of our dearly loved son and only heir." Countess Ellenburg looked down her nose at that! For such an act did he confer a patent of nobility on Sophy and for greater honor gave her as title the name of one of his own estates, together with a charge on its revenues equal to her new dignity.

He ended and sank back in his chair. Her prince rang forward and kissed her hand before them all. Countess Ellenburg bowed condescendingly. A dog-like murmur of applause filled the air, with shining eyes, Sophia, Baroness Dobrava, courtesied again very low.

So now Sophy Grouch had gone, went Sophia de Grisbach.

"Such a dear child, poor child!" whispered Marie Zerkovitch, her only Julia [illegible] in England, far away, heard the news of Sophy's simple child-

[illegible] ...ination. Such a letter ...ent to her that night, but there ...was stuff in it besides the bar... ...ecess' poem.

Suddenly a childish voice rang out clear through the hall in a fearless, eager little voice.

"What's that you've got on your cheek?" asked young Alexis, with engaging candor. His finger pointed at Sophy's face.

So quaint an interruption to the stately formality of the scene struck people's sense of humor. Everybody laughed—even Countess Ellenburg. Sophy's own laugh rose rich and merry. Her ignorance or carelessness of etiquette betrayed itself. She darted at the pretty boy, caught him in her arms and kissed him, answering, "That's my luck —my red star."

The boy touched the mark with his finger. A look of childish awe came into his blue eyes.

"Your luck!" he said softly and continued to look at the gaze-rious sign after Sophy had set him down again. The little scene was told all over Slavna before night, and men and women talked, according to their temper, of the nature and the meaning of the red star. If only the foolish think about such things, even the wise talk.

The king left his chair and mingled with his guests. His movement was the signal for a general relaxation of ceremony. The prince came across the room and joined Sophy, who had returned to Marie Zerkovitch's side. He offered the baroness his congratulations, but in somewhat constrained tones. His mind seemed to be on something else. Once or twice he looked inquiringly at Marie, who, in her turn, showed signs of restlessness or displeasure. A silence followed on Sophy's expression of her acknowledgments. The prince glanced again at Marie and made up his mind to speak.

"You've done me the kindness I asked?" he inquired of Marie.

Marie picked at the feathers of her fan in unhappy embarrassment. "No, sir; I haven't. I—I couldn't."

"But why not?" he asked in surprise. "I—I couldn't," repeated Marie, flushing.

He looked at her gravely for a moment, then sighed. "Then I must plead my own cause," he said and turned to Sophy. "Next week I'm leaving Silvia and going to my castle of Praslok. It's near Volsenl, you know, and I want to rube and train my people as well as I can. We must be ready for our guns when they come, mustn't we?"

His eyes met hers, eager glance exchanged for glance as eager. "Our guns!" whispered Sophy under her breath.

"Marie here and Zerkovitch have promised to come with me. He'll write what ought to be written, and she'll cook the dinners." He laughed. "Oh well, we do live very simply at Praslok. We shall be there three months at least. I asked Marie to persuade you to come with her and to stay as long as you could, but she's disappointed me. I must plead for myself."

The changing expressions of Sophy's eyes had marked every sentence of his speech, and Marie marked every expression of the eyes. They had grown forlorn and apprehensive when he spoke of leaving Slavna. A sudden joy leaped into them at his invitation to Praslok.

"I will come for a little! The scenery is very fine and the people interesting."

Sophy gave a low laugh. "Since the scenery is fine and the people interesting, I, too, accompany!"

Their eyes met again and he echoed back her laugh. Marie Zerkovitch drew in her breath sharply. With swift insight she saw and foresaw. She remembered the presentiment under whose influence she had begged Sophy not to come to Kravonia. But fate had weighted the scales heavily against her. The Baroness Dobrava was here.

Asimultaneous exclamation of many voices broke across their talk. At the other end of the room men and women pressed into a circle round some point of interest which could not be seen by Sophy and her companions. A loud voice rang out in authoritative tones: "Stand back! Stand back and open all the windows!"

"You'll come for a little?"

"That's Natcheff's voice," said the prince. Natcheff was the leading physician of Slavna. "Somebody's fainted, I suppose. Well, the place is stuffy enough!"

Markart emerged from the circle which had widened out in obedience to the physician's orders. As he hurried past the prince he said: "The king has fainted, sir. I'm going to fetch Lepage." Two or three other men ran to open the windows.

"The king fainted! I never knew him to do that before."

He hastened to where his father lay, the subject of Natcheff's ministrations. Sophy and Marie followed in his wake through the opening which the onlookers made for him. The king showed signs of recovering, but Natcheff's face was grave beyond even the requirements of his profession or of his patient's rank. The next moment Lepage came up. This man, the king's body servant, was a small, plump person, who had generally a weary, impassive, uninterested manner. He looked rather uninterested even now, but his walk was very quick, and he was soon aiding Natcheff with deft and nimble fingers.

"This is strange, Lepage," said Natcheff.

Lepage did not look up from his task. "Has it ever happened before?"

Then Lepage did look up. He appeared to consider and to hesitate. He glanced once at the king before he answered.

"It's the third attack in two months," he said at last.

"You never told me!" The words shot sharply from Natcheff's lips.

"That was by his majesty's peremptory orders. He'll be angry that I've told you now."

"Clear the room!" ordered Natcheff shortly.

Slavna had plenty to talk about that night. Besides the Baroness Dobrava's red star there was the fainting fit of King Alexis. The evening bulletin was entirely favorable. The king had quite recovered. But many people heard when they were almost opposite the terrace of the Hotel de Paris, Stenovics spoke.

"It looks like the handwriting on the wall," he said.

"Quiteso, my dear," Stafnitz agreed cheerfully. "Quite at present, there's no evidence to show to whom "The time is short." besides the king himself the message is addressed."

"Or what it says."

"I think that's plain enough, general. I think it says that the time is short."

He watched his companion's face closely now, but Stenovics' mask was stolid and unmoved. He said nothing. He contented himself with a sullen grunt.

"Short for the king!" pursued Stafnitz, with a shake of his head. "Short for the prince perhaps! And certainly, general, uncomfortably short for us!"

Stenovics grunted again and then rode on some while in silence. At last, just as he was about to part from his companion, he made one observation:

"Fortunately Natcheff is a friend of mine. We shall get the best possible information."

"That might become of importance, no doubt, general," said Stafnitz, sullenly still.

Chapter Seventeen

DR. NATCHEFF amply reassured public opinion. What information he gave to General Stenovics, his friend, is another matter and remained locked in that statesman's heart. Publicly and to everybody else from the Prince of Slavna downward he declared that there was no ground for apprehension and that the king merely needed rest and change. After a few days of the former it was proposed to seek the latter by moving the court to his majesty's country seat at Dobrava—that estate from which Sophy had been graciously hidden to choose her title. Meanwhile there was no reason why the prince should not carry out his intention and proceed to the castle of Praslok.

Below Slavna the main ground—as has already been stated, there was no railway at this time—follows the course of the river Kruth for about five miles in a southeasterly direction. It is then carried across the stream, which continues to trend to the south, by an ancient wooden bridge and runs northeast for another fifteen miles through flat country and past prosperous agricultural and pastoral villages till it reaches the marshy land bordering Lake Tatli. The lake, extending from this point to the spurs of the mountain range which forms the frontier, lies at its farther direct progress, and it divides into two branches. The right prong of the fork continues on the level till it reaches Dobrava, eight miles from the point of bisection. Here it inclines to the northwest again and, after some ten miles of steady ascent, crosses the mountains by St. Peter's pass, the one carriage road over the range and over the frontier. The left prong becomes a steep ascent directly the bisection has occurred, rising sharply for five miles to the hill on which the castle of Praslok stands. Then it runs for another five miles on a high plateau till it ends at the hill city of Volsenl, which stands on the edge of the plateau, looking down on Lake Tatli and across to Dobrava, in the plain opposite.

Beyond Volsenl there is no road in the proper sense, but only cart or bridle tracks. Of these the principal and most frequented rises diagonally across the valley in which Lake Tatli lies, is interrupted by the lake, at that point about a mile and a half wide, and then ascends the road from Dobrava halfway up St. Peter's pass and about twenty miles across country from Volsenl. It thus forms the base of a rough and irregular triangle of country, with the point where the Slavna road bisects, the pass and Volsenl marking its three angles. Lake Tatli is set in the middle, backed by a chain of hills continuous everywhere except at the indentation of the pass.

The two rode ... back toget...

Though so near to Slavna in actual distance, the country is very different from the fertile river valley which surrounds the capital. It is bleak and rough, a kind of hill pastures and mountain woods. Its natural features are reflected in the character of the inhabitants. The men who count Volsenl a local capital are hardier than the men of Slavna, less given to luxury, less addicted to quarrels and riots, but considerably more formidable opponents if once they take up arms. For this reason no less than on account of their devotion to him the prince did well to choose this country as the recruiting ground for his new force of gunners.

The prince had been at Praslok for a week when Sophy set out to join him there. At the last moment Zerkovitch decided to remain in Slavna, at least till the court made its promised move to Dobrava. Reassuring as Dr. Natcheff was, it would do no harm to have a friendly pair of eyes and ears in the capital so long as the king remained in residence. Thus the two ladies were accompanied only by Peter Vassip, whom the prince had sent to escort Sophy safely. Their progress would never be rapid and for the last five miles exceedingly slow. They left the capital in complete tranquillity, and when Sophy settled her bill at the sign of the Silver Cock and bade farewell to old Meyerstein, her landlord, he expressed the hope that she would soon be back, though, indeed, his poor house was, he feared, no fit quarters for the Baroness Dobrava.

"I don't know whether I shall come back here, but I can never forget your house. I shall always love it in my memory," said Sophy.

Max von Hollbrandt had obtained leave of absence from his legation and had accompanied the prince to Praslok. The two were friends, having many tastes in common and, not least, the taste for soldiering. Besides having the pleasure of his company the prince looked to obtain valuable aid from Max in the task on which he was engaged. The young German was amused and delighted with his expedition. Praslok is a primitive old place. It stands on an abrupt mound or knoll of ground by the roadside. So steep and sudden is the ascent that it was necessary to build a massive causeway of wood—an inclined plane—to lead up from the road to the gate of the square tower which forms the front of the building. The causeway has crossbars at short intervals to give foothold to the horses which in old days were stabled within the walls. Recently, however, modern stables had been built on the other side of the road, and it had become the custom to mount the causeway and enter the castle on foot.

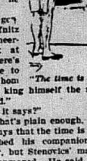
A Doctor's Advice

For Chronic Coughs and Colds a Prominent Atlanta Physician Says Nothing Equals Vinol.



I want people to know that I believe the most valuable cod liver oil preparation, the best body builder, health restorer, and strength creator known to medicine to-day is Vinol.

I advise Vinol in my practice and find it has no equal for healing coughs, colds, bronchial troubles and sore lungs.

I have used Vinol in many cases of indigestion, mal-assimilation, and for patients who have no appetite, were anaemic and run down, with splendid results. I have also found Vinol to be a boon to the aged.

I believe Vinol to be without question the most powerful strength creating tonic and body builder we possess.

Dr. J. E. Ennis, Atlanta, Ga.

Vinol contains no injurious drugs but it actually does contain peptonate of iron and all of the medicinal curative elements taken from fresh cods' livers, without a drop of oil to upset the stomach and retard its work.

Those who try it and receive no benefit may have their money returned on demand. T. B. Wallace, Druggist, Napanee, Ont.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

HEALTH SAVING EXPLAINED BY A NAPANEE CITIZEN WHO KNOWS FROM EXPERIENCE.

Many Napanee people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help.

Sick kidneys are responsible for a great amount of suffering and ill health.

The reason so many use Booth's Kidney Pills is their quick relief for all kidney weakness. Here is what a Napanee citizen says:

Mrs. P. O'Neill, of West st., Napanee, Ont., says:

"Many painful and annoying symptoms of kidney trouble had caused Mr. O'Neill almost constant suffering and he was unable to straighten himself up from the sharp pains that would come across his back, in the kidney region. He would take cold very easily and it would always settle in his back. The urine would become highly colored and the kidney secretions would be very irregular and frequent. He had tried a number of remedies without relief. Booth's Kidney Pills were recommended and procuring a box at Mr. Wallace's Pharmacy, he soon found relief. His back strengthened and the urinary disorders were quickly regulated."

Girlhood Vigor Regained.

The difficulty with most women lies in the fact that while they are anxious about the health and welfare of their family and loved ones, they rarely ever pay attention to themselves until Nature says Stop. To prevent this every woman should take Psychine regularly. It creates an appetite and is the greatest of digestants. Psychine is a boon to run-down, tired and over-worked women, for there is LIFE IN EVERY DOSE. Mrs. J. T. Miller, of 63 Notre Dame St., Winnipeg, proved this, for she says: "I am thankful for what Psychine has done for me, I was laid up with weakness. Oh, how I suffered. My appetite was very poor and my stomach was greatly disordered. To-day I am strong and well, for Psychine has brought me permanent relief. I feel like a new woman now to what I did before taking Psychine. I feel the vigor of girlhood in my veins once more."

TRY PSYCHINE FREE.

We want every family to know the merits of Psychine and will send every householder a trial bottle free. Cut out coupon and mail to Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, Toronto.

Thereby giving our customers the advantage.

We might also state that the CASH SYSTEM is being adopted by all the leading shoe stores in such towns and cities as London, Peterboro, Lindsay, Belleville, Kingston, Trenton and Napanee.

ARMSDEN—HANNAH

On Monday, Jan. 25th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Hannah, Melitta, Man., was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when their third daughter, Mary Maud, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. James Henry Armsden, Melita, Man. At 5 p.m. to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Rose Barker, the bride entered the drawing room, leaning on the arm of her brother Reynolds. The bride was unattended, and looked charming in a princess robe of cream satin with trimmed with overlace and satin and wore a gold watch, a gift from the groom. After the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. W. Beattie, the guests sat down to a sumptuous repast. The bride's sister, Miss Susie, and Miss Barker, waited on the table. The bride was the recipient of many useful and beautiful presents, showing the high esteem in which the bride and groom are held by their many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Armsden left amid showers of rice for Melita, where their friends had gathered to welcome them to their new home.

CHILDREN!

Vinol is the only preparation of Cod Liver Oil that children will take and which is easily assimilated by their delicate digestive organs. It builds up firm, healthy flesh, and makes little limbs round and plump. Delicate children thrive on it and love to take it.

The body-building and strengthening properties of Cod Liver Oil—but no oil—combined with peptonate of iron, makes Vinol the ideal tonic for delicate children. It tastes good and always does good.

GROWING CHILDREN
play hard and work hard. They use up an enormous amount of energy and vitality that needs replacing. Give them Vinol regularly. It keeps them healthy, builds strong bones, sound flesh and muscle and pure rich blood.

SICKLY CHILDREN
cannot digest ordinary Cod Liver Oil or Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil on account of their greasy nature and nasty taste. It upsets their delicate little stomachs. Vinol contains all the medicinal value they do and tastes good besides.

DELICATE GIRLS
"My 9 year old daughter was weak, pale, and had no appetite. I gave her Vinol, and she began to thrive at once. She gained rapidly in weight, color and strength." — MRS. W. H. GILMORE, Durand, Mich.

"MY TWO CHILDREN, who were puny and ailing, rapidly gained flesh and strength when I began to give them Vinol. I proved that Vinol is a splendid tonic for delicate children." — MRS. C. AILEN, New Bedford, Mass.

The Apostles Imprisoned—Acts 5:17-42. Golden Text—Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Matt. 5:10.

Verses 17-18. If a child of God finds himself in prison which is the better thing to do, fret and worry about it, or be glad and rejoice?

If a good man is in prison is that the best place for him for the time?

Can an enemy, or circumstances, or his ignorance, or any other power, other than personal sin, put a Christian in a position where his highest interests are not being served to the utmost possible? (This question must be answered in relation to the affairs of the church.)

Verse 19. By what method did God release the Apostles from prison?

Does God in these days ever adopt similar methods, to release his servants from prison, and did he always adopt that particular method in those days? See note on Matthew 4:12 concerning John the Baptist.

May a Christian in prison to-day, be confident of God's release if it is the best thing necessary for the accomplishment of his work?

Verses 20-21. Does God now give us definite and specific instructions as to the work, and what the instructions are?

Should a Christian always testify to God's Temple when he has the opportunity, or should he wait for special instructions from God?

Verses 22-25. Is it all possible that all power can prevail against God, or those that do his will?

Does God sometimes permit us to run the risk of going to jail, in order to do good?

Verses 26-29. From the time of Jesus up till now, which class of men have caused the greatest persecution of God's people, the priests or the scribes?

What were the priests afraid would result from the teaching of the apostles? Will a free use of God's word, by a Christian, ever be angry at the teaching of what the doctrine taught?

What is the proper attitude to take, to all religious teachers?

Verses 30-32. The name of the chief, the savior of God, or has it ever been so?

What, if any, is the difference in the real authority to a human soul?

Verses 33-39. Is there any power, authority or threat, which can prevent the best way to build the church of God?

Is witnessing to Christians about the truths of Christ's death, resurrection, and life everlasting?

Verse 40. When the Sabbath or better observance evidence their victories and triumphs over the world, the flesh and the devil or not?

What was it that led these priests to the heart? when it should have made their hearts rejoice?

Verses 41-42. What is the better way to get to heaven, to suffer or to rejoice?

Is it not true that the heroes of the world are those who suffer for the right?

Who and what was this man (among) Hebrew rabbis, who was a member of the great council of the Apostles?

How many times was he mobbed? Was he for the Apostles, or those who were against them?

What is the daily duty and privilege of a Christian?

Lesson for Sunday, Feb. 21st, 1909. Acts 6:1-15. Golden Text—Acts 6:7. Matt. 5:13-16.

SOFTNESS OF SEALSKIN.

Is Rivaled by Hessen Hair Where Dandruff is Eradicated.

Sealskin is admired the world over for its softness and glossiness; and yet the human hair is equally as soft and glossy when healthy; and the radiant gloss of all hair trouble is dandruff, which is caused by a pestiferous parasite that saps the vitality of the hair at its root. Newbre's Herpicide is the only preparation that is fatal to the dandruff germ. Without dandruff there is no falling hair, but a luxuriant growth of glossy, soft hair is certain. Restoring the scalp won't cure dandruff. Kill the dandruff germ. Thousands of women owe their beautiful suits of hair to Newbre's Herpicide. Sold by leading druggists. Send 2c. in stamps to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

DEATH OF MR. GEORGE DUNNING

George Dunning, the subject of the following sketch, was born in Dennyville in 1833. He married early in life to Miss Elizabeth Leatch, of Fetherston, and began married life as a farmer near Tyendinaga Hasting County. For nine years he did good successful work on the farm and then moved to Napanee, where he and his brother Alfred, dealt largely in hops for a period of seven years. He then returned with his wife and family to the place of his birth and continued the hop business along with his father, besides doing carpenter and cabinet work in the village. After a time he and Mr. Wellington Boulter entered into partnership in the canning industry, which was then in its infancy in Canada, but soon blossomed out into a large and lucrative business. When this partnership was dissolved Mr. Dunning went into trade and carried on the same business for a period of seven years, when he returned to his farm on the Front of Sidney, at Demorestville. For a short time he had lived with a son-in-law Mr. Wesley Bowyer, in the village. A few years ago he had a stroke from which he never altogether recovered but he was able to be around and to attend to his usual duties up till within a few weeks of his death, when a general failure of his vital powers set in and he gradually became worse until the death which took place on Wednesday the 4th inst. He leaves a sorrowful void in the home and has led a quiet and most exemplary life being highly respected by all who knew him. In his company and instructions he found much to console him in his hours of trouble, darkness and of death and was active in the Sabbath school for many years. He was a man who always live truth, was able to help others into the light, and was a good example of Christian living to those throughout his life was to owe no man anything but love. Were it not for this fact he might have left more of this world's goods at the close of his life. But he was taken in the prime of a ransomed soul. In his death-bed he said to his pastor "Man I ought not to die at all but I am going to prepare for room for Saviour." He was in his 76th year and leaves behind him an aged widow and two sons and a daughter to mourn his departure.—Picton Times.

McKNIGHT—MILLS.

A quiet but impressive ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. M. Whyte of Enterprise, at the home of age at Mountain Grove, when Mr. Wm. A. McKnight, son of Robert McKnight, Esq., of the Township of Olden, was united in marriage to Miss Antionette Florence Mills, daughter of George Mills, Esq., of Mountain Grove. The only persons present besides the contracting parties were Mr. and Mrs. Richmond, of the parsonage, and Mr. James McQuire, of Sheffield, a cousin of the groom. Mr. McKnight was a general favorite among his associates, and was very popular with all classes. Miss Mills was a quiet humble Christian young woman, highly respected in the neighborhood, and a useful member of the church. All join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. McKnight a long, happy, prosperous and useful life.

Within, the arrangements were quaint and very simple. Besides the tower already mentioned, which contained the dining room and two bedrooms above it, the whole building, strictly conditioned by the shape of the hill on which it stood, consisted of three rows of small rooms on the ground floor. In one now lived the prince and his male guests, in the second the servants, in the third the stores. The ladies were to be accommodated in the tower above the dining room. The rows of rooms opened on a covered walk, or cloister, which ran round the inner court of the castle. The whole was solidly built of gray stone—a businesslike old hill fortress, strong by reason of its massive masonry and by position in which it stood. Comfort had no place in modern residence it had to be treated humorously, so Max declared, and found much pleasure in it from that point of view. The prince, always indifferent to physical comfort and even averse from luxury, probably did not realize how much of his ancestral strength abounded of his guests' hilarity. Of course, Peter's father, was doing heroic efforts in his sheepskin coat and high boots. His old wife was cold. Half a dozen servants completed the establishment, and of these three were spinsters. The bolder, Sophy learned to Max the only creatures whose comfort were at all on a modern footing. But the prince was entirely good and so was Sophy, as he told Max at Prasko. He loved the simple, lordly life. He loved even more, though perhaps less consciously, the sense of being among friends. He would not yield an inch to court popularity in Slavna, but his heart went out to meet the unsought devotion of Volseni, the mountain town, and its surrounding villages. Distant and self restrained in Slavna, here he was open, gay and full of an almost boyish ardor.

"It's worth coming here just to see its effect on you," Max told him as the two rode back together from Volseni on the day of Sophy's arrival. They had been at work, and the recruiting promised well.

The prince laughed gayly. "Coming here from Slavna is like fresh air after an oven," he said. "No need to watch your tongue or other peoples'. You can laugh when you like and frown when you like without a dozen people asking what's your motive for doing it."

"But really you shouldn't have chosen a diplomatist for your companion, sir, if you feel like that."

"I haven't," he smiled. "I've left the diplomatist down there and brought the soldier only. And now that the ladies are coming"—

"Ah, now we must watch our tongues a little bit!" Mme. Zerkovitch is very pretty, and the baroness might make me absolutely poetical!"

Least prying of men, yet Max von Holtbrandt could not resist sending with this speech a glance at his companion. The visit of the baroness compelled this much tribute to curiosity. But the prince's face was a picture of unembarrassed pleasure.

"Then be poetical! We'll all be poetical!" he cried merrily. "In the intervals of drilling be it understood!" he added, with a laugh.

Into this atmosphere, physical and moral—the exhilaration of keen mountain breezes, the brightness of a winter sun, the play of high hopes and of high spirit—came Sophy, with all her power of enjoying and her ardor in imagining. Her mind leaped from the sad embraces of the past to fly to the arms of the present, to beckon gladly to one future. No more than this had yet crowned into consciousness. She did not yet asking how for good or evil she stood or was to stand toward the prince. Fortune had done wonderful things for her and was doing more yet. That was enough, and beyond that for the moment she was not driven.

The mixture of poetry and drilling suited her to perfection. She got both when she rode over to Volseni with the prince. Crisp snow covered the ground and covered, too, the roofs of the old gray, hillside city—long, sloping roofs, with here and there a round tower with a snow cloak extinguisher atop. The town was no more than one long street, which bayed out at the farther end into a market place. It stood with its back against a mountain side, defended on the other three sides by a sturdy wall, which only now, after five centuries, began to crumble away at the top.

At the city gate bread and salt were brought to the bailiff and his companion, and she and he rode side by side down the long street to the market place. Here were two or three hundred tall, fine fellows waiting their leader. Drill had not yet brought formality. On the sight of him they gave a cheer and ran to form a ring round him. Many caught him by the hand and pressed or kissed it. But Sophy, too, claimed their eyes. It was very cold. She wore a short jacket of sable over her habit and a round cap of the same fur, gifts of Lady Meg's in the days of her benevolence. She was at the pitch of pleasure and excitement.

Lukovitch sprang for-ward and kissed her hand.

In a moment a quick witted fellow divined who she was. "The lady who saved him! The lady who saved him!" he cried at the full pitch of his voice. The prince drew himself up in the saddle, and saluted her. "Yes, the lady who saved me," he said. And he led the cheers now, and they mounted to her head with fumes of intoxication. It may be guessed how the red star glowed.

"And you'll save him if need be!" she cried quite indiscreetly. The prince smiled and shook his head, but the answer was an enraptured cheer. The bugle of Slavna was a recommendation to Volseni's increased regard, the like of danger a match to its fiery enthusiasm.

"A favor, bailiff, a favor!" cried a young man of distinguished appearance and fine build. He seemed to be well known and to carry weight, for there were shouts of "Hear Lukovitch! Hear Lukovitch!" and one called, with a laugh, to Sophy, "Heed to the Wolf!"

"What is it, Lukovitch?" asked the prince.

"Make the lady of our company, bailiff." Yes, cheers were raised. "Make her a lieutenant of our artillery."

Sophy laughed gayly.

"I have his majesty's authority to choose my officers," said the prince, smiling. "Baroness, will you be a lieutenant and wear our sheepskins in place of your sables there?"

"It is your uniform, monseigneur," Sophy answered, bowing her head.

Lukovitch sprang forward and kissed her hand.

"For our bailiff's preserver as for our bailiff, men of Volseni!" he cried loudly. The answering cheer brought tears to Sophy's sparkling eyes. For a moment she could not see her prince nor the men who thus took her to their hearts.

Suddenly in the midst of her exultation she saw a face on the outskirts of the throng. A small, pale man stood there, dressed in unobtrusive tweeds, but making no effort to conceal himself. He was just looking on, a stranger to the town, interested in the picturesque little scene. The face was that of Lieutenant Ilastatz.

She watched the drilling of the gunners and then rode back with the prince, escorted beyond the gates by a cheering throng, which had now been joined by many stood there. women. Dusk was falling and the cold city took on a ghostly look. The glory of the sunshine had departed. Sophy shivered a little beneath her furs.

"Monseigneur, did you see Rastatz?" she asked.

"No; I didn't see him, but I knew he was here. Lukovitch told me yesterday."

"And not in uniform?"

"He has leave, no doubt, and his uniform wouldn't make his stay in Volseni any more pleasant."

"What's he there for?" she asked fretfully.

"Ah, baroness, you must inquire of those who sent him, I think." His tone was light and merry.

"To spy on you, I suppose! I hate his being there. He—he isn't worthy to be in dear Volseni."

"You and Volseni have fallen in love with each other," he said, for spying, all I'm doing I do openly and all I shall do, but I don't blame Stenovics for keeping an eye on me, or Stasbitz either. I do my best to keep an eye on them, you know. We needn't be afraid of Rastatz, we who have beaten Hercules Mistrich in open fight!"

"Oh, well, away with him!" cried Sophy. "The snow's not frozen—shall we canter home, monseigneur?"

Merrily they cantered through the fast falling evening side by side. Rastatz was out of mind now. All was out of mind save the fascination of the crisp air, the silent suggestion of gathering night, her prince who rode beside her. The dark mass of the tower of Prasko rose too soon for her wishes or her eyes. She drew reign, sighing.

"If life were just all that and nothing else!" she said, as he helped her to dismount and the grooms led the horses off. She stopped halfway up the steep wooden causeway and turned to look back toward Volseni. The prince stood close by her.

"That's good, but life's better things," he said softly. "To ride together is good and to play together, but to work together is better still, baroness."

For a moment Sophy was silent. Then she laughed in joy.

"Well, I'm to wear your uniform henceforth, monseigneur!"

He drew her hand and kissed it. Very slowly and gradually she drew it away, her eyes meeting his as he raised his head. The heavy door at the top of the causeway opened. Marie Zerkovitch stood there, holding a lamp high in her hand. The sudden light flooded their faces. For a moment more he looked at her, then went down again on his way to the stables. Sophy ran up to where Marie Zerkovitch stood.

"You heard our horses?" she asked gayly.

But there was no responsive smile on Marie's lips. For her, too, the light had shone on those two faces, and she was sorely troubled.

The next day again they rode together, and the next. On the third day Sophy rode into Volseni in the sheepskin cap and tunic, a short habit of blue hiding her leather breeches and coming halfway over her long boots. The prince gave her his hand as they rode into the market place.

Marie Zerkovitch trembled. Max von Hollbrandt shrugged his shoulders with a laugh, and little Rastatz drove back to Slavna through the night. He thought that he had seen enough for his purposes. His report might be useful in the city on the Krath.

Chapter Eighteen

IN Slavna Dr. Natchoff continued his reassuring reports until the public at large was so reassured as to ask for no more reports even of the most optimistic description. Let the state of mind of the few people behind the scenes was very different. Stafnitz's confusion held away there. The time was short. That was the ruling thought and the governing fact. It might be very short, and the end might come without warning. The secret was well kept, but to those to whom he spoke at all Natchoff spoke openly. The king's life hung on a thread, which the least accident might break. With perfect quiet and tranquillity he might live a year, possibly two years. Any shock or overstrain would precipitate the end. Countess Ellenburg and her confidential friends knew this, the king knew it himself, and Leyage, his valet, knew it. There the possession of the secret stopped.

The king was gay and courageous. Courage, at least, he had never lacked. He seemed almost indifferent. The best years were over, he said, and it was not an end. An end swift, without pain, without waiting! There was much to be said for it. Leyage agreed with his master and told him so in his usual blunt fashion. They agreed together not to cry about it, and the king went fishing still. But the time was short, and he pushed on his one great idea with a zeal and an earnestness foreign to his earlier habit. He would see his son married or at least betrothed before he died. He would see the great marriage in train, the marriage which was to establish forever the rank and prestige of the house of Stefanovitch. The Prince of Slavna must set forth on his travels, seeking a wife. The king even designated a princess of most unquestionable exaltedness as the first object of his son's attentions or pursuit. With an unusual peremptoriness and an unusual independence he sent Stenovics orders to communicate his wishes directly to the prince. Stenovics received the royal memorandum on the day on which Lieutenant Ilastatz returned to Slavna with the fruits of his observation at Volseni in his hand.

At first sight the king's commands were totally at variance with the interests of the Ellenburg coterie and with the progress of their great plan. They did not want the house of Stefanovitch strengthened and glorified in the person of its present heir apparent. But the latter was more complicated than a first glance showed. There were the guns to be considered as well and the gunners training at Volseni. These would be sources of strength and prestige to the prince, not less valuable, more tangible, than even a great match. And now the prince was on the spot. Send him on his travels! The time was short. When the short time ended he might be far away. Finally he might go and yet take nothing by his journey. The exalted princess would be hard to win. The king's family pride might defeat itself by making him pitch his hopes and his claims too high.

On the whole, the matter was difficult. The three chief conspirators altered their conviction of this in their characteristic ways. Countess Ellenburg became more pious than ever; General Stenovics more silent, at least more prone to restrict his conversation to grunts; Colonel Stafnitz more gay and interested in life. He, too, was fishing and in his favorite waters, and he had hopes of a big rise.

There was one contingency impossible to overlook. In spite of his father's orders the prince might refuse to go. A knowledge of the state of the king's health would afford him a very strong excuse, a suspicion of the plans of the interested party a strong motive. The king himself had foreseen the former danger and feared its effect on his dominant hopes. By his express command the prince was kept in ignorance. He had been amply reassured by Dr. Natchoff. On the latter point the coterie had, they flattered themselves, nothing to fear. On what ground, then, could the prince justify a refusal? His manners? That would be unwarrantable. The king would not accept the plea. Did Rastatz's report suggest any other ground for refusal? If it did it was one which to the king's mind would seem more unwarrantable still.

There is no big game without its risk; but, after full consideration, Stenovics and Stafnitz decided that the king's wishes were in their interest and should be communicated to the prince without delay. They had more chances for them than against them. If their game had its dangers—well, the time might be very short.

In these days Countess Ellenburg made a practice of shutting herself up in her private rooms for as much as two abhitional hours every day. She told the king that she sought a quiet time for meditation and prayer. King Louis shrugged his shoulders. Meditation wouldn't help matters, and, in face of Dr. Natchoff's diagnosis of the condition of his heart, he must confess to a serious doubt as to about prayer. He had outlived his love for the countess, dout to the end he found in her a source of habitual comfort, and so, being ig if not her ambitions at least her regrets, understanding how these regrets, when they become very acute, had to be met by set acts of piety. Naturally they would be acute now in view of Natchoff's diagnosis. He thanked her for her concern and bade her by all means go and pray.

What was the stuff of her prayers—the stuff behind the words? No doubt she prayed for her husband's life. No doubt she prayed for her son's well being. Very likely she even prayed that she might not be led into temptation or to do anything to bring about her loss, for on it was her theory that the prince himself would ruin his own chances and throw the crown away. It is not easy always to be sure of conscious insincerity.

Yet the devil's advocate would have had small difficulty in placing a fair face on her prayers, in exhibiting what lay below the words, in suggesting how it was that she came forth from her secret devotions not happy and tranquilized, but with weary eyes and her narrow lips close set in stern self control. Her prayer that she might do nothing wrong was a prayer that the prince might do nothing right. If that prayer were granted sin on her part would become superfluous. She prayed not to be led into temptation—that sounded quite orthodox. Was she to presume to suggest to Heaven the means by which temptation should be avoided?

Stenovics, skillfully humored this shade of hypocrisy. When he spoke to her there were in his mouth no such words as plans or schemes or hopes or ambitions—no, nor claims nor rights. It was always "the possibilities we are compelled to contemplate," "the steps we may be forced into taking," "the necessities of mere self defense," "the interests of the kingdom," "the supreme evil of civil strife," which last most respectable phrase meant that it was much better to jockey the prince out of the throne than to fight him for it. Colonel Stafnitz bit his lip and gnawed his mustache during these interviews. The countess saw—and hated him. She listened back to Stenovics' churchgoing phrases and impassive face. Throughout the whole affair the general probably never once mentioned to her in plain language the one and only object of all their hopes and efforts. In the result business took rather longer than the original telegraphic phrases ran to may syllables, but concessions must be made to piety. Nor was the countess so singular. We should often know what we like best if we were obliged to define it accurately and aloud.

After one of these conferences the countess had prayed. It may be presumed that she prayed against the abhorrence of a cast iron terminology. Perhaps she also urged upon God in prayer in in many books and months more of an argument than a petition, that all marriages were on one and the same principle, that the choice was merely a matter of a particular variety named in some countries morganatic. Of the keeping of conjugal vows contrary to the commonest views of Heaven we are all aware that churches, and sometimes states, too, are apt to know or count nothing.

CURE IT IN ONE DAY.

COUGHS AND COLDS DISAPPEAR LIKE MAGIC WHEN HYOMEI IS USED.

If the thousands of people who suffer from hacking cough and agonizing colds would arouse themselves sufficiently to follow this advice, they would cease to complain within 24 hours.

Here is the advice, if you take it and you are afterwards sorry that you did, it won't cost you a penny.

Go to T. B. Wallace, the druggist, and purchase from him a Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) outfit. It will only cost you $1.00. Take it home; use it according to directions and if it does not cure your cough or cold, take it back and T. B. Wallace will refund the purchase price.

Mrs. Coon, of John Street, Acton, Ont., says—"I had a swelling come near my eyes which was caused by the catarrhal condition. I had to cough up the bad impurities that dropped into my throat, and it felt as if a hard cold had attacked me, right in my head, nose and glands hear. A week's treatment of Hyomei overcame my trouble. I am glad to endorse Hyomei.

When you use Hyomei you don't swallow nauseous drugs. You simply breathe in the soothing, pleasant and antiseptic air through the little pocket inhaler that comes with each outfit. As this medicated air passes over the inflamed parts—laid comes almost at once—relief follows.

Hyomei is also guaranteed by T. B. Wallace to cure catarrh, croup, grip and asthma.

A LUNATIC'S TERRIBLE RECORD

One of the most terrible tragedies which has ever been recorded resulted from the mental derangement of George Grant Stewart, on Sunday morning last, when in the throes of insanity he murdered or assaulted at least eight people, two of whom are dead, two others dangerously wounded, and three more slightly injured. Stewart, who had shown some symptoms of insanity when in the West, in the form of attacks of typhoid fever, was regarded as slightly queer, but not considered very dangerous. He had shot at the home of his brother on Saturday night. He had passed a restless night, when on arising early Sunday morning his brother, who had slept on the sofa to watch him, was attacked by him, and as he tried to stop him leaving the house was struck and shocked down. When the latter regained consciousness a stake nearby, and armed with this and a revolver which he had possessed himself of, he started for the residence of John Spanhouse, across the road. Reaching the door, it was opened by Mrs. Spanhouse, whom he shot several times, as soon as he entered the room. Mrs. Spanhouse ran out in time to see him run when she fled from him to relieve her shooting her several times and striking her with the stake. She is very dangerously injured and will probably die. At this moment James Spanhouse appeared, and armed with an old military rifle, ran downstairs. Stewart wrested the rifle from his hands and struck Spanhouse over the head with it, crushing his skull in, and breaking the rifle-stock. Stewart then left the house and started for his father's house some three miles off, and on the way called at the home of an old man named [illegible] Wilson, attacked him with the clubbed rifle, leaving him painfully injured, but not seriously. He then called at the residence of C. J. Pound and attacked G. Beaumont, the hired man, inflicting injuries which it is feared will terminate fatally, also attacking Mrs. Pound, but not injuring her severely. Mrs. Pound telephoned to W. D. Tasker, of Napanee Valley, for assistance. Tasker met Stewart on the road, and endeavored to placate him, but was beaten off, and finally the maniac armed the rifle at him, and pulled the trigger, but the weapon failed to explode. Stewart then went home and went to bed, where he was arrested sleeping peacefully in his father's home at about 2 o'clock p.m. In Shelburne jail on Sunday evening his mania again broke forth, and he attempted, while heavily manacled to break his jailer.

TAMWORTH.

The Epworth League gave a driving party to Joseph Huffman's, on Wednesday evening last. The Serpentine Singers gave a grand concert in the Town Hall to a crowded house, on Monday evening last. Proceeds $82.90. Fletcher Diamond and son Tom, left on Wednesday last for Michigan to visit his sister. Miss Berniece Saul, of Belleville College, is home on a visit. Mrs. Bowerman, of Trenton, is visiting her uncle, Mr. Sampson Shields. D. B. Floyd was in Marlbank on Tuesday last on business. Jas. Saul is hauling brick to Arden. All winter goods at cost, at Floyd & Co's. Miss Pearl Murphy, of Tamworth, has secured a school near Stoco, where she will use the rod of correction.

The annual cheesemeeting of the patrons of W. J. Paul's, Esq., factories was held in the Town Hall, on Saturday last. A full report of the business of the past season was read, and while the season of 1908 was not as good as the preceding one, yet 3,200,415 lbs. of milk were made up into 3,063 cheese, weighing 319,673 lbs., which sold for $37,982.07. The average paid patrons for season was 90.28 per 100 lbs. of milk. 10.6 lbs. milk was the average used to make 1 lb. cheese. The meeting was well attended, and the harmony and good will which prevailed attested to the satisfaction of the patrons for the past season, and confidence they have in Mr. Paul. The officers of last season were chosen again for the year 1909.

Work and Worry Weakens Women

New Health and Strength Can be Had Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

It is useless to tell a hard working woman to take the easily and not to worry. But it is the duty of every woman to save her strength as much as possible; to take her duties as lightly as may be and to build up her system to meet any unusual demand. It is her duty to herself and to her family, for her future health depends upon it.

To guard against a complete breakdown in health the blood must be kept rich and red and pure. No other medicine does this so well as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. This medicine actually makes new, red blood, strengthens the nerves, vitalizes the organs and keeps every organ healthily toned up. Women cannot always rest when they should but they can keep their strength and keep disease away by the occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which have done more to lighten the cares of weak women than any other medicine.

Mrs. James H. Ward, Lord's Cove, N.B., says:—"About two years ago I suffered so much from nervous prostration that I was little better than a helpless wreck. I suffered from headaches and a constant feeling of dizziness. The least unusual noise would startle me and set my heart palpitating violently. I had little or no appetite and grew so weak that I was hardly able to drag myself about, and could not do my housework in the every way it was in a deplorable condition. As the medicine I had been taking seemed to do me no good, my husband got a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had only been taking the Pills for a couple of weeks when I seemed to feel some new life coursing through me, encouraged me to continue the treatment. From that on my strength gradually but surely returned, and in the course of a few more weeks I was once more a well woman, able to do my housework, and feeling better than I had done for years. I have since remained well and I feel sure I owe my good health to the healing power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Every other weak, sickly, worn out woman should follow the example of Mrs. Ward and give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. These Pills will send new blood coursing through the veins and bring brightness and energy to the weak and downcast. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Wall Paper Talks!

The season is approaching when many persons' minds turn naturally to the thought of Housecleaning.

To the average lady or gentleman there is a great deal of worry about the particular kind of Paper to be used in the various rooms to produce the most pleasing effect.

The first intuition of a Home is that it be "A good place to live in." It should, therefore, express Cheerfulness? Restfulness? Harmony?

You have been in homes that fairly radiate these virtues, and perhaps the cost of Papering was not a tenth of that expended on another home that is gloomy and depressing in the extreme. We are, naturally, affected by our surroundings. This has been acknowledged since the first man looked upon the first sweet white sputter ... since the first colorist draped his stage with black velvet ... since the first red ... Juelia was taken into the first picture.

Therefore, we must strive, in the selections we make of Wall Paper, to get a color or combination of colors that will not jar on our nerves.

It shall be my object in a few TALKS on the subject, to give you some light on the subject of Color Harmony.

Did you ever see a room draped entirely in Black that expressed Cheerfulness? Did you ever see a room entirely in White that expressed Restfulness? Between these two extremes are a vast range of colors and combination of colors that will Harmonize with your surroundings as well as your nerves.

Don't forget that choosing a Wall Paper is something like choosing a wife. You will have to live with your choice. The John Gilpin chorus is fine—you must all hear it but even that would become monotonous if listened to for 14 hours a day 365 days in a year. Don't choose a Brass Band Paper—you'll have to live with it.

A startling effect will strike you as pleasing at first, but you'll tire of it sooner than of some quiet design.

Of colors used, Green in various shades is the safest, as Green will harmonize with nearly every other color. Browns and Greys follow closely for first choice.

Next week I'll give you some of my ideas about different rooms.

Any information I can give anyone at any time, I shall be glad to give.

All my new Papers are in, and why not Paper now while you can get good help?

Think it over, and call on

PAUL'S

For Wall Paper.

SPENT $3,000 SEARCHING FOR HEALTH.

FROM SHOAL LAKE MAN COMES THE FOLLOWING WONDERFUL STORY

Mr. Robert Squires says:—"I have spent over $3,000 in search for health; have travelled from place to place looking for suitable climate. I came to the conclusion that climate made no difference in curing throat and lung troubles. At the health resorts consumptives died there as at any other place else so I determined to find a home remedy. A friend advised me to use Psychine. The first few bottles gave great relief from coughing and seemed to ease the pain in the lungs. Within a month the cough and night sweats had disappeared, and I had greatly regained my strength. I used ten bottles, but my case was a serious one, and I didn't begrudge the cost, for I was completely cured after medical men considered my case hopeless. My lungs are now sound and no sign of disease whatever is apparent."

How strange it is that we often overlook or despise the remedies near at hand. In Psychine we have the greatest and most successful tonic this country has known. There is life in every dose! The proprietors want you to prove their statement by sending for a sample. Cut out the coupon and mail with your name and address to the Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, Toronto, and we will gladly send you a TRIAL BOTTLE free. All druggists and stores sell at 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

CROYDON

A large number from here took in the concert given by I.O.L. No. 756, of Centreville, on Friday evening, Feb 5th, and report it the best yet in the way of a concert. The play under the Tamworth Dramatic Club, and the large crowd in attendance were well more than their money's worth in seeing and hearing one of the best performances ever held in Centreville. Manager Clifton Hand deserves credit for having the choir so well in hand, and Messrs. Drumond and Mc-Alee kept the crowd shaking on their bottle. Prof. Wagar's lecture was one of the features of the evening. The military drill under Captain Hand and Lieut. Hannah was admired by one and all. Messrs. Dan. and Ed. McFarquar furnished some splendid violin music, accompanied by Messrs. Rose and Wagar on the piano and cornet. Prof. Bertie Dwyer's solo dancing brought applause, and was encored repeatedly. After the programme, the ladies of Croydon, who are never behind on any occasion, served a splendid lunch, and it is needless to say none went away hungry, or if they did the fault was their own. GREAT MEN WHO HAVE PROVED ZAM-BUK.

SCIENTIST, ANALYST, MAGISTRATE, AND WAR CORRESPONDENT ALL TESTIFY.

Men and women great in point of knowledge, position and experience, say that Zam-Buk stands superior to all other healing substances. Read the opinions of the following eminent men:—

Mr. C. E. Sanford, of Weston, Kings Co., N.S., a magistrate, a School Commissioner, and Baptist Deacon, says:—"Zam-Buk cured me of eczema on my ankle, which had defied every other remedy tried during twenty years. It also cured me of piles; and I take pleasure in recommending it to my fellow-men."

Mr. Frank Scudamore, the famous war correspondent, who has gone through twenty-nine battles, and undergone dysentries during the Boer War were scoggerly read from coast to coast in Canada, says:—"Owing to the poisonous dye from an under garment penetrating a slight scratch, my legs broke out in ulcers. At one time I had seventeen deep holes in my left leg, into each of which I could put my thumb; and had four more similar ulcers on my right leg. Remedy after remedy failed to heal these, and I was well nigh worn out with pain and lack of sleep. Zam-Buk was introduced, and I am glad to say that it gave me speedy relief. A few weeks' treatment resulted in a perfect cure of all the ulcers."

Dr. Andrew Wilson, whose reputation as a scientist is world wide, in a book recently published "Hombs and Jabs on First Aid" says:—"Zam-Buk may be relied upon as an antiseptic dressing which requires no preparation, and has the particular advantage of possessing unique healing properties."

Mr. W. Lascelles-Scott, the famous analyst to the Royal Commission for Victoria, says:—"I have no hesitation in certifying the entire purity of Zam-Buk. It is of great healing power for open wounds or injuries."

So one could go on quoting authority after authority, all of the opinion, based on personal tests, that Zam-Buk should be in every home. Zam-Buk is a sure cure for cuts, burns, scratches, cold sores, chapped hands, ulcers, scalp sores, ringworm, blood-poisoning, and eczema. It is also used extensively for piles, for which it is without equal. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. a box; or by post from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. You are warned against harmful imitations.

AN EXCELLENT CLEANING FLUID.

The following recipe contains nothing injurious, never takes out the stiffness from fabrics (as from vellings and chiffons), and is at the same time a deodorizer, an antiseptic and a preventive of moths. "Says a Woman's Home Companion for February.—"Sulphuric ether one dram, alcohol, two drams, chloroform, one dram, oil of lavender, one dram, three times. This amount to one quart best gasoline. The oil of lavender may be omitted if desired, as in cleaning anything white it has a tendency to yellow. To clean a light dress skirt, put double or treble the amount of these ingredients. Men's trousers can be sponged over night in this, and when pressed are as good as new. It is fine for restoring plushes, as it never takes the curl out. Be sure to shake out in the air until thoroughly dry. Put in bottles carefully with the fluid. Let the article to be cleaned lie in the liquid for a while according to the degree of dirt. Articles can remain in all night without injury. The fabric is quickly dried, allowing to settle, and pouring off very carefully, one can use the fluid over and over again."

GIVE THEM THE LASH.

Mr. Robert Bickerdike proposes to amend the statutes to provide for the infliction of the lash for wife-beating. This power should certainly be in the hands of judges, and they should use it freely. There is no class of prisoners who deserve less sympathy than the cowardly and brutal wife-beaters, and they should be taken as a matter of course to the whipping post. There could be no wife for mercy for the bullying poltroon who should ever marry her, but who is the most savage assailant. Her plea is very apt to be coaxed by a desire on her part to avoid punishment he will take. Let her when his sentence is served. But if the lash is well applied, he will never after have a wholesome fear of her power to get it applied again."

The above clipping from The Montreal Star of January 26th, is but one of many expressions from this great journal on the lash as a preventive of wrong-doing.

A TRIP TO SWITZERLAND.

The following letter was received by Mr. H. A. Rose, from his grandson, 13 years old:—

The Orchard,
Sudbury Hill,
Harrow-on-the-Hill.
Jan. 28th, 1909.

Dear Grandpa.—Thank you very much for your letter, it was a very interesting one. I have had no time for riding in the holidays, as I spent most of the time in Switzerland or going motoring.

Our car is not quite as good as those you saw near Hyde Park, it is a 18-30 4 cyl., while the Napiers you saw were 45 h.p. 6 cyl. The body however seats 7, and is very nice, and we can get over 55 miles per hour out of her.

Harrow is rather dull after London, and there is very little to do, the shooting being not very good, and there is nothing much else to do.

I am very sorry to hear that grandma is worse, and I hope she will soon be well.

George and I went to the dentists the other day, expecting to have a bad time of it, but to our joy and the dentist's surprise, he found nothing that needed doing. We began school again to-day, and will probably break up on April 5th, this being the shortest term in the year.

I will now give you an account of our trip to Switzerland.

Jan. 1st.—We left at 9 a.m., in our car for Charing Cross, arriving there at 9.45 a.m. We Tuesday left the 10 o'clock boat express for Folkstone, which took 2 hours to reach it—8 a.m. on the 2d by a heavy fog. At this hour the fog cleared, and we entered the harbor and came by train to Paris. We left Boulogne at 2 a.m. on the 2d, and reached Paris at about 6 a.m. We stayed an hour and had some breakfast. Then we took a local train to another station and caught a train leaving at 8.25 a.m. for Ballaigues, which place we did not reach until 8 p.m., being 3 hours late. The names of the delay were that at Dijon we were detained by a wreck, further on the engine broke down, and a little after 6 p.m., one of the carriages had to be detached on account of a hot box. always thought Japanese trains were dirty and slow, but they are not compare with the French and Swiss.

When we arrived at Ballaigues we had a 40 minute sleigh drive to the hotel. I sat next to a clergyman who talked the whole way to the hotel about astronomy, so I was rather glad when we reached the hotel.

Jan. 3d.—We did not get up until 10 o'clock this morning, for we had hardly any sleep the night before. After breakfast we spent the whole day tobogganing. The slide proper was about half mile long, but one could go 4 or 5 miles further up and then tobogganback to the hotel. The run had 3 corners, two of which it was very difficult to steer, and at which a great many people came to grief. There are lots of things to do in Switzerland one can run skate, ski, tobogganing, sleigh driving, etc., and in the evenings there is a concert or games. Skis are long straight pieces of wood turned up at one end and with places in the middle for the feet. They generally go some distance into the mountains, and then skis back.

Jan. 4th.—I spent almost the whole day in tobogganing, either alone or with other people. There is a Hotel Tea Room, Confiserie, a Bootmaker and other boys from smaller schools in the hotel. This afternoon George's mother and father went to Mont, a sleigh drive into France, which is only a few miles distant. They were examined twice, once by the French customs and once by the Swiss.

5th.—Part of this morning, and until tea time this afternoon we tried skiing. It was fine fun, and I soon got into the way of it, although at first I had a good many falls. The rest of the day I tobogganed and George tried skating. The weather has been fine to-day, and at noon we had a very good view of the Mont Blanc Alps. This evening there are dancing and sports on the rink. I do not know how to skate so I cannot take part in them.

6th.—I spent the day in skiing. I am getting on quite well, being able to go down quite steep slopes without falling.

7th.—There were some games on the ice this morning. I went skiing, but the snow was not very good to-day, as it has been softened by the sun. This afternoon I tobogganed, and in the evening there was a dance.

8th.—It snowed hard all day. I tobogganed in the morning and in the afternoon played games. This evening there was another dance.

9th.—I skated almost all day, and after tea we made a bob-sleigh and got a crew of 5.

10th.—I skated part of the morning and in the afternoon went to see some villagers ski. They got on the top of a steep slope about half a mile long, and then rushed down the hillside at a terrible pace. When about 100 yards from the bottom they would turn and go up the hill on the impetus they had collected in going down.

11th.—There was a toboggan race to-day, and each toboggan had to carry one man and two ladies. There were about 24 toboggans entered in the race. George and I both entered, but one of the ladies on my toboggan fell off so we were disqualified.

On the 12th, 13th and 14th the weather was much the same. On the 15th I went for a walk with a party to see an old castle. On my way back I and another gentleman made a bet one time. We walked from the castle to the hotel in 45 minutes, the distance being 6 kilom., (about 4 miles). To-day I went with a party to climb a mountain about 6 miles from the hotel. When we reached the bottom most of the party started to climb, and I and another gentleman were the only ones to climb till about half way up we were tobogganed down to the hotel, which made it very hard. Near the top, however, we reached frozen snow, so if the top three was a bad hill storm, and we could hardly see. On the way down we lost our way, and had to make a circle to find our onward track.

In the evening at 12 o'clock we left the hotel and reached Paris at 7 a.m. We then went to Boulogne, and after a rough crossing reached Harrow at 5 p.m.

This account is made up from extracts from my diary. I hope you are quite well and are enjoying yourself.

Your affectionate grandson,
ALFRED SALE.

STEAMER NIAGARA SOLD.

The steamer Niagara, well known on the Bay of Quinte, has been sold by her former owners, the Hepburn Bros. of Picton, to T. Thompson & Son of Port Arthur, who intend to run her on the north shore route of Lake Superior. The Niagara is a Scotch built boat, having been erected on the banks of the Clyde. She is an iron-hull craft. At first she was a paddle wheeler by the name Druid, later her name was changed to Canada. Messrs. Hepburn acquired her some eight years ago, using her for a few seasons as an excursion boat around the bay. Then the steamer was used as a freighter to Montreal until last season, when she was chartered by the Hamilton Steamboat Company to run out of Toronto. The Niagara is to be delivered to her new owners by the opening of navigation.

MOONEY—McCORMACK.

A very pleasing and happy event was solemnized on Wednesday, the 3rd inst., at the Church of the Assumption, Erinsville, when Miss Susannah, only daughter of the late James McCormack, Tamworth West, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. William Mooney, a prosperous young farmer of Pierson, Manitoba. Promptly at eight o'clock the bridal party entered the church the bride leaning on the arm of her brother, Mr. James McCormack, of New York, as the organ pealed forth Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Nellie Killoran, in her usual efficient style. The Rev. Father Carey performed the ceremony by celebrating a High Nuptial Mass. After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's mother, where a sumptuous repast was served them to which the immediate relatives of the contracting parties did ample justice, and gave the bride and groom their best wishes by their responsive toasts. The bride was handsomely attired in a suit of brown pean-de-soie silk with brown silk velvet picture hat to match, her coat being brown broadcloth fur-lined with sable collar, and was ably assisted by Miss Aggie Hogan, of Stoco, attired in a suit of navy blue poplin, with picture hat to match. The groom was most ably supported by Mr. James McCormack of New York. The bride was very popular among her friends, for her bright vivacious manner and kindness of heart, and the groom is to be congratulated on his choice. The large number of costly and useful presents testified to the esteem in which the young couple are held, among them being a large sum of gold, the gift of the groomsman. The afternoon and evening were spent in social amusements. At an early hour the party dispersed to their respective homes, all wishing Mr. and Mrs. Mooney a happy and prosperous journey through life. We extend congratulations.

A War Correspondent's Exciting Adventures

WHAT HE OWES TO ZAM-BUK.

Mr. Frank Scudamore, the well-known war correspondent, who went to the Canadian Expedition during the late Boer War, owes his health to Zam-Buk. He had undergone many battles, but a scratch which turned to blood-poisoning nearly ended his days. Zam-Buk saved him and he writes as follows:

"I have proved Zam-Buk such a blessing that I want others to know of its merits. The poisonous dye in some underclothing I was wearing got into a scratch I had sustained and blood-poisoning followed. My entire body was followed by great pain and swelling, and then ulcers broke out on my legs. For some time I could not walk a few steps now even, but my foot, to the ground. On my left leg below the knee I had seven sore ulcers which caused holes, into which I could put my thumb. On the right leg I had four sore ulcers. Medical treatment failed to relieve, homely remedies were applied in vain. Week followed week and I gradually got worse, until I was worn out and could not get any sleep. On the advice of a friend I obtained some Zam-Buk and left off everything else while I used it. It soothed away pain at the instant, relief from the pain, and in a few days I noticed that the sore healing. Zam-Buk did the ulcers. This cleansing ulcers, and gladly I persevered with the Zam-Buk treatment. All by bit the poisonous matter was drawn out. The ulcers were healed, and new healthy skin grew over the previously diseased places. I am now quite clean, and can honestly mention these facts that other sufferers from skin disease may know of something which will cure them."

Zam-Buk defies rashes from ordinary ointments and lotions, as they often prove. For all skin diseases, eczema, scalp sore, ringworm, children's sore heads and sore throat, cuts, it is a speedy cure. It also cures blood-poisoning, ulcers, scaly eruptions, barber's itch, bad legs, chapped hands, and sore lips. Rubbed well into the pores effected it cures rheumatism, neuralgia, and sciatica. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price 4 boxes for $2.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON BY REV. DR. LINSCOTT FOR THE INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER BIBLE STUDY CLUB FOR FEB. 21st, 1909.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)

Stephen the First Christian Martyr—Acts vi.; 1 to viii.; 2.

Study Acts vi.; 8-15; vii.; 51 to viii.; 3.

Golden Text—"Who was Stephen?"

In view of present day distinctions, would you call Stephen a layman or a clergyman?

Why is it not a crime against the gospel, that the preaching of its gospel is so profoundly emasculated, that our pulpits to-day in the towns and cities, are practically closed to the leaders of the church, so that even men like Stephen, the best, have to preach in church pulpits? (This question is to be answered in writing by members of the club.)

What was the secret of Stephen's power as a preacher, and to what extent may we possess the same secret?

Verse 9—When in a community of thoughtful men, who oppose the gospel, can its claims be established better by behavior than by ordinary preaching or declamation?

Verse 10—If you defeat an opponent in a debate, that is not likely to convert him to Christianity; and if you agree in argument after truth, but it is likely to convert the hearers?

Verses 11-13—What effect did Stephen's victory have upon the people? What effect did it probably have upon the audience?

Is there any necessary moral value in mere opinion, and will men, even in a condemned because of wrong doctrines? i.e. wrong opinions?

When a man with right views of truth, gets angry at the man with wrong views, and does mean things to him, that is better than with gentle spirit in which to try to do better man of the two?

Why is it that men who profess religion, can act so like devils, when new truth is presented to them as in Stephen's case?

Verse 14—Can a man's word in a right cause disgrace, be depended upon, as a matter of fact, if he is untrue to his religious opinions?

How is it that unrighteous men will fight for their false ideals, and we men of truth from no sort of rascality to accomplish their purposes?

Can you give any other reason than their unrighteousness, why they acted on such principle, the hatred of these men for a godly character as Stephen's?

Verse 15.—Did the fact that Stephen looked like an angel, make his persecutors love him, or hate him, more?

Chap. vii.; Verse 54.—What was it which cuts wrong doers to the heart more than anything else?

If these rulers had been ashamed of the charge Stephen brought against them, would they have been cut to the heart as they were?

Verse 56.—What do you understand by Stephen's vision, and did he actually see it?

What did Stephen see when he looked up into heaven?

Would the onlookers have probably seen the same things as Stephen, if they had looked up?

Verse 57.—Did they believe Stephen's testimony as to what he saw?

Do cold professors of religion as a rule have any confidence in the experiences of godly souls, and talk with them?

Verse 58.—How would these people justify themselves in mentally, the slaying of Stephen?

What was the method of stoning a victim to death in those days?

Verses 59-60—Does the spirit depart at death, or go into a state of unconscious existence with the body?

By what power can a man love or forgive his enemies?

Chap. viii; Verses 1-3.—Why were not Jesus and Saul's sin in the stoning of Stephen, and did they suffer the chief results of the sin of the mob?

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS.

The members and friends of the Sunday School met on the 12th inst. at Mr. George M. Emmons, The Pines, who is leaving the neighborhood, on Friday evening, and presented him with a secretary and the following address:

The Pines, Feb. 12th, 1909.

To Mr. George Emmons.

Friend George,—We, the pupils and teachers and friends of The Pines Sunday School have heard with regret that you are about to take your departure from among us, and we feel we cannot let this opportunity pass without some tangible expression of our friendship. By presenting you with this secretary we cannot find suitable words to express our feelings, but we feel sure that it will be accepted in the same kindly spirit in which it is given. For three years now you have been a devoted attendant at our Sunday School; ready and willing to help in everything that would be for the benefit of the school, and have filled the office you held cheerfully and well, and you may be assured in whatever position you are called to fill you will have our regard and sympathy. May you live long and prosper and be a protection to your mother, who has also a warm place in our hearts for her many little kind acts. We will miss you all as a family, and may the Great Father protect each and every one of you till death, and may we all meet where there are no more partings.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

On Thursday evening of last week the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ramsay drove to their home to spend an evening, prior to their departure for their new home near Newburgh.

After some time spent in games and music, a supper of oysters, cake and coffee was served, and then followed the principal feature of the evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Ramsay were presented with a beautiful hanging lamp. The address was read by Mr. G. Clancy, and the presentation made by Mr. Irvine Rook, Mr. and Mrs. Ramsay expressed their heartfelt thanks for the kindness of their neighbors. The hours were few when all left, leaving the best of wishes for their host and hostess. Following is the address:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Ramsay,—We, a few of your friends and neighbors, have assembled here to-night for the purpose of expressing in some tangible way our deepest regret at your removal from our midst.

During the time in which we have enjoyed the privilege of being your neighbors you have in many ways endeared yourselves to all. To all there has ever been a heart welcome to your hospitable home, and we feel that friendship will not be broken by your removal to Newburgh but that you will whenever convenient, renew acquaintances in your old neighborhood.

In the hopes that we all may be sometimes remembered when you have removed from amongst us, we ask that you will accept this gift; not for its pecuniary value, but as a slight token of our esteem for you both. Our mutual hope is that God will prosper you in your new home.

Signed on behalf of your friends of this neighborhood.

MISSIONARY INSTITUTE, MARCH 1st. 2d. 3d, 1909.

The great wave of awakening Missionary Interest, which is just now sweeping over our country, is dependent for its depth and permanance upon a revival of wide-spread missionary intelligence.

The Missionary Boards and Societies, of all denominations, are seeking to promote this educational work especially in the young life of the churches.

The Young People's Missionary movement, an international and interdenominational agency for providing educational facilities and training leaders, has been called into being to assist the Mission Band, in this important work.

The Canadian Council of this movement has planned a series of mid-winter Missionary Institutes for the purpose of extending this educational and inspirational influence.

One of these institutes is to be held in Belleville, in Bridge Street Church Sunday School rooms, on March 1st, 2d and 3d, 1909. There will be a missionary exhibit, missionary study classes, open conferences and an exhibition of moving and still pictures, illustrating both home and foreign work. All pastors, leaders and members of Young People's Societies, officers and workers in Sunday Schools and others interested in missionary work are cordially invited to be present. There will be no registration fee charged, and the people of Belleville will provide accommodation for those coming from outside places. Circulars have been sent to all the surrounding churches and a large delegation may be expected.

PARISIAN SAGE

What's the use of being bald? What sense is there in deliberately allowing your hair to turn gray?

Do you want to look old before your time? Give up the thought! old age will come all too soon.

Look after your hair. Parisian Sage will kill the dandruff germ, and is the only preparation, so far as we know, that is guaranteed to do so.

Man or woman, no matter how old you are, Parisian Sage will make you look younger.

Why not go to T. B. Wallace and get a large bottle to-day, it only costs 50 cents, and your money back if it does not cure dandruff, stop falling hair, or itching of the scalp. It will make your hair luxuriant, bright and beautiful, and it is the most refreshing, pleasant and invigorating hair dressing made.

APPRECIATE THEIR PASTOR.

The Quarterly Board of the Methodist Church Invites Rev. W. G. Clarke, B.A., for Another Year—Church is in a Satisfactory Condition.

The third quarterly meeting of the Official Board of the Methodist Church was held last Tuesday and Rev. Feb. 9th, in the minister's vestry. Among a number of important items of business the following resolution was unanimously passed:—

Moved by Mr. T. Wickett, seconded by Mr. H. Fulford, that this Official Board has much pleasure in cordially inviting the Rev. W. G. Clarke, B.A., to continue his pastorate with us for another year, and in doing so we wish to express our warm appreciation of the services, so satisfactorily rendered by him, since coming to this Church.

We gladly bear testimony to his faithful and earnest exposition of the truth, his forceful preaching of the word of God, and his intense interest in the Sunday School, Epworth League, and the other departments of church work.

The finances during the past year have been remarkably well sustained, which goes to show that the wheel of congregation are in sympathy, and are unanimous in their opinion of the satisfactory conditions now existing.

The Church has very great reason to thank God for the success of the past, and we pray that the coming Conference year may be crowned with still greater achievements.

In reply Mr. Clarke feelingly referred to the very pleasant relations of pastor and people, thanked the Board for their very kind expressions, and accepted the invitation received.—Evening Guide, Port Hope.

ELK ARE STARVING

Cheyenne, Wyo., Feb. 13. Privation for elks in the form of a winter refuge is the proposal contained in a memorial to Congress asking that a tract of land south of Yellowstone Park be set aside. The suggestion comes from the Wyoming Legislature and is the outcome of reports that 20,000 elks are starving in the mountains of northern Wyoming. Communications have been received from lodges of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks all over the country asking that the Governor take steps to protect the great elk herd.

Mr. G. M. Emmons in crossing Bay Bay on Saturday last, with horse and cutter, was unfortunate in breaking in. The horse and cutter, after much difficulty were taken from the water and were little the worse for the wet experience.

SUNDAY COLD AND STORMY.

Sunday turned out cold and stormy. A bitter wind sprang up at noon, and was accompanied by a light, driving snow. In the evening the weather conditions were most unpleasant, and church attendance was very much affected. The pavements were very slippery and were partly filled by drifting snow, making walking very difficult as well as treacherous. It is unfortunate that on Sundays, slippery walks are not sanded. It is not illegal to do good on the Sabbath day.

CAUGHT ON ICE FLOE.

Buffalo, Feb. 14th.—A party of fishermen had their lives imperiled out into Lake Erie yesterday when the ice field was broken in two by a shift in the wind and were rescued except those on the floe. The man and his sons were fishing two miles out, and as the ice was not more than six inches thick and was soft, it must have broken up and carried them out into the open sea.

The fishermen who went out yesterday morning knew the ice was unsafe, but there have been instances to fish this way when the ice was in more than five miles out and began breaking up, drifting of their lines and that the ice was in motion. It was a quarter of a mile from the water between them and the shore when they reached the ice. All but Saturday were rescued in small boats.

Sophy of Kravonia

by ANTHONY HOPE

Author of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Copyright, 1908, by Duffield & Company.

Such were the woman and her mind. Some pity may go out to her. In the end, behind all her prayers and inspiring them, any, driving her to her knees in fear, was the conviction that she risked her soul. When she felt that, she pleaded that it was for her son's sake. Yet there lay years between her son and man's estate. The power was for some one during those years.

"If I had the countess' views and temperament I should grow potatoes and if possible grow them worse than my neighbors," said Colonel Stafnitz. "If I lived duffy I should at least die in peace."

The king held a very confidential conference. It was to sign his will. The countess was there. The little boy, who moved in happy unconsciousness of all the schemes which centered around him, was sent into the next room to play with Lepage. Stenovics and Stafnitz were present as wit-...retary. The king touched lightly on his state of health and went on to express his conviction of the Prince of Slavna's distinguished consideration for Countess Ellenburg and fraternal affection for little Alexis. "I go the happier for being sure of this, gentlemen," he said to his two counsellors, "but in any case the countess and my son are well secured. There will be enough for you, Charlotte, to live in suitable style here or abroad, as you please. My son I wish to stay here and enter my army. I've settled on him the estate of Dobrava, and he will have means equal to his station. It's well to have this arranged. From day to day I am in the hands of God."

As with another king, nothing in life became him like the leaving of it. There was little more work to do. He had but to wait, with courage and with dignity. The demand now was on what he had in abundance, not on a faculty which he had always lacked. He signed the document and bade the general and Stafnitz witness it. In silence they obeyed him, meaning to make waste paper of the thing to which they set their names.

That business done, and the king alone seemed happy in the doing of it —even Stafnitz had frowned—the king turned suddenly to Stenovics.

"I should like to see Baroness Dobrava. Pray let her be sent for this afternoon."

The shock was sudden, but Stenovics' answer came stendy if slow.

"Your majesty desires her presence?"

"I want to thank her once again, Stenovics. She's done much for us."

"The baroness is not in Slavna, sir, but I can send for her."

"Not in Slavna? Where is she, then?"

He asked what the whole kingdom knew. Save himself nobody was ignorant of Sophy's whereabouts now.

"She is on a visit to his royal highness at Prasilok, sir." Stenovics' voice was a triumph of neutrality.

"On a visit to the prince?" Surprise sounded in his voice.

"Mme. Zerkovitch is there, too, sir," Stenovics added. "The ladies have been there during the whole of the prince of Slavna's stay."

The king shot a glance at Countess Ellenburg. She was looking prim and proper. Indeed also at Stafnitz, who bit his mustache without quite hiding as intentional, but apparently irrepressible, smile. The king did not look too grave, and most of his gravity was for Countess Ellenburg.

"Is that—hum—at this moment quite desirable?" he asked.

His question met with silence. The air of all three intimated that the matter was purely one for his majesty. The King sat a moment with a frown on his brow.

Across this silence came a loud voice from the next room—Lepage's voice. "Take care! Take care! You'll upset the flowers, prince!"

The king started. He looked around at his companions. Stenovics' face was a blank bell on the table before him. Lepage appeared.

"Lepage, whom did you address as 'prince' just now?"

"Count Alexis, sir."

"Why?"

"The count insisted."

"Don't do it again! It's absurd! Go away."

A dull red patched Countess Ellenburg's cheeks. Lids brooded low over the eyes of Stafnitz and of Stenovics. It was a very awkward little scene. The king's irritation had got the better of him for the moment. What would the kindred of the exalted princess have said? The king turned to Countess Ellenburg and forced a smile.

"The question of regret is one for you, countess," he said rigidly. "And now about the baroness— No, I mean I wanted to ask if my wishes have been communicated to the Prince of Slavna."

"The prince has received them, sir. He read them in the presence of my messenger and requested leave to send his answer in writing, unless he might wait on your majesty."

"There are reasons why I had better not see him just now. Ask him to write, but very soon. The matter isn't one for delay." The king rose from his seat.

"Your majesty still wishes me to send for Baroness Dobrava?"

The king reflected for a moment and answered simply, "No."

His brief word broke up the conference. It had already lasted longer than suave and reassuring Dr. Natchelf would have advised. The men went away with a smile, all of them, the king, Stenovics, Stafnitz, round faced Markart, each smiling according to the quality of each, their smiles answering to Max von Hollbrandt's shrug of the shoulders. There are things which bring men to what painful youth was taught to call the least common denominator. A horse race does it, a prize fight, a cricket match, a battle, too, in some sort. Equally efficacious very often, though it is to be recorded with reluctance, is a strong flirtation with no proper issue obvious.

The matter was grave, yet all the men laughed. The matter was grave, yet Countess Ellenburg did not laugh. Was that what Stafnitz called her views and her temperament? In part, no doubt. Besides, man will be man on the side issues of the gravest affairs. It is not generally the case with women. Added again to this, perhaps Countess Ellenburg knew more or divined more. Among glaring diversity there was perhaps something, an atom, of similarity between her and Sophy—not the something which refuses, but the something which couples high conditions with assent. The difference in chance is to most men negligible. To most women it is no worse than the tenth. Their sense of mathematical odds is sorely and sometimes magnificently imperfect.

It had flashed across Countess Ellenburg's mind that many Sophy, too, played for a big stake, or, rather, lived for it and so would die. The men had not thought of that. To them the violent flirtation had the obvious end and its passing inconvenience. It might delay the prince's departure for awhile. It might make his marriage more entirely an affair of duty and of state. With this idea they smiled and shrugged. The whole business came under the head which in their thoughts and their confidential conversations they would style nonsense.

It was not so with the countess. Disconcerted by that prelude of Lepage and young Alexis, more moved by the sudden appearance of Baroness Dobrava as a factor in the game, she returned to prayer.

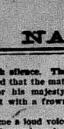
What now was the form and matter of her prayer? The form must go unformulated and the words unuttered. Yet she prayed so long that she must have succeeded in putting a good face on her petitions.

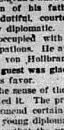
It is probable that she prayed for others as she prayed for herself. She prayed that the Prince of Slavna and the Baroness Dobrava might escape temptation.

Or that if they fell— Again it was not for her to dictate to Heaven. Here on had its ways of dealing with such sinners.

Yet through all her prayers must have echoed the words, "It's absurd!" She prayed again most likely against being suspected of wishing that the man who adored them, her husband, might soon be dead.

The king dead and the prince a slave to love—to the side doors of an unprofitable love! It was time for action and needed a vast deal of covering with the veil of prayer.





Chapter Nineteen

THE Prince of Slavna's answer to the intimation of his father's wishes was dutiful, courteous and discreetly diplomatic. The prince was much occupied with his drills and other occupations. He avalled himself of Max von Hollbrandt's practiced pen. The guest was glad to do his friend that little favor.

They talked over the sense of the reply. Max then drafted it. The prince did no more than amend certain expressions which the young diplomatist had used. Max wrote that the prince cordially sympathized with the king's wishes; the prince intended to the effect that he thoroughly understood them. Max wrote that the prince was prepared cordially and energetically to co-operate in their realization; the prince preferred to be prepared to consider them in a benevolent spirit. Max suggested that two or three months' postponement of the suggested journey would not in itself be fatal; the prince insisted that such a delay was essential in order that negotiations might be set on foot to insure his being welcomed with due empressement. Max added that the later date would have an incidental advantage since it would obviate the necessity of the prince's interrupting the important labors on which he was engaged; the prince said instead that, in his judgment, it was essential in the interests of the kingdom that the task of training the artillery should not be interfered with by any other object, however well worthy of consideration that object might be.

In the result the draft as amended, though not less courteous or dutiful than Max's original, was noticeably more stiff. Translate them both into the terse and abrupt speech of everyday life and one said, "I'd rather not, please," while the other came at least very near to a blank "I won't." Max's easy acquiescence coupled with a prayer for postponement. The prince's was postponement, with an accompanying assurance of respectful consideration.

Max was not hurt, but he felt a professional disapproval. The prince had said more and shown more of his mind than was needful. It was throwing more cards on the table than the rules of the game demanded.

"Mine would have done just as well," he complained to Marie Zerkovitch. "If mine had been refected his could have followed. As it is, he's wasted one or other of them. Very foolish action, just now time's his main object!" He did not mean saving time, but protracting it.

Marie did no more than toss her head peevishly. The author of the original draft persevered.

"Don't you think mine would have been much wiser to begin with?"

"I don't see much difference. There's little enough fruth in either of them!" she snapped.

Max looked at her with an amused and tolerant smile. He knew quite well what she meant. He shook his head at her with a humorous twinkle. "Oh, come, come, don't be exacting, ma'amsel! There's a very fair allowance of truth in both. Quite half the truth, I should think. He is really very anxious about the gunners!"

"And about what else?"

Max spread out his hands, with a shrug, but passed the question by. "So much truth, in fact, that it would have served amply for at least two letters," he remarked, returning to his own special point of complaint.

Marie might well amuse the easy going, yet observant and curious young man. He loved to watch his fellow creatures under the stress of feelings from which he himself was free and found in the opportunities afforded him in this line the chief interest both of his life and of his profession.

But Marie had gradually risen to a high, nervous tension. She was no puritan. Puritans were not common in Kravonia nor had Paris grafted such a slip on to her nature. Had she thought as the men in the palace thought when they smiled, had she thought that and no more, it is scarcely likely that she would have thus disturbed herself. After all, such cases are generally treated as in some sense outside the common rules. Exceptional allowances are, in fact, whether properly or not, made for exceptional situations. Another feeling was in her mind, an obsession which had come almost wholly to possess her. The fateful foreboding which had attacked her from the first had now full dominion over her. Its rule was riveted more closely on her spirit day by day as day by day the prince and Sophy drew closer together. Even that Sophy had once saved his life could now no longer shake Marie's doleful prepossession. Unusual and unlooked for things take color from the mind of the spectator. The calculating train of events which had brought Sophy to Prasilok borrowed ominous shadows from a nervous, apprehensive temperament.

No such gloom brooded over Sophy. She gave herself up to the hour—the past forgotten, the future never thought of. It was the great time of her life. Her feelings, while not less spontaneous and fresh, were more mature and more fully satisfied than when Colonel de Sarres poured his lore at her feet. A cry of happiness almost irrkrol runs through her every record of those days. There was little leisure for diary or letters.

Winter was melting into spring, snow dwelled only on the hilltops. Lake Tahl was unbound and sparkled in the sun. The days grew longer, yet were far too short. To ride with him to Volseni, to hear the cheers, to see the love they bore him, to watch him at work, to seem to share the labor and the love—then to shake off the kindly clinging friends and take to a mountain path or wander, the reins on the horses' necks by the margin of the lake and come home through the late dusk, alone often, often, often, always together in thought as in bodily presence—was not this enough? "If I had to die in a month I should owe life a tremendous debt already." That is her own summing up. It is pleasant to remember.

"It would be enough to say—love; enough with a nature ardent as hers. Yet with love much else conspired. There was the thought of what she had done, of the things to which she was a party. There was the sense of power, the satisfaction of ambition, a promise of more things. There was the applause of Volseni as well as the devotion of the prince. There was, too—it persisted all through her life—the funny, half childish zest, to a severe eye, unchildish pleasure in the feeling that she were fine doings for Sophy Grobch of Morpingham, in Essex! "Fancy me!" is the indefensibly primitive form in which this delight shows in one of the few letters bearing date from the castle of Prasilok.

Yet it is possible to find this simple, grateful surprise at fortune's fancies worthy of love. Her own courage, her own catching at fortune's forelock, seemed to have been always unconscious and instinctive. These she never hints at nor even begins to analyze. Of her love for the prince she speaks once or twice and once in reference to what she had felt for Casimir. "I loved him most when he left me and when he died," she writes. "I love him not less now because I love monseigneur, but I can love monseigneur more for having loved Casimir. God rest the dear one and die, but he made me live, and death helped to teach me how to do it." Again she reflects, "How wonderfully everything is worth while—even sorrows!" Following which reflection in the very next line—she is writing to Julia Robins—comes the naive outburst: "I took just splendid in my sheepskin tunic, and he's given me the sweetest toy of a revolver. That's in case flies ever charge and try and cut me up behind our guns!" She is laughing at herself, but the laugh is charged with an infectious enjoyment. She lived, loved and laughed through those unequaled days, trying to soothe Marie Zerkovitch, bantering Max von Hollbrandt, giving her masculine mind and her feminine soul wholly to her prince. "She was like a singularly able and energetic sunbeam," Max says quaintly himself obviously not unbiased by her attractions.

The prince's mind was simple. He was quite sincere about his gains. He had no wish to be one of his royal uncles until they had arrived and he could deliver them into the safe custody of his trained and trusty subordinate and old tutor, Stenovics, their captain. Less than that was not safety with Stenovics in office and Colonel Stafnitz on duty at the capital. But Max and Marie Zerkovitch had, too, even though overexacting, as Max had told her. The letter to the king held not half the truth, but it held a much more significant. He could not go from Sophy's side to seek a wife. The desire of his heart and the delight of his eyes—and he was right—lay there.

Her charm was not only for his heart and eyes, her fascination not solely for his passion. On his intellect also she had her powerful hold, opening the narrow confines of his mind to broader views and softening the rigor of his ideas. He had seen himself only as the stern master, the just chastiser of a turbulent capital and an unruly soldiery. But was there not a higher vision? Might he not be loved in the plains as on the hills, at Slavna as at Volseni?

By himself he could not achieve that. His pride—nay, his obstinacy—forbade the first step. But what his sensitive dignity rejected for himself he could see her sunny graciousness accomplish and was riveted more closely on her spirit day by day as day by day the prince and Sophy drew closer together. Even that Sophy had once saved his life could now no longer shake Marie's doleful prepossession. Unusual and unlooked for things take color from the mind of the spectator. The calculating train of events which had brought Sophy to Prasilok borrowed ominous shadows from a nervous, apprehensive temperament.

ONE BAD MISTAKE

IS FREQUENTLY MADE BY THE WISEST OF NAPANEE PEOPLE.

It's a serious mistake to neglect backache. Backache is the first symptom of kidney ills. Fatal complications may follow. Doan's Kidney Pills act quickly to overcome kidney ills, so not delay until too late, it may mean Diabetes or Bright's Disease. Read what a Napanee resident says.

Mrs. Jas. Gordon, of West st., Napanee, Ont., says:

"For some long time Mr. Gordon had complained of a dull pain across the small of his back and extending around his sides. He also suffered with a dull lameness, and as he had much driving to do, the jarring of the rig seemed to affect his kidneys and disorder them considerably. He had tried several remedies but found little or no relief until using Doan's Kidney Pills on the recommend of our druggist. Mr. Wallace. He quickly regulated the kidney disorder, his back strengthened and the pain left him. He speaks very highly of Doan's Kidney Pills and says he would not be without a box in the house."

Sold by dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont., Sole Canadian Agents.

VINOL CURES CHRONIC COUGHS, COLDS AND BRONCHITIS.

After Other Remedies Fail

"I have been troubled with a chronic cold and bronchitis for a long time and have tried many remedies without finding relief. Through the kind suggestion of a friend I tried Vinol, and after taking four bottles, am entirely cured." A. H. Wilde, 733-8th Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

S. McDonald, 147 W. Congress St., St. Paul, Minn., writes: "I contracted a severe cold last winter and thought I would never get rid of it. I tried Vinol as a last resort, and it has completely cured me."

Vinol combines two world-famed tonics, the healing, medicinal properties of cod liver oil and tonic iron, deliciously palatable and agreeable to the weakest stomach. For this reason, Vinol is unexcelled as a strength-builder for old people, delicate children, weak and run-down persons, after sickness and for Chronic Coughs, Colds and Bronchitis.

Vinol is sold in Napanee by T. B. Wallace, Druggist.

The Best Flour.

Dafoe's Nonesuch.

Dafoe's Manitoba Patent

By numerous tests by the best bakers the above brands of Flour have been proved to be the best flours in the market.

When buying Flour look for Dafoe's, and patronize your home mill, thereby producing work and keeping money in circulation. Cheaper than the product of the Western mills. Flour has to be transported thousands of miles at great expense, and usually is from 30 days to 60 days old when used.

The grower complains if the farmer or the merchant sends to Toronto or to outside points for an article he can get at the home mill just as good. He does not appreciate to pay four from mills hundreds of miles away and sells you an inferior flour more money than you can purchase the home product for, every bag of which is guaranteed.

Chopped Cornmeal and Buckwheat Flour always on hand. Feed grinding a specialty, with the best feed mills known in the trade.

A full stock of the best Anthracite Coal for sale. Thanking you for favors in all kinds of grain.

Please just call at the Big Mill, before purchasing your Flour, Feed or Coal.

TO THOSE OF SEDENTARY OCCUPATIONS. Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead an outdoor life. The latter will find Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a most valuable assistant without the least objection on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act mildly, but surely, and most surprisingly change considering their excellence.

HE LEFT THE HOUSE.

While a lady was feeding a hungry tramp the other day she discovered he was pocketing her silver spoons.

Opening the door, she exclaimed: "Drop those spoons, you scoundrel, and leave the house!"

"But madam——"

"Leave the house, I say!" screamed the infuriated woman. "Leave the house!"

"I go, madam," said the tramp, as he reached the front gate, "never to return; but, before I go, I would like to say that I did not intend to take your house."

THEY HAD SO MANY.

Mr. and Mrs. Oldwed had so many children they didn't know what to do; so they took the whole pack off to a picnic on the river, and let them run riot.

Suddenly a small boy ran up to Mr. Oldwed and cried out:

"Papa! papa! Archibald has fallen into the water!"

"Archibald? Archibald?" repeated the father. Then he turned to his wife.

"Mary," he enquired, anxiously, "have we an Archibald?"

Satan had just ordered more coal thrown on the fire.

"By Tammuz!" he cussed, "but that last arrival is a tough proposition. The more I try to roast him the more he smiles."

He called the chief stoker.

"Well, what's the matter?" said Satan.

The stoker shook his head.

"He's smiling," he answered.

"Where is he now?" cried Old Nick, out of patience.

"New York. He used to be a baseball umpire in——"

"Sulphurous serpents! Why didn't you say so before. Take him down. We can't feaze him."

ATOMS

Recently perfected scientific tests proved that there could be—and was in a certain sample—four hundred and forty million germs in a teaspoonful of milk.

And a young person of inquiring mind asked a question, the answer of which may interest many.

"If things are really made up of other things, and if investigation can unravel everything to a first principle of atoms, can man really make or destroy anything?"

And the answer is.

Man never made or destroyed anything—and cannot.

When man was put upon earth and given the Divine command to subdue it, the Creator reserved to Himself the power of creation, and man's power was limited to the possibility of working and re-working the created atoms, and the idea seems to have been not that the Creator had as chief purpose what man developed the atoms into, but really intended that the developments should be of the man—the immortal part of man—the building of character; of moral monuments pointing to spiritual heights; the fitting of the capstone of creation to uses and purposes in existence to follow this one.

A man builds a house—yet he creates nothing, but simply places atoms in new position. The house burns down—but nothing is destroyed; the residuum has the recreating power to be used in erecting other forms. Maybe those ashes nourish a plant. You tend the plant and it grows—but you do not creat anything. The plant is formed of cells that are composed of water and the atoms of things gone before.

An engine turns water into steam—the steam passes through cylinders and then escapes in the air. Careless men say the water is "used up." It isn't. Only its form is changed; its bulk.

In all the ages that have passed the world and its population have not increased in total weight. For if it had increased in weight the globe would change in the speed of its revolutions and our days and seasons would have changed. There have a few meteorites fallen on the earth, but their relative weight would not be computable.

A little flour into which yeast has been put will increase in bulk—"get light," we say. That is because the yeast germ is a low form of plant life and it forms new cells of the flour and moisture the batch grows.

Go in a cornfield on a hot June night. All is so still that you can hear Nature at work—piling up cell on cell in the growing cornstalk so rapidly that crackling sounds issue from the corn. Did you ever hear ice crackle when a low temperature was causing it to form very rapidly? Listen some winter night.

Atoms—the chance and rearrangement of them is all of everything except the spark we call the soul of the human soul. And they are of God and with God—wonderful and weightless.

PSYCHINE SAVED THIS LADY'S LIFE

This statement is no fiction, for Mrs. L. Garside resides at 509 York Street, London, Ont., and to use her own words is: "Always happy to reply to anxious enquirers and let them know what PSYCHINE has done for me."

Four years ago, Mrs. Garside wrote: "Your remedy, PSYCHINE, did wonders for me. I was about 28 or 30 years of age when I took your treatment. I was in consumption and the very best doctors told me there was nothing else that could be done, (this was 20 years ago) so as a last hope I gave your remedies a trial. From the first this was a most wonderful, full success. PSYCHINE certainly gave me new lungs, and I honestly believe PSYCHINE saved my life."

Writing four years after under date August 7, 1908, Mrs. Garside says: "My statement still holds good, my lungs never troubled me after your treatment which I took after being told there was no hope."

PSYCHINE, Dr. Slocum's great Health Remedy, is known everywhere as Nature's Greatest Tonic, building up the entire system not only rendering it proof against these terrible germ and other diseases, that are so deadly in their operation, but it is the sworn and deadly foe of the germs and the diseases themselves. Bacilli, or disease germs, cannot live in the system with PSYCHINE. Send for FREE TRIAL BOTTLE. See coupon.

Who Gets the Most Out of Life?

Not the wealthiest, not the most learned, nor the idler—but the man who has good health and works for his living. This gain is truly but not trivial.

Every man should guard his health as his most valuable possession. The more so because health is easier to retain than regain.

Keep your grip on health by regular exercise, reasonable care in eating and regular sleep. Take Beecham's Pills occasionally, to tone the stomach and keep the liver and bowels in good working order. And don't worry.

Observe these simple rules and you will agree that the one who gets the most from life is

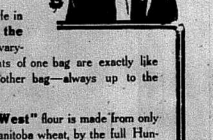
CREAM OF THE WEST FLOUR



You are always safe in buying "Cream of the West" flour. Never varying in quality, the contents of one bag are exactly like the contents of every other bag—always up to the standard.

"Cream of the West" flour is made from only the hardest of hard Manitoba wheat, by the full Hungarian process. It fairly exhales the essence of prairie strength and purity.

"Cream of the West" is a home flour—nourishing, toothsome, and the standard for the housewife who prides herself on her baking. That's the reason why grocers recommend it.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chambers,
Napanee, Feb. 15th, 1909.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor Simpson in the chair.

Members present—Councillors Alexander, Bogart, Gibbard, Stracey, Bogart, Kimmerly, and Reeve Ruttan.

Minutes of last session were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From George Lewis, asking that his resignation be accepted as assistant chief engineer. On motion the request was granted.

From W. E. Nine, Secretary of Excelsior Fire Brigade, asking that Fred. J. Vanalstine be appointed to the position of assistant chief engineer. On motion it was accepted.

From E. B. Perry, richmond, Ont., asking that his salary be increased to $6.00 per week. Referred to Police Committee to bring in a report at next meeting.

From J. S. Robertson, Secretary of Muskoka Free Hospital, asking for a reasonable amount of assistance from the Council. On motion it was laid on the table until next subsequent meeting.

Reeve Ruttan presented a lengthy report of the Finance Committee, which is as follows:

To the Municipal Council of the Town of Napanee:

The Committee on Finance report as follows:

1. That the monthly payment due to the Electric Light Commissioners must this year be reduced from $4,000.33, as paid last year, to $3,946.16. This is charging up to them the amount of the debentures which have to be paid this year by the Council, and keeping the cost of lighting the streets at $3300.00, and if the Commissioners cannot manage to finance the year with this monthly payment, a special grant will have to be made to the Commissioners to cover their shortage, probably about $800.00.

2. That your Committee would recommend that no expenditure on capital account be made by the Electric Light Commissioners until they have submitted to the Council a statement of what is required, and their recommendation as to the expenditure for the approval of the Council, when a special grant should be made to them to cover any expenditure required on capital account, which the Council may approve of.

3. We further recommend that the Treasurer continue to furnish the Council statements of disbursements, which may take place during the interim between the sittings of the Council so that the Council may have some idea of what wages and salaries are being paid out.

4. Your Committee finds that the Treasurer is paying the liabilities of the town, from time to time, by cheque, but is acting entirely in his own discretion in the matter, and some plan should be adopted by which the responsibility as to checking money belonging to the town out of the bank, should be shared by the Council and would recommend that all cheques be countersigned by the Chairman of the Committee responsible for the payment or in his absence by the Reeve or Mayor.

5. Your Committee further finds that the bonds given as security, to the town for the due performance of duties by the Treasurer and Collector, are bonds issued by the Dominion of Canada Guarantee and Accident Insurance Company of Toronto, and these bonds protect the town against embezzlement, defalcation and theft only and not as against mistakes and errors. The terms of the bonds are such that it is almost impossible to collect on them as a condition precedent in the bonds is that, before collecting, the town must, at the request of the Company, prosecute a defaulter criminally and obtain a conviction, and this at the expense of the town unless a conviction is obtained, so that in the case of a defaulter, the town has to take the risk of successfully arresting and prosecuting the defaulter and if they fail to obtain a conviction, the bonds are void. The town is at the expense of prosecuting or of following up the defaulter and arresting him and also leaving themselves liable to an action for damages for malicious and illegal prosecution and wrongful arrest. We therefore would suggest that the course pursued by institutions should be followed by this Council, and other and better security obtained to protect the town held in the case of the Treasurer and Collector. The condition of the bonds is due to no fault of the Treasurer or Collector, as they have been accepted by former Councils without question.

6. Your Committee would further recommend that the Town Property Committee purchase a proper and suitable safe for the Treasurer's office in the Town Hall so that the Treasurer's business can be done in the Town Hall.

7. That your Committee find that, in the annual statement put forward on the 15th December last, the value of uncollected taxes upon the Collector's roll for 1908 was largely over-estimated, and that the Collector's roll on the first day of January last, instead of being worth about $16,000.00, is an asset to the town of about $11,000.00.

This is based upon the annual statement furnished on the first day of January last, your Committee are submitting herewith a proposed estimate of the appropriations for the year 1909, which will require a rate of 15½ mills to cover the liabilities for the year, but the error in the estimation of the value of the collector's roll will require the rate to be 20 mills.

All of which we submit to this Council for their approval.

G. F. RUTTAN,
Chairman.

February 15th, 1909.

On motion the report was laid over for two weeks.

Coun. Burrows reported in reference to the swing bridge, and thought it had been sadly neglected. It was at present in a bad shape, and recommended that it be freed from all rust and painted. It had never received a coat of paint since its erection in 1883, and ought to have at least a coat of paint every fifth year. The report was adopted and the bridge ordered to be put in proper shape.

There was considerable discussion as to the state of the covered bridge it being unsafe for public travel. The stringers were partially rotted out and it would be nothing gained in trying to repair it. Mr. W. A. Embury, however, and thought it would be useless to put supports under it, as the spring freshet would likely carry them away, and that the whole thing would be likely to collapse then. On motion the matter was left in the hands of the Street Committee to investigate and report.

By motion the Fire, Water and Light Committee were authorized to purchase a one-horse hose wagon for the use of Excelsior Fire Brigade, the cost not to exceed $250.00.

A By-law was amended to appoint Fred. J. Vanalstine assistant chief engineer, in place of Geo. Lewis, resigned, which received its several readings, signed, sealed, and finally passed.

The agreement between Mr. John Lewis and the town re repairing of streets and highways, was presented and read, and passed by the Council. The price given is $300.00 per annum, payable monthly.

It was moved and seconded that the Council take some action to work in conjunction with Mr. Trish Wilson to have the Napanee river dredged.

Mayor Simpson reported that the Bijou Opera House had gone out of the moving picture business, and that Wonderland had promised to put more careful about the pictures they produced.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were ordered paid:

Hall, McCabe	$ 3.15
Madden Bros.	18.05

The following accounts were referred to C. F. Duncan, $9.00, Street Committee, with power to act; Sisters of Charity, Kingston, $59.20, to Finance Committee.

The Treasurer's statement of amounts paid was referred to the Finance Committee.

Council adjourned.

More proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cures sick women.

Miss M. R. Morin, 335 Ontario St., Montreal, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was in very poor health and doctored for months, receiving very little benefit. I had lost all ambition, was nervous, and subject to dizzy spells and painful periods each month.

"A friend suggested Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as the proper medicine for me. I procured a bottle of this remedy and began taking, and before it was finished, I felt so much better that I continued its use and gave it a thorough test, with the result I am to-day well and a much healthier girl than I was three years ago. I have no more painful periods, dizziness or nervous troubles."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. TO KILL THE DANDRUFF GERM.

Is the Only Possible Way of Having An Effective Cure.

If you see a woman or a man with luxuriant glossy hair, you may be sure neither has dandruff to amount to anything. In nearly every case where women and men have thin brittle hair, there owe it to dandruff. There are hundreds of preparations that "claim" to cure dandruff, but not one but Newbro's Herpicide tells you that dandruff is the result of a germ borrowing into the scalp, and that permanent cure of dandruff and its consequent falling and baldness, can only be and by killing the germ; and there is no other preparation that will destroy that germ but Newbro's Herpicide. "Destroy the cause, and you remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

The True Cause Of Rheumatism

Caused by Uric Acid in Blood and Can Only be Cured Through the Blood.

Not many years ago doctors thought rheumatism was only a local pain caused by exposure to cold or wet. Now they know that rheumatism is caused by the blood becoming tainted with uric acid. This acid contracts the muscles, stiffens the joints, and irritates the nerves. Then the cold and wet make the joints and muscles groan with aching stiffness, spreads and the pain grows worse each year until you are a helpless cripple, tortured day and night. If the disease reaches the heart it means sudden death. You can't cure rheumatism with liniments, plasters or hot cloths. You must go to the root of the trouble in the blood. The one sure, scientific way to cure rheumatism is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, because they actually make new blood. They sweep out the poisonous acid, loosen the joints and muscles, and bring ease and freedom where before had been pain and misery.

Mrs. Fred. Sabeau, Canada Creek, E. S., says:—"Three years ago I was taken with a severe pain in my right hip. It grew gradually worse until it finally settled in both my hips and legs. The pain was really almost unbearable. At first I tried foot drafts and liniments, but this gave me only the most temporary relief, and I felt as if I was to go through the rest of my life as a suffering cripple. A neighbor whose daughter had been cured of rheumatism by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advised me to try this medicine, and I purchased three boxes. Before they were all gone I was able to get my foot up on my knee and untie my shoe. Nothing I had not been able to do for two years, and I began to feel I had at last found a medicine to cure the trouble. I kept on taking the Pills until I had used, I think, a dozen boxes, when I was completely cured and I am as well and strong to-day as ever I was in my life. I want every sufferer to know that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is a sure cure for rheumatism, and that if they will give this medicine a fair trial, their pains and aches will disappear as mine did."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FURGISON—MURPHY.

A quiet wedding was celebrated on Tuesday morning, February 21, 1909, in the R. C. church, Lafargeville, N. Y., when Rev. Father Kitts united in the holy bonds of matrimony Miss Bella A. Furgison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Furgison, of Lafargeville, N.Y., and Mr. Hugh Murphy, of Watertown, N.Y., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Murphy, Tamworth. After the ceremony the happy couple went to the home of the bride's parents, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy left on an early train for a trip in the west, and carried with them the best wishes of their many friends.

HANDS AND FEET FROZEN.

Bailey Ham, a farmer living near here, had an exciting time one night last week. He retired early, leaving his wife and the hired boy downstairs. When his wife retired to her room she saw a face looking in at the window. Thinking it might be a burglar, she aroused her husband, who went to get the hired boy, to make a search of the premises. To his surprise he found the boy missing. With the assistance of some neighbours they searched all the buildings, but could find no trace of him. The following day Mr. Ham came to town and asked Chief Graham to keep a lookout. Two days later the boy was found in the barn with his feet and hands frozen. He was sent back to the home at Belleville. The boy admits there is insanity in his family.

MARRIED SIXTY YEARS.

Just sixty years ago last Saturday, about three o'clock in the afternoon, Ira Smith, then coming twenty-two years of age, and Sarah Forbes, aged eighteen, stood with clasped hands while Rev. Mr. Wilson declared them husband and wife. In about six weeks the couple started keeping house. Among the first things they did, as was agreed on before marriage, was the erection of the old-fashioned Methodist family altar. A portion of the word of God was read in the morning and prayer and praise offered to the Giver of all good and perfect gifts. The Lord blessed the union with a family of five children, eleven grandchildren and nine great grandchildren. As time went on Mr. Smith was made a class leader, which office he has held for more than forty years. He was appointed a local preacher and given work more or less on six circuits. He has preached in twenty-six different churches, besides holding houses and private houses. Now the old couple have got back where they started, that is, to keeping house alone and attending to all the ins and outs of housekeeping. They are looking forward to the day which is not far off, when the Lord will say: "It is enough, come up higher." Two sons are James T. Smith, Millhaven, and Henry J. Smith, of Odessa.

CHORAL CLUB CANTATA.

Frequently we hear the remark from strangers visiting Napanee that they are surprised at the musical talent in our town. This is a compliment well merited, but unfortunately the people of the town do not appreciate this fact to its fullest extent. That the standard of good singing is being maintained is due almost exclusively to the efforts of the Choral Club and the Musical Club. These are two separate organizations working along different lines. The Choral Club goes into training for months and annually produces a cantata or other musical performance, when we for a nominal price of admission see the effect of the training they receive. The thanks of the community are due to this organization whose existence is dependent solely upon the love of the members for the highest of all arts. Next Tuesday evening the Club produces in the Opera House the two popular cantatas, "John Gilpin" and "Fair Ellen", under the direction of Mr. Daniel Cameron, Musical Director, of Belleville. The leading solos will be taken by Mr. David Ross, of Toronto, Miss Mona R. Knight, of Kingston, and Mrs. F. E. VanLaven, of Napanee. It is to be hoped that the people of Napanee and vicinity will take advantage of this treat and greet the Choral Club with a bumper house. Those who attended the production of Saul last season, which was such a pronounced success cannot afford to miss these two superior cantatas. The music will be found more charming still and the effect of the fifty trained voices in the chorus will be much more effective.

MILLHAVEN.

Our snow is already about 1 foot deep and lumbermen are again busy. Mr. E. Sharpe made a flying visit through here one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Collins spent Sunday at Mr. C. Collins'. The Misses Etta and Lena Clarke, Sharbot Lake, have returned home, after visiting relatives around here. The whooping cough has visited our school quite severely. Quite a number of our young people attended the dance given in the Victoria Hall, at Stella on Monday evening, given by the A.O.U.W. lodge. Mrs. W. J. Armstrong is in Kingston, attending her sister-in-law, who is very ill at the millinery at Kemptville.

Miss Mabel Townsend, Sydenham, stopped off at Napanee on Wednesday morning from Belleville, and spent the day with friends.

TAMWORTH.

Miss Laura Dawson and Mr. William Dawson were in Napanee on business, one day last week.—Ray Way of the Sterling Bank, left on Tuesday evening last for California, where he has secured a good situation.—Fred Busby, Sault Ste. Marie, is home on a visit.—Miss Burgess and Mr. Rayburn, of Enterprise, were married at Christ Church, on Tuesday last, by the Rev. BALLAHAC.

The weather still continues changeable.—Those on the sick list are nicely recovering.—Mr. Michael Kearns, with his sister Johannah, left on Saturday for Centreville, where they intend to remain for some time, visiting friends.—The kitchen shower at A. F. Byrnes', on Thursday night, was a decided success. Those who attended had a jolly good time, while Mr. and Mrs. Byrnes were the recipients of a large selection of valuable presents.—Mr. Fred. Simpkins is spending some time in our midst.—Mrs. Geo. Hawes and son Tommy, visited at Mr. John Tyo's, on Sunday.—Mr. D. J. Kerrs spent Sunday at home.—Mr. Martin Dealling, of Larkin Street, is doing a rushing business with his new sawing machine and gasoline engine. Welcome in our midst, Martin.

Dairy Cans, Milk Pails, Strainers, made from tin that will wear and not rust. BOYLE & SON.

STANDARD BANK.

The Standard Bank in Newburgh has moved into permanent quarters, in the Finkle block. The office has been fitted up in a manner in keeping with the general reputation of this old and well established Bank. Mr. J. K. Fraser, who has been with the institution for 10 years, has been appointed manager.

The opening of a Bank in Newburgh certainly fills a long felt want in the community, and a Bank of the age and strength of the Standard should be able to look after the financial affairs of Newburgh and the surrounding country in a satisfactory manner.

Our Declaration of Faith.

We believe in the goods we are selling.
We believe that honest goods can be sold to honest people by honest methods.
We believe in working, not weeping; in boosting, not knocking, and in the pleasure of our job.
We believe that a man gets what he goes after, that a good deed done to-day is worth two deeds done to-morrow, that no man is down and out until he has lost faith in himself.
We believe in to-day and the work we are doing, in tomorrow and the work we hope to do, and in the just reward which the future holds.
We believe in courtesy and kindness, in generosity and good cheer, in friendship, in honest competition.
We believe there is something doing somewhere for every man ready to do it.
We believe our stock for Spring 1909 comprises the finest collection of merchandise ever brought to Napanee.
We believe it will be of great financial benefit to you to do your purchasing of your Spring outfit for your home, yourself and your family from us. We will not disappoint you.

Lucky for her it fell in the hands of an honest person, but evidently she did not appreciate honesty very much, or would be glad to give a reward, which is customary on such occasions.

QUITS THE MINISTRY FOR MORE MONEY.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—"I leave the ministry for money. I cannot afford to preach the gospel. I am too poor." Such statement was made yesterday by the Rev. Ferdinand S. Rockwell, organizer and pastor of the Sheridan Park M. E. church, after he had talked to Bishop Wm. F. McDowell. He has given up the ministry for the automobile business. "I have been offered the management of the New England agency of this company," added Mr. Rockwell, "and I have decided to take it. Preaching the gospel does not pay. I am now making $5,000 a year. I cannot live on it and keep my family as it should live or maintain the style that I feel a minister's family should maintain. I have been offered a salary that reaches into five figures. Would not you take it? I am speaking as a man, not as a minister."

RAYMOND—BURGESS.

Mr. Earle C. Raymond and Miss Kathleen V. Burgess, both of Enterprise, were married on Tuesday afternoon, at Christ Church, Tamworth, by the Rev. J. W. Jones. The pretty bride was gowned in venetian cloth with hat to match, and carried a shower bouquet of roses. At the altar, Mr. Allen Brown made a splendid groomsman, and Miss Amah de Burgess, the bride's sister, acted as bridesmaid. After the ceremony the bridal party drove away to the bride's home, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served to a host of friends. On their return from their wedding tour, they will take up housekeeping on a farm near Enterprise. Their many friends wish them God speed. The groom's present to the bride was a gold chain and locket, to the bridesmaid, a gold brooch, and to the groomsman, a gold pin.

Wall Paper Talks!

Last week we introduced the subject of "Corrective Treatment" of Rooms by saying that Rooms facing the north should have warm colored paper, while rooms with a south window would stand a colder shade. Think it over. A bright warm color gives a cheery effect on a cold cry north light, while a darker shade has the effect of cooling the hot sunlight.

Few rooms are ideal in shape, some are too low, some too high, some too long and other imperfections in shape. In order to "correct" these points, we will show for instance a room with low ceilings. These walls will appear higher if a striped paper is used, and in many cases it is preferable to use the stripe right up to the ceiling—no border. On the other hand, if the ceiling is too high, the wall lends itself admirably to "upper third" or the paper treatment. Mouldings should also be used on these walls. A picture moulding, also a Dado strip. It may also be well to drop the ceiling paper on the walls if the room is especially high. To be brief, horizontal lines tend to reduce the height, while perpendicular lines, as striped paper, tend to increase the height of a room. If a room is too long, by paneling the ceiling the length is not so noticeable.

Small rooms may be made to appear larger by the use of light colored papers in small designs. Paneling the walls with mouldings is also a good effect. Oddly enough quite large pictures make the room look larger. Mirrors also are a very valuable help.

The opposite kinds of paper and treament have the opposite effect.

Before papering any room study the question and get the paper that will overcome any faults in the architecture of location of room. The paper will cost no more, while the effect will be infinitely better.

We have papers in stock of every variety from plain flats all through the range of gilts, Ghimmers, Burlaps, Tapestry, Tile, Leather, Felteco, in fact the best we have ever had. CREAM OF THE WEST FLOUR

When your neighbor tells you of her "wonderful" luck on baking-day don't imagine it's all luck. More than flour. For better bread and bread, the "Cream of the West" flour is certain to result in the use of this superior flour.

"Cream of the West" may cost you a few cents more per bag—but it is made of the highest grade of hard wheat—and is more expensive to mill than the usual grades of Manitoba flour. For better bread and bread, better baking-day luck, use "Cream of the West" flour.

LYNCHING.

It seems that in the last year there were a hundred cases of lynching in the United States, the victims of almost all the cases being negroes. The problem of a union between the two races, or even of their peaceful cohabitation, appears to be almost hopeless. It is difficult to see how such a situation can fail another day to lead to a great tragedy. Lincoln would have handled reconstruction calmly, and would have taken the Southern leaders, such as Lee and Longstreet into counsel. Into his place came men burning with wrath, in the case of Sumner not only political, but personal, who thought of nothing but putting the head of the hated Southerner under the feet of the negro. The negro, as an intelligent member of the race avowed to the present writer, would have been content with equality before the law. Political power was thrust upon him. Then came the carpet-bagging Government, followed, as a natural consequence, by the vengeful Ku Klux. The inevitable sequel was settled enmity between the races, which is too likely some day to find tragic vent; for the negro, though generally apathetic, when his passions are aroused, can be a fiend.

"Sophy of Kravonia"

Captain Markart was entirely of his majesty's opinion as he set out on his journey to Praslok. His ride would be rough, dark and solitary—the last by Stenovics' orders. Markart was not afraid. He was well armed, but he expected to be very bored and knew that he would be very glad to get into the comfort of the castle. He breathed a fervent curse on the necessities of state, of which the minister had insisted him, as he betrayed his every movement and subservience to the wishes of the people, and so hour before the castle.

Going was very heavy; so was the rain; so was the darkness. He and his horse made a blurred, laboring shape on the murky face of night. But his orders were to hasten, and he pushed on at a sharp trot and soon covered his first stage, the five miles to the old wooden bridge, where the road leaves the course of the Krath, is carried over the river and strikes northeast toward the hills.

At this point he received the first intimation that his journey was not to be so solitary as he had supposed. When he was halfway across the bridge he heard what sounded like an echo of the beat of his horse's hoofs on the timbers behind him. The thing seemed odd. He halted a moment to listen. The sound of his horse's hoofs stopped, but the echo went on. It was no echo, then. He was not the only traveler that way. He picked his horse with the spur. Regaining the road, he heard the timbers of the bridge still sounding. He touched his horse again and went forward briskly. He had no reason to associate his fellow traveler's errand with his own, but he was sure that when General Stenovics ordered a dispatch he would not be pleased to learn that his messenger had been passed by another wayfarer on the road.

But the stranger, too, was in a hurry, it seemed. Markart could not shake him off. On the contrary, he drew nearer. The road was still broad and good. Markart tried a canter. The stranger broke into a canter. "At any rate, it makes for good time," thought Markart, smiling uneasily. In fact, the two found themselves drawn into a sort of race. On they went, covering the miles at a quick, sustained trot, exhilarating to the men, but rather a strain on their horses. Both were well mounted. Markart wondered who the stranger with such a good horse was. He turned his head, but could see only the same sort of blur as he himself made. Part of the blur, however, seemed of a lighter color than his own dark overcoat produced.

The man with the lantern raised it in the and air.

Markart's horse pecked. His rider awoke to the fact that he was pressing his mount without doing much good to himself. He would see whether the unknown meant to pass him or was content to keep on equal terms. His pace fell to a gentle trot—so did the stranger's. Markart walked his horse for half a mile—so did the stranger. Thenceforward they went easily, each keeping his position till Markart came to where the road forked—on the right to Dobrava, on the left to Praslok and Volseni. Markart drew rein and waited. He might just as well see where the stranger was going.

The stranger came up, and Markart started violently. The lighter tinge of the blur was explained. The stranger rode a white horse. It flashed on Markart that the prince rode a white charger and that the animal had been in Slavna the day before. He had seen it being exercised. He peered into the darkness, trying to see the man's face. The effort was of no avail. The stranger came to a stand beside him, and for a few moments neither moved. Then the stranger turned his horse's head to the left. He was for Praslok or Volseni, then! Markart followed his example. He knew why he did not speak to the stranger, but he was wondering why on earth the stranger did not speak to him. He went on wondering till it occurred to him that perhaps the stranger was in exactly the same state of mind.

There was no question of cantering or even of trotting now. The road rose steeply. It was loose and foundered from heavy rain. Great stones lay about, dangerous traps for a careless rider. The horses labored. At the same moment, with the same instinct, Markart and the stranger dismounted. The next three miles were done on foot, and there before them in deeper black rose the grim tower of the castle of Praslok. The stranger had fallen a little behind again. Now he drew level. They were almost opposite the castle.

A dog barked from the stables. Another answered from the castle. Two more took up the cry from the stables. The castle guardian redoubled his responsive efforts. A man came running out from the stables with a lantern. A light flashed in the doorway of the castle. Both Markart and the stranger came to a standstill. The man with the lantern raised it in the air to see the faces of the travelers.

They saw each other's faces too. The first result was to send them into a fit of laughter—a relief from tension, a recognition of the absurdity into which their diplomatic caution had led them.

"By the powers, Captain Markart!"

"M. Zerkovitch, by heaven!"

They laughed again.

"Ah, and we might have had a pleasant ride together!"

"I should have rejoiced in the solace of your conversation!"

But neither asked the other why he had behaved in such a ridiculous manner.

"And our destination is the same?" asked Zerkovitch. "You stop here at the castle?"

"Yes, yes, M. Zerkovitch! And you?"

"Yes, captain, yes. My journey ends at the castle."

The men led away their horses, which sorely needed tending, and they mounted the wooden causeway side by side, both feeling foolish, yet sure they had done right. In the doorway stood Peter Vassip with his lantern.

"Private and urgent, gentlemen," he said. It was between 2 and 3 in the morning.

They looked at each other. Zerkovitch was quicker, and, with a courteous gesture, invited his companion to take precedence.

"Private and urgent, with his royal highness'?

"So is mine, Peter," said Zerkovitch.

Markart's humor was touched again. He began to laugh. Zerkovitch laughed, too, but there was a touch of excitement and nervousness in his mirth.

"His royal highness went to bed an hour ago," said Peter Vassip.

"I'm afraid you must rouse him. My business is immediate," said Markart. "And I suppose yours is, too, M. Zerkovitch?" he added jokingly.

"That it is," said Zerkovitch.

"I'll rouse the prince. Will you follow me, gentlemen?"

Peter closed and barred the gate, and they followed him through the courtyard. A couple of servitors were posting in. For the rest all was still. Peter led them into a small room where a fire was burning and left them together. Side by side they stood close to the fire. Each flung away his coat and tried to dry his boots and breeches at the comforting blaze.

The prince read his letter.

"We must keep this story a secret or we shall be laughed at by all Slavna, M. Zerkovitch."

Zerkovitch gave him a sharp glance. "I should think you would report your discreet conduct to your superiors, captain. Orders are orders, secrecy is secrecy, even though it turns out that there was no need for it."

Markart was about to reply with a sneer when the prince appeared. He greeted both cordially, showing, of course, in Markart's presence no surprise at Zerkovitch's arrival.

"There will be rooms and food and wine ready for you, gentlemen, in a few minutes. Captain Markart, you must rest here for tonight, for your horse's sake as well as your own. I suppose your business will wait till the morning?"

"My orders were to lose not a moment in communicating it to you, sir."

"Very well. You're from his majesty?"

"Yes, sir."

"The king comes first—and I dare say your affair will wait, Zerkovitch?"

Zerkovitch protested with an eagerness by no means discreet in the presence of a third party, an old-de-camp to Stenovics. "No, sir; no, it can't wait an".

The prince interrupted. "Nonsense, man, nonsense! Now go to your room. I'll come to you as soon as I can." He pushed his overzealous friend from the room, calling to Peter Vassip to guide him to the apartment he was to occupy. Then he came back to Markart. "Now, captain!"

Markart took out his letter and presented it, with a salute. "Sit down while I read it," said the prince, seating himself at the table.

The prince read his letter and sat tapping with it in his fingers for half a minute or so. Then a thought seemed to strike him. "Heavens, I never told Peter to light fires! I hope he has. You're wet, and Zerkovitch is terribly liable to take cold." He jumped up. "Excuse me. We have no bells in this old place, you know." He ran out of the room, closing the door behind him.

Markart sprang to the door. He did not dare to open it, but he listened to the prince's footsteps. They sounded to the left—one, two, three, four, five, six paces. They stopped. A door opened and shut. Markart made a mental note of which way back to the fire, smiling. He thought that idea of his really would please General Stenovics.

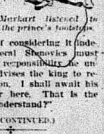
In three minutes the prince returned. "I did Peter injustice. Zerkovitch's fire is all right," he said, "and there's a good one in your room, too, he tells me. Now, captain, to your letter and business. You know the contents of the letter you carried?"

"Yes, sir. They were communicated to me in view of their urgency and in case of accident to the letter."

"As a matter of form, repeat the gist to me."

"General Stenovics has to inform your royal highness on the king's behalf that his majesty sees no need of a personal interview, as his mind is irrevocably fixed, and he orders your royal highness to set out for Germany within three days from the receipt of this letter. No protest is to delay your royal highness' departure."

"Perfectly correct, captain. Tomorrow I shall give you an answer addressed directly to the king, but I wish now to give you a message to General Stenovics. I shall ask the king for an audience. Unless he appoints a time within two days I shall conclude that he has not had the letter or, pray mark this, has not enjoyed an opportunity of considering it independently. General Stenovics must consider what a responsibility he undertakes if he advises the king to refuse me this son. I shall await his majesty's answer here. That is the message. You understand?"



Markart listened to the prince's words.

MELLOW THISTLEWAITE.

The Church of St. Mary Magdalene was again the scene of a quiet wedding on Tuesday morning, Feb. 23d at 10 o'clock, when Mr. Wm. H. Mellow, a prosperous retired of Deseronto, and Miss Victoria Thistlewaite, a highly esteemed young lady of Napanee, joined hearts and hands for life. The bride was given away by Mr Robert Bowen, of Deseronto Road, a brother in law, whose son Mr Robert D. Bowen performed the duties of best man. Rev. Rural Dean Dibb, Vicar of the Parish, officiated. The bride wore a becoming travelling suit of navy blue trimmed with satinette braid, and a hat to match with mauve and purple roses. Her only ornament was a large and handsome gold cross and chain, the gift of the groom. After the immediate relatives of the bride were entertained. The happy couple left amid many friends to visit Mr. and Mrs. Mellow for many years of joy and happiness.

DEATH OF RICHARD WHEELER.

Mr. Richard Wheeler, a much respected resident of Napanee, and proprietor and manager of the Queen's Hotel for many years, died very suddenly on Sunday morning last, aged 58 years and 3 months. He got up as usual in apparent good health, and after partaking of breakfast, went to the kitchen to get a drink of water. He was taken suddenly ill, and expired almost immediately, never uttering a sound. Heart failure was the cause of death. Dick, as he was familiar known, was very popular among his friends and acquaintances. He was known by almost every travelling man between Toronto and Montreal, and many expressions of regret were heard on all sides at his early demise. He leaves, besides his wife, two children, Misses Nora, Allie and Sadie, and one son Clarence, and an aged mother, Mrs. John Wheeler, from whom he has never separated before, and one brother, James, a resident of the State of Michigan, for many years past. The funeral took place on Tuesday morning last at 9 o'clock. A solemn requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. Father O'Connor, after which the body was placed in the R. C. vault. The family have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their bereavement.

REUBEN AND HIS SWEETHEART

Bijou Opera House Friday, March 5th.

The play, Reuben and His Sweetheart is a big fun show with a touch of natural and pathos rushing through it. The story was made and adapted especially for the production, and adds much to the naturalness. Si and Mandy are very prominent Down East characters that will remind you of the good old days way back home. Bill Tabor is a hero in rags, is one of those hard luck characters that is full of sympathy and friends' nests to the comedy. Reuben and His Sweetheart are both comedy parts and keeps the fun going continuously. Frank Hamilton and wife are the centre of attraction and with Tom Cunningham being the worked to pasture, and with the devil on hand save further trouble and the fortune is given to the rightful owner. Specialties are introduced, and the orchestra enlivens all musical pieces. Mr. Perry, of Derry from Kerry, is well known, they will be greeted with a full house.

SILVER-SCOTT.

A quiet but impressive ceremony was performed by the Rev. S. F. Dixon, at the parsonage, Tamworth, on the evening of Feb. 17th, at 7 o'clock, when Miss Harriett Silver, of Tamworth, and John Scott, a prosperous young farmer of Forest Mills, were united in hold bonds of matrimony. After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's mother, where a sumptuous repast awaited them, to which the immediate relatives of the contracting parties did ample justice, and gave the bride and groom their best wishes by their respective toasts. The bride was most becomingly attired in a suit of brown cashmere, with brown picture hat to match and sable furs. The bride was a quiet, humble, Christian young woman, highly respected in the neighborhood, and a useful member of the church, and the groom is to be congratulated on his choice. Mr. Scott was a general favorite among his associates, and was very popular with all classes. The large number of costly and useful gifts testified the esteem in which the young couple are held. Mr. and Mrs. Scott intend taking up their abode on the farm at Forest Mills, and they will be at home to friends after March 1st. May long life, health, wealth and prosperity ever be their lot. We extend congratulations.

MAGISTRATE'S ECZEMA CURED

AFTER 20 YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Zam-Buk's Healing Power Proved by School Commissioner and Baptist Deacon.

ONE of the most recent converts to the Zam-Buk method of treating and curing disease is Mr. C. E. Sanford, of Weston, King's Co., N.S.

Mr. Sanford is a Justice of the Peace for the County, and a member of the Board of School Commissioners. He is also Deacon of the Baptist Church in Berwick. Indeed, throughout the County it would be difficult to find a man more widely known and more highly respected. Some time back he had occasion to test Zam-Buk, and here is his opinion of this great balm. He says:—

I never used anything that gave me such satisfaction as Zam-Buk. I had a patch of eczema on my ankle, which had been there for over twenty years. Sometimes, also, the disease would break out on my shoulders. I had taken solution of arsenic, had applied various ointments, and tried all sorts of things to obtain a cure, but all in vain. I was advised to give Zam-Buk a trial, and as I am a firm believer in Nature's remedies, I did so. From first applying it I saw it was altogether different to the ordinary ointments and embrocations, and it soon began to show signs of clearing away the eczema on my ankle. This was so gratifying, that I persevered for some time with it, and I am glad to say it had the desired result. I am now cured of the disease which defied every other treatment for twenty years.

This is not the only direction in which I have proved the merits of Zam-Buk. I suffered for a long time from piles, and I found a perfect cure for this painful ailment in Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk soothes the pain, relieves the congested veins, and so restores the elasticity to the tissues that the piles gradually but surely disappear."

Zam-Buk is also unequalled for curing cuts, burns, bruises, ulcers, piles, ringworm, scalp sores, blood poisoning, abscesses, eczema, chronic sores, varicose veins, chilblains, cold sores, bad legs, diseased ankles, and all other skin diseases and injuries. Rubbed well into the pores of the skin, Zam-Buk's herbal essences are absorbed into the blood, thus reaching the seat of the trouble. Of all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse the harmful imitations recommended to be "just as good."

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THIS SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON BY REV. DR. LISSCOTT FOR THE INTERNATIONAL NEWSPAPER BIBLE STUDY CLUB FOR MARCH 7th, 1909.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)

Philip and the Ethiopian—Acts viii. 26-40.

Golden Text—Ye search the Scriptures because ye think that in them ye have eternal life: and they are they which bear witness of me.—John v. 39.

Verse 26—When God directs to by circumstances or by a friend, or by an angel, it is just as much from God as though He spake to direct.

I do not know whether this angel was a devout man or woman, or a mental picture, or a dream, or a spirit, or he, she or it, convinced Philip that God want ed him to go south; now how did Philip know that the impression to go south was of God, and how may we hope to get similar circumstances. (This question must be answered in writing by noon Tuesday in the club.)

May any person who is not playing double with God, advise what "the Lord says," to direct us to outward circumstances.

Verse 27, 28—Philip found that he had not come on a fool's errand, now is it not invariably so that results of men run always justify the faith vision of today.

Seeing the Ethiopian was a man of exalted position in a foreign country what was the guidance of Philip?

Verse 29—When Philip saw this man's chariot looming up in the distance, perhaps after days or weeks of waiting, will faith or sight or both, or the impression that this was his opportunity, or from whom did he get the impression?

With what sort of a report did Philip approach the Ethiopian, and what would you have said to Philip?

If a man sincerely searches the Scriptures he is sure to find God.

Philip's opening sentence, "Understandest thou what thou readest?" got the full import of any fact without the aid of the Holy Spirit.

Who found out or who told out "what is written in the Bible" to the Ethiopian was the Holy Spirit.

It is always necessary that some one should explain the Bible to the unsaved.

Philip's interpretation and the result, got the full import of any fact without the aid of the Holy Spirit.

Who found out or who told out "what is written in the Bible" to the Ethiopian was the Holy Spirit.

It is always necessary that some one should explain the Bible to the unsaved.

Philip's interpretation and the result, some women that often applied to Jesus or God to think that he was doctoring them, or that they were doctoring him.

But not the greatest, as often stated, was the ignorance of the Ethiopian as to the way of salvation

"Perfectly, sir."

"Just repeat it. The terms are important."

Markart obeyed. The prince nodded his head.

"You shall have the letter for the king early in the morning. Now forfeed! I'll show you to your room."

They went out and turned to the left. Markart counted their paces. At six paces they came to a door and passed it. Four farther on the prince ushered him into the room where he was to sleep. It was evident that the prince had made personal inspection of the state of M. Zerkovitch's bed.

"Good night, captain. By the way, the king continues well?"

"Mr. Satchell says so, sir, that he doesn't think his majesty was ever better in his life."

The prince looked at him for first a moment, with a quiet, live smile. "Ah, and a trustworthy man, Satchell! Good night."

Markart did not see much reason to think that the question, the look, the smile and the comment had any significance, but there would be no harm in being on the safe side. Therefore, before he went to bed, he forgot to count the fifty paces this time. If the fall counted the same, it would have to count the fifty-one. Zerkovitch's fire needed all the next inspection. It needed it almost as much as the boots of the king's self-appointed valet and your cousin by a thread. That was the morning which Lepsius had given and Zerkovitch had carried through the night.

Chapter Twenty-one

THE storm had passed. The day broke calm and radiant over the castle of Prasiok. Sunshine played caressingly on the lake and on the hills.

Markart had breakfasted and paid a visit to his horse. He wanted to be off by 9 o'clock and waited only for the prince's letter. He was returning from the stables, smiling the morning air with a most vivid enjoyment of the change of weather, when he saw Sophy coming along the road. She had been for a walk. Her eyes and cheeks glowed with exhilaration. She wore her sheepskin tunic, her sheepskin cap with its red cockade and her short blue skirt over high boots. She walked as though on the clouds of heaven, a wonderful lightness in her tread. The red star signified the exaltation of her spirit. The glad sound of the trumpet rang in her heart.

Her cordial greeting to Markart was spiced with raillery, to which he responded as well as his ignorance allowed. He was uncertain how much she knew of the real situation. But if his tongue was embarrassed his eyes spoke freely. He could not keep them from her face. To him she seemed a queen of life and joy that glorious morning.

"You've recovered from your fright!" she asked. "Poor M. Zerkovitch is still sleeping his off, I suppose! Oh, the story's all over the castle!"

"It'll be all over the country soon," said Markart, with a rueful smile.

"Well, after all, M. Zerkovitch is a journalist, and journalists don't spare even themselves, you know. And you're not a reticent person, are you? Don't you remember all the information you gave me once?"

"Ah, on the terrace of the Hotel de Paris! Much has happened since then, baroness."

"Much always happens if you keep your eyes open," said Sophy.

"If you keep yours open nothing happens for me but looking at them."

She laughed merrily. A compliment never displeased Sophy, and she could take it very downright.

"But if I were to shut my eyes, what would you do then?"

He looked dolefully at her mocking face. She meant a little more than the idle words naturally carried.

"I don't think you'll give me the chance of considering, baroness." He indicated her costume with a gesture of his hand. "You've entered the service, I see."

"Yes, Captain Markart, the king's service. We are brethren. You serve him too?"

"I have that honor." Markart flushed under her laughing scrutiny.

"We fight shoulder to shoulder, then. Well, not quite. I'm a gunner, you see."

"Minus your guns at present!"

"Not for long!" She turned round and swept her arms out toward the lake and the hills. "It's a day to think of nothing—just to go riding, riding, riding!" Her laugh rang out in merry longing.

"What prevents you?"

"My military duties perhaps, cap-

What La Grippe Did.

Mr. G. D. Colwell, of Walkerville, Ont., was stricken down with La Grippe in 1906 and it left him in very bad condition. He says: "I was all run down and bordering on Consumption. I could not sleep at nights, had awful sweats, and coughed nearly the whole time. This is how I was when I began to take PSYCHINE, in a low nervous state; but from the first bottle I began to improve. It laid me to rights for me and brought me back to health in no time, making a new man of me."

It fortifies the body against the attacks of La Grippe and is a sure preventative. I always take PSYCHINE if I feel a cold coming on and it puts me right in no time."

PSYCHINE tones the system and keeps the body in good physical condition. No one can afford to be without it. All Druggists and Stores sell at 50c and $1.00. Send to DR. T. A. SLOCUM, Limited, Spadina Ave., Toronto, for a TRIAL FREE.

For Coughs, Colds, Throat, Lung and Stomach Trouble take Psychine.

CREAM OF THE WEST FLOUR

"CREAM OF THE WEST" may cost you a trifle more than other grades of Manitoba flour. But you get it does. What does a few cents per bag more matter if you get complete satisfaction.

"CREAM OF THE WEST" is honestly as good a grade of flour as can be made from the hardest of hard Manitoba wheat and that means the best wheat in the world.

Every bag of "CREAM OF THE WEST" is an expensive flour to mill because it represents the very "cream of the heart of the wheat berry" but it rings true in the baking.

"CREAM OF THE WEST" is a flour that always pleases. Order a bag.

Acute Indigestion

Cured Through the Timely Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

There is no medicine can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for stomach trouble. These Pills are not an artificial appetizer but a tonic. They act directly on the blood, and through the blood on the stomach, stimulating them and creating that natural, healthy appetite. Then comes the digestion. The food is thoroughly digested by the stomach, and absorbed by the blood and carried to every organ in the body. That is how Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure stomach troubles and all blood disorders. That is how they give health and strength to weak worn out people. Mr. H. Thomas Curry, Post Master, Lord Nelson, says:—"About three years ago I was attacked with what the doctors called acute indigestion. The first indication was a bad taste in my mouth, then vomiting and a sallow complexion. Later on these symptoms developed, my tongue was heavily coated, especially in the morning, and I felt particularly dull. My appetite began to dwindle and even a light meal left me with a sense of having eaten too much. As I grew worse I ate hardly enough to sustain my body, but still experienced the most acute pains. I switched languor came over me which I could not throw off. It seemed as if I were always tired, with but little strength and frequent violent headache. The trouble grew on by day by day as well as from others, failed to relieve me, even to relieve me, I was in this deplorable state for almost a year when I read in a newspaper one day of a case not in a way unlike mine, through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I determined to give these Pills a trial. It was not long before I felt some relief from the distress after meals, and as I continued the use of the Pills all languor and drowsiness and headache left me, and I began to enjoy renewed energy and good health. Today I am a well man, owning its good health with never a change of the old trouble and I attribute my present health to the fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

WEDDING MUSIC

It happened at the Little Church around the Corner.

A wedding was in progress.

The organist had played "Lohengrin Coming In" and was prepared to play "Mendelssohn Going Out."

During the ceremony the strains of "Call Me Thine Own" were blent with the prayer book service.

Suddenly the sexton, whispered in the ear of the organist: "Both of them's been married three times!"

Instantly the fingers on the keyboard modulated into the key of Get Flat, and through the low vaulted aisles rippled the beautiful Opus 2-th Street. "Just for Tyrdit."

THE GUARDIAN STANDS PAT

The Mail and Empire of Wednesday reprints from The Christian Guardian a two article on the Carman-Jackson episode, as follows:

"Let It Not Stampede"—is the heading of the editorial on the Carman-Jackson controversy in this week's issue of the Christian Guardian, the official organ of the Methodist church. The text of the article was as follows: "Considerable interest, in fact something bordering upon a panic, has been stirred up in the city during the past week by the report of the reported utterances of the Rev. Ben Hardisty Sherborne, in Bond street church, touching the method of interpretation of the opening chapters of the Book of Genesis. Some letters relating to this matter have reached the editor of this paper for insertion in the columns. He has also been advised that if he has duty to speak out plainly with his uncertain sound, confusing and condemning a supposedly serious and fatal teaching, he would like to do so. Let us say to say to that he could not be justified in opening the columns of the paper just at this time to a general discussion of this question, and also he finds himself unprepared to pronounce upon the views of the writer of Mr. Jackson's methods of interpretation.

"From the tone and temper of such letters as have come to hand, as well as from the words of many who have discussed this matter in our hearing, we judge that the present is a time for calm and prolonged consideration touching the whole question of truth and error. The well-being of the church at very large is involved. We would not favor fear at this juncture, but we would urge that in all such a controversy a would most greatly profit could only result from hasty action, grounds that it converted a very small matter into a formidable issue. The views of the author of some quotations recently published in a main during a heated controversy may be right or wrong, for the truth which in reality is not to be determined by the triumph of the argument.

"While nothing at all upon these lines has yet been said in opposition to anything Mr. Jackson's teaching we have reason to believe that many who agree with us in the main hardly go so far as he does in some of his views, and who, if controversy should arise, would be compelled to range themselves on the side of the author of the statement that the Bible is not to be regarded as an infallible book, and that the writers were not preserved from all error. We do not say that we are not so considered. Mr. Jackson has distinguished himself in the past as a man of ability and scholarship. While they are to be heard with respect, they are not to be followed blindly. When they are to be heard with respect, they are not to be followed blindly. When they are to be heard with respect, they are not to be followed blindly. When

It is style in clothes that shows the difference between the Prince and the Peasant.

Smart, spic-and-span, stylish suit is business asset.

Our ordered clothing is both stylish and good fitting.

But best of all, this style and shapeliness is tailored into each garment; it will have that stylish appearance until it is worn out.

CURLING.

On Monday night, the final match for the Chinneck medal was played at the Curling rink. Before this match Dr. Leonard's rink had won 10 matches and lost one, and Mr. Travers' rink had won 11 and lost none. By winning on Monday Mr. Travers' rink won the medal and completed a series of 12 played matches without a defeat.

A large and enthusiastic crowd of spectators was in attendance, and the good plays of the curlers were liberally applauded.

After Mr. Herb. Daly had presented the medal to Mr. Travers on behalf of the Curling Club, a speach was called for, but Mr. Travers thought that he would give one on some future occasion, and merely stated that his men had done very consistent work all through the season. The summary,

TO THE OLD COVERED BRIDGE. ERECTED IN 1840.

Thy weary form is still in view
At three score years and nine,
And experts say we can't renew
The strength that long was thine

To stem the floods that 'gainst thee pour
In breaking swift descent,
Undaunted, and with thund'rous roar
On ugly mischief bent.

Time's ruthless hand has brought decay
To thy old form unique,
And thou, like us, must pass away
And kind oblivion seek.

But still 'tis sad to part with one
Who hast so long withstood
The blasts of storm, the heat of sun,
And foaming, raging flood

We fain would have the longer stay
And with skilled hand we'll try,
Though thee something stronger lay
And straighten what's awry.

And so to keep thee yet awhile
Whom our forefathers knew,
For them was made when Tom was the style
To make thing good and true.

Two Sides to a Story.

The following is a copy of a letter which Mr. Nathan B. Miller had printed on slips and circulated throughout the constituency before the Federal contest in it he says: The Beaver refused to publish the same. We absolutely deny the allegation. The week before election as we were overcrowded with matter for publication, but ordered it in type for the following week. N. B. could not have it that week as it would run in the time for the purpose for which he intended it. The second letter following Mr. Miller's side of the story is self-explanatory.

MR. MILLER'S SIDE

To the Editor of the Napanee Paper:

Dear Sir.—The Beaver of October 16th, 1908, gives a summary of Mr. Wilson's speech in which he makes charges against the Immigration Agent of Ottawa.

These charges were made, as is likely to happen in any show business. In this case the charges were refuted and proved to be known. Mr. Wilson could have known that the mistake had been rectified long as easily as he knew they had been made and it shows his inability that he did not know it. At his meeting in Waterville it was proven to him that the statement was untrue by those who were present, yet he continues to make the same statement.

The Government keeps back sufficient money due agents to cover any error which might be made, and no money will be paid to the agent where the immigrant has not been properly placed and a certificate sent to the Government, from the farmer over his own signature that such immigrant had been so placed.

I have no money whatever in my possession to which I am not entitled.

Yours truly,
N. B. MILLER.

Note.—This letter was given to The Beaver Office for publication and payment offered, but they refused to publish it, as it disapproved Mr. Wilson's contentions.

NAPANEE AGENT IS DISMISSED.

Nathan B. Miller Claimed Commission On Men Placed Other Than as Farm Laborers.

From Toronto News.

Ottawa, Feb. 27th.—For years Mr. Uriah Wilson, M.P. for Lennox, has been working on the abuses of the immigration system. Of late he has been on the trail of one Government employment agent in particular—Nathan B. Miller, of Napanee. After a good deal of work, he prepared against him a case which he submitted to the Department, threatening that if it did not take action he would bring the case up in the House. As a result Mr. Miller has received the following official letter:

Ottawa, 16th February, 1909.

I beg to inform you that it has been decided to dispense with your services as Canadian Government employment agent from this date.

Your dismissal is due to your action in sending in commission bills of 1908 and 818, claiming to have placed certain immigrants as farm laborers with G. Deshane and C. Denison, whereas these parties were respectively foreman for the Grand Trunk Railway and groceryman.

Kindly return to me the book of commission claims and other Departmental stationery now in your possession.

Your obedient servant,
W. D. SCOTT,
Superintendent of Immigration

They found everything neatly and correctly kept and speak eloquently of the efficient manner in which all the books are kept.

—The rate for the general taxes of the Town for 1909 will likely be struck at 15 mills on the dollar this year, the same being 7 mills less than last year. The members of the Council are very confident that this rate will be sufficient to pay everything, without running into debt again. Reeve Rittan was of the opinion that 16 mills would have been sufficient.

MRS. S. P. HINCH

Died at her late residence, Odessa Avenue, Chatham, Man., on Wednesday morning, the 24th Feb., Hannah M. Bell, wife of S. P. Hinch, formerly of Napanee, Ont.

The subject of this sketch was born in Elizabethtown, on the 20 of September 1867, being a daughter of the late William Bell. They moved to Carman in the spring of 1902 and lived there continuously till the time of her decease. Mrs. Hinch had by her kindly disposition and beautiful life made many friends during her residence there. She was a member of the Methodist church from her earliest days, and active in church work.

She leaves to mourn her decease besides her husband, two children, Mary, wife of George Sexsmith, of Winnipeg, and Thomas Wilfrid Bell, aged 17 years, besides five brothers, Nathan B. Bell, Morven, John Bell, Morven, B. J. Bell, twin brother, Trenton, G. E. Bell, Belleville, W. G. Bell, Detroit, and three sisters, Mrs. Levi VanSlyck, Wallbridge, Ont., Mrs. Mary Ann Napanee and Mrs. John Fralick, Morven.

The funeral was held from the residence of her sister, Mrs. Miller, Dundas st., the last sad rites being preached by the Rev. G. W. McCall, after which the remains were placed in Riverside vault. The casket was covered with wreaths of flowers, showing the high esteem in which the deceased lady was held. The bearers were Messrs. H. J. Fralick, Will Hoyle, Chas. Kaylor, J. L. Hoyes, F. E. Vanhaven and T. B. Wallace. The stricken family have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in Napanee and vicinity in their sad bereavement.

Wall Paper Talks!

Number 4.

We have given a few points in our previous Talks on The object of papering rooms from an artistic standpoint. The influence of color and also a few points on Corrective Treatment.

Many more things might be said on the subject but a thorough knowledge of the rooms, their size and locations is necessary before reliable advice can be given as to the best kind of paper to use.

A great many people make, I think, a mistake in using too cheap a paper. Take for instance a room requiring 10 rolls paper. If you put 25c per roll, the cost of paper would be 50c. It costs as much to put it on the walls as a better quality at paper, say 15c per roll or for the room $2.40—a total cost of $2.90 for the room papered with 25c paper.

Supposing a 10- paper is used, the cost would be for paper, $1.00. The papering would cost the same, i.e. $2.40, a total of $4.00, or only 50c more than the 25c paper, and you have a paper of double the value.

Again, supposing you are papering a dining room with a good paper, costing say 40c per roll. Instead of putting this on plain, you can panel the walls, or use an upper third or put on an attractive base—and these add vastly to the attractiveness of the room at practically no expense—just a little time.

We propose having a WALL PAPER OPENING next week, beginning Friday, March 12th, and will be ready to show you many new and novel ways of treating a room so as to make it a good place to live in.

Before closing let me say that white or light cream ceilings are as popular this year as ever, but th so should never be used unless the ceilings are perfectly smooth and even. Any imperfection in the ceiling shows up a plain paper.

We shall be glad to show you our new papers at any time, and think we can safely guarantee you a sight of the best line of papers ever brought to Napanee.

THE INTELLIGENT USE OF

Newbro's Herpicide

Rarely Fails to Produce the Most Gratifying Results.

MISS DELLA KNIGHT

The prominent American actress, whose photograph is shown above, writes as follows:

"I have found nothing to equal Newbro's Herpicide. It keeps the hair from falling and frees the scalp of dandruff. An occasional application leaves the hair delightfully fluffy." (Signed) Della Knight.

READ THIS LETTER.

Enclosed please find coupon for soap and comb with order for six cents, for which please send the above article.

I have used Newbro's Herpicide for two years and think an article so meritorious should be well advertised and widely used for it is a boon to all womankind. I am giving you my experience and "do think it likely" to be of interest and are welcome to use it and think best, for I have proved such great benefit from Herpicide that I would like others to know of it.

When I began its use two years ago my hair was only two inches long and very thin, the result of local heat conditions in India, the intense heat of the climate having ruined my hair. I tried everything in Europe and in America without benefit, until I tried Herpicide. I am delighted with it, feel and my friends, never like of admiring my hair, it is long, soft and as nice as a baby's hair; not a gray hair to be seen and my hair was quite gray, before I used your incomparable remedy. I do not think the praises of Herpicide can be sung too loudly or too long. Several of my friends are using Herpicide on the strength of my recommendation." (Signed) MRS. S. A. LEE Richmond, Va.

NOTE—Herpicide will not darken gray hair and we do not want anyone to spend money for Herpicide in the belief that it will. Herpicide will stop falling hair, but if the hair that falls is gray, the new growth will also be gray. In this particular the above case is remarkable.

Send 10 cents in stamps to The HERPICIDE COMPANY, Dept. L., Windsor, Ont., for sample and booklet. Regular Dollar bottles guaranteed. At Drug Stores. When you call for Herpicide do not accept a substitute. Applications at prominent Barber shops.

SEPARATED.

A agreement of Alberta were recently drawn up one Sunday by the local magistrate, but the parties were hastily parted and could not be induced to live together.

Now, sergeant major, said the colonel, dismiss the men who did not fall out and march the others to church, they need it most.

It seems that the question of an imperial army with which they can be ready to march promptly daily is about to be taken in the hand of the formation of a practicable scheme. This is well. The Britons can hardly fail to receive some light about Canada and its people. He will learn what is the proportion of the really British element in our population ready to take arms at the call of the mother country in time of the other races, the French, the Celtic Irish and the miscellaneous immigrants, including now a considerable and increasing number of Americans. If the whole force is to be organized by the Imperial authorities, it will be desirable that information will be obtained. It will have a better one forward. It would certainly be desirable that the men undergo a training such as to make them available for the regular army, if they need nothing at present except that, when needed, they can be called upon to serve. Nothing has been said about the question of organization. Mr. Haldane's utterances to that question will be made only at the time when the House of Commons is in session. Meanwhile, there are rumors of a scheme which, in principles, certainly, would be a good one, if it can be established. Paris Figaro.

This woman says that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved her life.

Mme. Emma Chatel, Valleyfield, Belleriver, Quebec, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I want to tell you that without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I would not be alive. For months I suffered with painful and irregular periods and inflammation of the feminine organs. Doctors could do nothing for me, and said I must submit to an operation as I had a tumor. One of my cousins advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as it had cured her.

"I did so and now I have no pain and am entirely cured. Your remedy is deserving of great praise."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

pain," she answered. "You're lucky. You have a long ride. Don't spoil it by thinking."

"I think? Oh, no, baroness! I only obey my orders."

"And they never make you think?" Her glance was quick at him for an instant.

"There's danger in thinking, too much, even for ladies," he told her. She looked at him more gravely, for his eyes were on her now, with a kindly, perhaps a remorseful, look.

"You mean that for me?" she asked. "But I'll, too, only obey my orders!"

With all my heart I hope they may lead you into no danger," he said.

"There's only one danger in all the world losing what you love."

"And sometimes gaining it?" he asked quickly.

Still, the only danger would be of losing it again."

"There's life, a too," he remarked, with a shrug.

"Sir, were soldiers!" she cried in hurry reproof.

"That doesn't prevent me from prizing your life, baroness, in the interests of a world not too rich in what you contribute to it."

Sophy looked at him, a subtle merriment in her eyes. "I think, Captain Markart, that if you were my doctor and knew no help a change of air I think is too exciting, is that it? But I found Slavna—well, far from relaxing."

The Kravonian climate as a whole, baroness—"

"Oh, no, no! that's too much!" she protested. Then she said: "It's very kind of you, sir, I mean. That—and it's quite. I don't know—but probably I have your orders. So I thank you. I can face even the rigors of Kravonia."

He could not but hand. He bent and kissed it. "In fact, I hadn't the least doubt," he confessed, "of the happy termination of your point of view. I a your friend, baroness."

"In party to the crime I'll be?" she queried, with a shrug of raillery dance. To Sophy adventure herself always argued good fortune in a man. She liked that ingredient. Almost at the moment a groom led Markart's horse to the stables. The prince made a bow to Sophy, another to Markart.

Presently, and you remember things to General Stenovics?" he suggested.

He gave Markart his hand, with a pleasant ride to you, captain," he said, "and I'll ride to make into a smile.

"I to have M. Zerkovitch's this time, sir?"

"Certainly! You see, Zerkovitch, the castle soon after 6 o'clock, and I don't night, yes, but he was

Markart into a laugh at the dear Markart's face. "We neither of us, Captain Markart, did we?" he cried. "We thought he was the fright you'd given us."

The highness gives me assurance," answered Markart, his eyes twinkling.

"Captain. But don't be severe with me. No invidious distinction! Sobrinski proposed himself to General Stenovics immediately on his arrival."

Markart bowed in the manner his own expense. "I'm hardly

He must be made of iron, highness!"

Sophy smiled the prince. As he mounted he added, "Au re-

He left the two standing side by side, the prince's serious face lit up with a rare smile, Sophy's merry radiant in merriment. His own face fell as he rode away. "Ah, half wish I was in the other camp," he grumbled. "But Stenovics' power held him —and the fear of Stafnitz. He went back to a work in which his heart no was, for his heart had felt So-can have had next to no sleep that night, monseigneur," said Sophy to him, mingled with commiseration. "I don't need it. The sight of your refreshes me. We must talk. Ah, brought news?"

understand the father's reasons keeping me in the dark. He meant but he was blinded by this idea my marriage. But I see, too, it fitted in with Stenovics' ideas. It's a war between us, now, and Sophy."

Sophy was almost dazed. The king's was not to be relied on for a week or a day—no, not for an hour! But listened attentively. Zerkovitch come back to Slavna on a good and at top speed. He would have with two hours' lead of Markart. first duty was to open communion with Lepage and arrange that the should send him all the information which came to his ears and any which he was able to gather at the palace. Zerkovitch would forthe reports to Praslok immediately as the prince remained at the Bel the prince was persuaded that his father would not refuse to see now that he knew the true state of the case. "My father is really attached to me," he said, "and if I see him I'm confident that I can persuade him of the inexpediency of my leaving the kingdom just now. A hint of my suspicions with regard to the crown and Stenovics would do it, but I'm reluctant to risk giving him such a shock. I think I can manage it without."

"But is it safe for you to trust yourself at Slavna in the palace and alone?"

"I may risk the palace alone, and I'm not much afraid. Stenovics might go to war with me, but I don't think he'd favor assassination. And to Slavna I shan't go alone. Our gunners will go with us, Sophy. We have news of the guns being on the way. There will be nothing strange in my marching the gunners down to meet them. They're only half trained even in drill, but they're brave fellows. We'll take up our quarters with them in Suleiman's tower. I don't fear all Slavna if I hold Suleiman's tower with 200 Volunteers. Stafnitz may do his worst!"

"Yes, I see," she answered thoughtfully. "I can't come with you to Suleiman's tower, though."

Sophy's tone was signs of danger. They pained Marie must come. If all should go ill for her house. We must meet often, as often as possible, for the rest of the time we're in Slavna."

She saw that they must wait. It was impossible to approach the king on the matter of Sophy. It cut dead at the heart of his ambition. It would be a shock as great as the discovery of Countess Ellenburg's ambitions. It could not be told her.

"But if under Stenovics' influence the king does refuse to see you?" she asked—"Refuses to see you and repeats his orders?"

The prince's face grew very grave, but his voice was firm.

"Not even the king—not even my father—can make me flinch from my duty. My inheritance which is mine. The hand would be the king's, but the voice the voice of Stenovics. I shouldn't obey. They'd have to come to Volseni and take me."

Sophy's eyes kindled. "Yes, that's right!" she said. "And for today?"

"Nothing will happen today unless by chance the thing which we now know may happen any day, and of that we shouldn't hear till evening. And there's no drill even. I sent the men to their homes on forty-eight hours' furlough yesterday morning." His face relaxed in a smile. "I think today we can have a holiday, Sophy."

She clasped her hands in glee. "Oh, monseigneur, a holiday!"

"It must be the last for a long time," he said, "so we must enjoy it."

This day—this holiday which might be the last—passed in a fine carelessness and a rich joy in living. The cheerless sky and the glittering waters of Lake Slavna forbade to be a pleasure, whether as they rode far along the shore or sat and ate a simple meal on the rock strewn margin. Hopes and fears, dangers and stern resolves were forgotten. Even of the happier issues which the future promised or dangled before their eyes they was little thought or for as speech. The blood of youth flowed briskly. The heart of youth rose high. The prince joked, jested and paid his court. Sophy's eyes gleamed with the fun as not even the most exalted and perilous adventure could make them sparkle.

"Oh, it's good," she cried—"good to live and see the sun! Monseigneur, I believe I'm a pagan—a sun worshiper! When he's good enough to warm me through and to make the water glitter for me and shadows dance in such a cunning pattern on the hills, then I think I've done something that he likes and that he's pleased with me!" She sprang to her feet and stretched out her hands toward the sun. "In the grave, I believe, I shall remember the glorious light. My memory of that could surely never die!"

His was the holiday mood too. He fell in with her extravagance, meeting it with banter.

"It's only a lamp," he said, "just a lamp, and it's hung there for the sole purpose of showing Sophy's eyes. When she's not there they put it out, for what's the use of it?"

"They put it out when I'm not there?"

"I've noticed it happen a dozen times of late."

"It lights up again when I come, monseigneur?"

"Ah, then I forget to look!"

"You get very little sun anyhow, sir!"

"I've something so much better."

It is pathetic to read—pathetic that she should have set it down as though every word of it were precious—set it down as minutely as she chronicled the details of the critical hours to which fate was soon to call her.

They came together as the sun was setting—a sun of ruddy gold, behind it one bright purple cloud, the sky around blue, deepening almost into black. When Praslok came in sight she hid her hand on his, with a long drawn sigh.

"We have been together today," she said. "That will be there always. Yes, the sun and the world were made for us today, and we have worthily—"

He pressed her hand. "You were sent to teach me what joy is—the worth of the world to men who live in it. You're the angel of joy. Before you came I had missed that lesson."

"I'm very glad"—thus she ends her own record of this day of glory—"that I've brought joy to Monseigneur. He faces his fight joyful of heart." And then, with one of her absurd, deplorable, irresistible lapses into the unreal ordinary feminine, she adds, "That red badge is just the touch my sheepskin cap wanted!"

Oh, Sophy, Sophy! What of that for a final reflection on the eve of monseigneur's fight?

Chapter Twenty-two

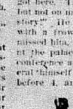
THERE was a stir in Slavna. Excitement was gradually growing and unconfined with uneasiness." Gossip was busy at the Hotel de Paris and at the Golden Lion. Men chattered in groups and talked, while their wives said they would be better at home, minding their business and letting politics alone. Knowledge was far to seek. Rumors were plentiful. Dr. Natchoff uttered as reassuring as he pleased, but he had spent the night at the palace! All was quiet in the city, the news ran, of the force that was being raised in Volseni, and the size of the force lost nothing on the report passed from mouth to mouth. Little as Slavna loved the prince, it was not eager to fight him. A certain reaction in his favor set in. If they did not love him, they had not in sincere respect. If he meant to fight, then they were not sure that they did!

Baroness Dobrava's name, too, was much on men's lips. Stories about Sophy were bandied to and fro. People began to remember that they had from the beginning thought her very remarkable—a force to be reckoned with. The superstitious ideas about her made their first definite appearance now. She had bewitched the prince, they said, and the men of the hills too. The whole mountain country would rise at her bidding and swarm down on Slavna in rude warfare and mad bravery. The sheepskins would come, following the red star!

The citizens of Slavna did not relish the prospect. At the best it would be very bad for trade. At the worst it would mean blood and death let loose in the streets. A stern ruler was better than civil war. The troops of the garrison were no longer such favorites as they had been. Captain Markart's rules subdued his demeanor, which indeed, had never quite recovered from the chastisement of the prince's sword, to a self effacing discretion. He, too, in his heart and in his hearty, primitive brain had an uneasy feeling about the witch with the red star. Had she not been the beginning of trouble? But for her Sterkoff's long knife would have met an end to the whole chapter. Long ago!

The time was short and the omens doubtful. It was the moment for a bold stroke, for a fierce game. The wavereres must be shown where power lay, whose was the winning side.

Captain Markart arrived at Slavna at 1 o'clock. Zerkovitch had used his start well and reached the city nearly three hours earlier. When Markart told his services—he requested himself at once to the general—how he had been entrusted Stenovics smiled, saying: "I know, and I know what he has done since he got here. They stole a march on you, but not on me, captain. And now, your story." He listened to Markart's tale of the evening before and then also missed him, saying: "You will meet me at the palace. We meet the king in conference at 4 o'clock." But the general himself at the palace before 4, and he and Stafnitz were closeted with Countess Ellenburg. Lepage, returning from a walk to the city at 2 o'clock, saw the general arrive on horseback. Later he met Rastatz saw Lepage arrive—aye, and had seen him set out—all duly marked all his goings, but of this Lepage was unconscious. The little lieutenant was dazzled at the sight of a soldier, but he was an excellent spy. Le page had been with Zerkovitch.



"Thy stolen march, on you, but not on me," he said to the captain."

The king was confined to his apartments, a suit of six rooms on the first floor, facing the river. Here he had his own sitting room, dressing and bedrooms. Besides these there were the little cupboard Lepage slept in and a spare room, which at present remained dated Dr. Natchoff. The sixth room was occupied by odds and ends, including the tackle, rods and other implements of his majesty's favorite pastime. The council was held in the sitting room. Natchoff and Lepage were not present, but each was in his own room, ready for any possible call on his services. Markart was there, first to fit his story and deliver his letter, second in his capacity as secretary to General Stenovics. The countess and Stafnitz completed the party.

The king was anxious, worried, obviously unwell. His voice trembled as he read aloud his son's letter. It was brief, but dutiful and even affectionate. After a slight reproach that he should have been kept in ignorance of things professions entertained about the king's health the prince requested an audience within the next two days. He had considerations which it was his duty to lay before his majesty, and he firmly but respectfully claimed the right of confidential communication with his father. That was essential to his majesty's obtaining a true appreciation of his views. The bit at Stenovics was plain enough, and the prince did not labor it. The letter ended, as it began, with expressions of concern for the king's health. There was no word in it about starting on his journey.

Then Markart told his story—not that he had much to tell. In essence he added only that the prince proposed to await the king's arrival at Praslok. Neither to him had the prince said a word about starting on his journey.

On this point Stenovics seized, pursued, pounced. He had not failed in that preliminary discussion with the other two members of the little coterie.

"It is remarkable, sir, even more than remarkable, that his royal highness makes no reference at all to the direct command which your majesty was pleased to issue to him," he observed.

The king listened, puzzled and rather distressed. "Yes, it isn't proper; it isn't proper," he said more than once. "He knows the state of my health I think I must see him. It seems unnatural to refuse. After all, it may be the last time, since he's going on this journey."

"But is the prince going on his journey, sir?" asked Stenovics. "Does the studied silence of his letter augur well for his obedience? Doesn't he seek an interview in order to persuade your majesty against your better judgment? I am not hardened to scenes of revolt. Great interests are at stake." The last words were true enough, though not in the sense in which the king was meant to understand them.

"My son knows how near this matter is to my heart. I shall be able to persuade him to do his duty," said the king.

The first round of the fight was going against the coterie. They did not want the king to see his son. Danger lay there. The prince's was the cutting of character. It might well prevail, and they were no longer certain that the prince knew or guessed nothing of their hopes and intentions. How much news had Zerkovitch carried to Praslok the night before? Stenovics addressed the king again.

"Captain Markart gathered that the prince was reluctant to interrupt the military training on which he is engaged at Volseni, sir."

"A very excellent thing, that, but the other matter is more urgent. I shouldn't change my mind on account of that."

"A personal interview might be trying to your majesty."

The king looked annoyed, possibly a little suspicious. "You've no other objection than that to urge, General Stenovics?"

Stenovics had none other which he could produce. "No, sir," he said.

"While I'm here I must do my duty, and I shall induce my son to do his. I'll receive the Prince of Slavna in private audience tomorrow or next day. I'll fix the precise time later, and I'll write to the prince myself."

The decision was final, and it was defeat so far. There was a moment's silence. Markart saw Colonel Stafnitz nod his head almost imperceptibly toward Countess Ellenburg. The need and the moment for re-enforcements had come. The colonel was calling them up. The order of battle had been well considered in Countess Ellenburg's apartments. The hour had come for its action. The countess began with a question, put with a sneer:

"Did no other reason for the prince's unwillingness to set out on his journey suggest itself to Captain Markart from what he saw at Praslok?"

The king turned sharply round to her, then to Markart. "Well?" he asked the latter.

Markart was sadly embarrassed. "Who was at Praslok?" asked the countess.

"Mme. Zerkovitch, and her husband for some night, and Baroness Dobrava."

"Yes, Baroness Dobrava!"

"She's still there?" asked the king. He looked perplexed, even vexed, but seemed to be satisfied. He looked at Stenovics and Stafnitz, but this time, he found no responsive smiles. Their faces were deadly serious. "Oh, come, well—well, there's no serious. Natural perhaps, but—the prince has a sense of duty. He'll see that that won't do. He'll send the baroness a hint—we'll tell her how much we miss her at Slavna." He tried to make them answer his smile and accept his smoothing away of the difficulty. It was all a failure.

"I'm bound to say, sir, that I consider Baroness Lepage a person whose influence to his royal highness obeying your wishes—a serious obstacle," said Stenovics.

"Then we must get her away, general."

"Will he let her go?" snapped the countess.

"I must order it if it comes to that," said the king. "These little—er—affairs these—what—holiday flirtations"—

The countess did not or appeared to lose control of herself suddenly. "Little affairs! Holiday flirtations! If it were only that it would be a serious matter for us, sir, and beneath mine. It's more than that!"

The king started and leaned forward, looking at her. She rose to her feet, crying: "More than that! While we sit talking here he may be marrying that woman!"

"Marrying her?" cried the king. His face turned red and then, as the blood ebbed again, became very pale.

"That's what she means—yes, and what he means too!"

The king was aghast. The second assault struck home—struck at his dearest hopes and wounded his most fitful ambitions, but he was still incredulous. He spread out trembling hands, turning from one vehement woman to his two counselors.

"Gentlemen!" he said imploringly, with outstretched hands.

They were silent, grave and silent.

"Captain Markart, you—you saw anything to suggest this—this terrible idea?"

The fire was hot on poor Markart again. He stammered and stuttered.

"The—the baroness seemed to have much influence, sir, to be held a very high position in the prince's regard; to—to be in his confidence"—

"Yes?" struck in the countess. "She wears the uniform of the artillery! Isn't that a compliment usually reserved for ladies of royal rank? I appeal to you, Colonel Stafnitz!"

"In most services it is so, I believe, countess," the colonel answered gravely.

"But I should never allow it—and without my consent"—

"It might be invalid, sir, though there's some doubt about that, but it would be a fatal bar to the German project. Even an influence short of actual marriage"—

The colonel rose to his feet and saluted.

"She means marriage, I say, marriage!" The countess was quite rudely impatient of her self-control. She was very artistic.

"An ambitious and dangerous woman! She has taken advantage of the favor the king showed her."

"And if I died?" asked the king.

Stenovics shrugged his shoulders. "Of course there would be no control then, sir."

The king looked around. "We must get her away from Praslok."

"Will she come?" jeered the countess. "Not she! Will he let her go? Not her!"

The king passed his hand wearily across his brow. Then he rang a bell on the table. Lepage entered, and the king bade him bring him the draft which Natchoff had prescribed for his nerves. Well might the unfortunate monarch be in need of it, for the countess' open scepticism and the not less formidable calm of Stenovics and Stafnitz. And all his favorite dreams in danger!

"She won't leave him or he'll leave her. The woman has infatuated him!" the countess persisted.

"Pray, madame, let me think," said the harassed and sick king. "We must open communications with Baroness Dobrava."

"May I suggest that the matter might prove urgent, sir?" said Stenovics.

"Every hour is full of danger," declared the countess.

The king held up his hand for silence. Then he took paper and pen and wrote with his own hand some lines. He signed the document and folded it. His face was now firm and calm. The peril to his greatest hopes—perhaps a sense of the precarious tenure of his power—seemed to impart to him a new promptness, a decision alien to his normal character. "Colonel Stafnitz!" he said in a tone of command.

The colonel rose to his feet and saluted. From an adviser in council he became in a moment a soldier on duty.

"I am about to intrust to you a duty of great delicacy. I choose you because, short of General Stenovics himself, there is no man in whom I have such confidence. Tomorrow morning you will go to Praslok and inform his royal highness that you have a communication from me for the Baroness Dobrava. If the prince is absent you will see the baroness herself. If she is absent you will follow her and find her. The matter is urgent. You will tell her that it is my request that she at once accompany you back here to the palace. I have a carriage ready for you and request you to arrest Baroness Dobrava and escort her here by force, if necessary, notwithstanding any objection or resistance which any person whatever will offer at his peril. You will be back here by tomorrow evening with the baroness in your charge. Do it without employing the order for arrest if possible, but do it anyhow and at all costs. Do you understand?"

"Perfectly, sir. Am I to take an escort?"

The answer to that question was anxiously considered and awarded aloud slowly.

"Yes," said the king. "you will. The prince is not to know of your mission, but he will reason with her—she'll hear reason—and persuade her that her health will benefit by a foreign trip. If necessary I shall cause her to be deported. She must be out of Kravonia in three days unless she can clear herself from all suspicion. I'll arrange that the prince shan't come for his audience until she is well out of Slavna. It is, of course, a holiday command, but the sword of this should pass the walls of this room. If once a hint of it reached Praslok the task of laying our hands on the baroness might become infinitely more difficult."

The three were well pleased. They had come to their own and on that score alone would be right glad to see the last of her. And while she had gone there was a fairer chance that the prince, too, would go at his travels. Whether he went after her or not they cared little so that he went and the recruiting and training at Volseni were interrupted.

Again, she was to go before the audience. That was another point. The peril of the audience remained, but they had improved their chances. Perhaps Stafnitz's brain was already busy with the possibilities of his mission and his escort. The letter was to be sent soon enough to make him secure from hindrance by any act short of open and flagrant resistance to the king's commands. If it were impossible, as his majesty obviously considered, to contemplate such resistance it was evidently to be impossible to reckon what might happen as a consequence of it!

The king rang his bell impatiently. "I want my draft again. I'm very tired. Is there anything else which need detain us today?"

As he spoke Stenovics could answer, Lepage came in with the draft. The valet wore an even unusually demure and uninterested expression.

"There is one other matter, sir," said Stenovics.

The king paused in the act of drinking and frowned, still holding in his hand, Lepage standing beside him.

"Your majesty just now impressed on us the need of secrecy as to what has passed in this room. I think, sir, you would insist on the same thing with all who serve you confidentially. You haven't asked, sir, how the prince became aware of the state of your majesty's health."

The king started a little. "No; I forgot that. It was entirely my direct orders. How was it?"

Stenovics kept his eyes on the king. Markart and Stafnitz affected the deaf, self-engrossed. Lepage's features defied the scrutiny well.

"The news, sir, was betrayed by"—with his eyes on a man!—"by a breach with your majesty."

"Natchoff!" exclaimed the king.

"Certainly not, sir. Another. This man was under suspicion at Slavna when I caused to be watched, went by night to the house of M. Zerkovitch, who is, as you are aware, a close friend and, if I may use the word, an adherent of the Prince of Slavna. Their interview took place between 8 and 10 last night. At 11 Zerkovitch, having borrowed a horse from the prince's stables, set out for Praslok. He rode hard through the night and reached the camp at Capuja Markart was to be met by the small hours of the morning. There he had an interview with the prince. He left Praslok between 6 and 7 in the morning, riding at full speed—not on the south boulevard by 11. At half past 11 he walked up the Street of the Fountains, crossed St. Michael's square and entered a small inn in a little alley behind the cathedral. Here the man remained till 4 o'clock, waiting for him. They were together half an hour. Zerkovitch then left. The man remained till 1 there came out and returned to the palace by a circuitous route, arriving here about 2 o'clock. I venture to say that the meaning of all this is quite clear. This man is in communication with Praslok, using Zerkovitch as his intermediary. It's for your majesty to say how far his disobedience in regard to acquainting the prince with your condition is serious offense. As to that [illegible] but it will be observed that I should know nothing [illegible] measures undertaken or contemplated."

The king had listened carefully. "The case seems clear," he said. "Tals fellow's a traitor. He's done harm already and may do more. What do you ask, general?"

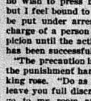
"We might be content to let him know nothing, but who can be quite certain of hearing that? Sir, you have just arrived at a very important decision—to take certain action. Absolute secrecy is essential to its success. I've no wish to press hardly on this man, but I feel bound to urge that he should be put under arrest and kept in the charge of a person who is beyond suspicion until the action to which I refer has been successfully carried out."

"The precaution is an obvious one and the punishment hardly sufficient." The king rose. "Do as you say, general. I leave you full discretion. And now I'll go to my room and rest. I'm very tired. Give me your arm, Lepage, and come and make me comfortable."

Lepage did not offer his arm. He was not looking at the king nor listening to him. His eyes and his ears were for General Stenovics. Stenovics rose now and pointed his finger at Lepage.

"That, sir, is the man," said he.

"Lepage!" cried the king and sank heavily into his seat, with a bewildered face. Lepage—his familiar—the man he trusted!



Chapter Twenty-three

THE king's ambition and pride had quivered under the threat of a crushing blow. The charge against Lepage wounded him hardly less deeply. He regarded his body servant with the trustful affection which grows on an indolent man in course of years—of countless days of consulting, trusting, relying on one ever presently ever ready, always trustworthy. Lepage had been with him nearly thirty years. There was hardly a secret of the king's manhood which he had not known and kept. At last had he turned traitor!

Stenovics had failed to allow for this human side of the matter—how much more alone the revelation would make the king feel, how much more exposed and helpless, just, moreover, when sickness made his honorable servant more indispensable still. A forlorn dignity filled the king's simple anguish. Is it true, Lepage?"

Lepage's impassivity vanished. He, too, was deeply moved. The sense of guilt was on him—of guilt against his master. It threw him on his self-defense to a fierce rage against those who had goaded him into his disobedience, those action and plans had made his disobedience right, for right never be believed and felt it. His talks with Zerkovitch had crystallized his suspicions into confident certainty. He was carried beyond thinking of what effect his outburst might have on his own fortunes or how it might distress the already harassed king. He struck back fiercely at his accuser, all his national quickness of passion finding vent in the torrent of words he poured forth in excuse or justification. He spoke his native French very quickly, easy word jostling over another, his arms flying like windmills and his hair bristling, as it seemed, with defiance.

"Yes, it's true, sir. I disobeyed your majesty's order the first time in thirty years. For the first time in my life, sir, I did it. And why? Because it was right. Because it was for honor. I was angry, yes! I had been insulted because Count Alexis bade me call him 'prince' and you heard me do it. Yes, I was angry. Was it my fault? Had I told him he was a prince? No! Who had told him he was a prince? Isn't ask me, sir. Ask somebody else. For my part, I know well the difference between one who is a prince and one who is not. Oh, I'm not ignorant of that! I know, too, the difference between one who is a prince and one who is not—oh, with the utmost respect to Mme. la Comtesse—but I know it, and I re- [illegible] Does everybody else re- [illegible]

He stopped for a moment and clutched at his stiff, tight collar as though to wrench it away from his neck and let the stream of his words flow even more freely. While he paused nobody spoke. Stenovics' heavy gaze was on the king. Stafnitz's eyes were fixedly on the ceiling. The countess looked scared. Had they made a mistake? Would it have been better to run the risk of what Lepage could do? The king's hands were on the table in front of him. They trembled where they lay.

"Why was the prince to know? Because then he wouldn't go on his journey: His journey after the German princess?" He faced Stenovics fiercely and defiantly, pointing a forefinger at him. "Yes, they wanted him to go. Yes, they did! Why, sir? To make a marriage—a great marriage! Was that what they wanted? Eh, but it would have been little use for Count Alexis to ask me to call him a prince then! And Mme. la Comtesse—with the utmost respect to Mme. la Comtesse—she wanted a great princess here? Oh, she wanted that mightily, to be sure!"

The king rose uneasily in his chair. "Sir, will you listen to him?" the countess broke in.

His answer was cold. "I listen to every man before I order him to be punished."

"Yes, they wanted him to go. Yes, certainly! For he trains his men at Volseni, trains them for his big guns. When the men are trained and the guns have come, well, who'll call Count Alexis a prince then? Will even they who taught him to think himself a prince? Oh, yes, they wanted him to go! And he wouldn't go if he knew your majesty was ill. He loves your majesty. Yes! But if he hated you, still would he go?" With a sudden turn he was round on Stenovics again and threw out his arms as though to embrace a plentude. "Look! The prince is away, the guns are come, the king dies! Who commands in the palace? Who governs Slavna?" He was back to the king with another swift turn. "May I answer, sir? May I tell you?" The mother of Prince Alexis commands in the palace. Slavna is ruled by the friends of Captain Mistitch!" His voice fell to an ironical murmur. "And the prince is far off—seeking a great princess! Sir, do you see the picture?"

Stafnitz suddenly lowered his eyes from the ceiling and looked at the gesticulating little man, with a smile.

"Such imagination in the servants' hall!" he murmured half under his breath.

The king neither rebuked his levity nor indorsed the insinuated satire. He took no notice at all. His eyes were fixed on his still trembling hands.

Stenovics spoke in a calm, smooth voice. "Absolutely, sir, I believe the man's honesty," he said, with an indication of good humored surprise. "One sees how he got the idea! I'm sure he's genuinely devoted to your majesty and to the prince's well being. He sees something going on which he doesn't understand. He knows something is going on which he's ignorant of. He knows the unfortunate condition of your majesty's health. He's like a nurse—forgive me in charge of a sick child. He thinks everybody but himself has designs on his charge. It's really natural, however absurd, but it surely makes the prevention of surprises, even of mistakes, easy. If he send about spreading a tale like this"—

The king was eleven cleverer far than the countess, far more than Stafnitz's airily bitter sneer. But for it, too, the king took no notice. Lepage took no more than by the word "control" of his emotion. He leant down, took off the discarded, still hated king and said in a calm voice:

"They wanted him to go, yes! Do they not want him to come back again, sir? It's half a little lower and almost whispered—"to succeed your majesty upon the throne, sir? Mme. la Comtesse—with the utmost respect—she will not seek to deny that. Mme. la Comtesse is a clever woman, but she is not a fool. She must see that the prince has no [illegible] to succeed your majesty but his son. Mme. la Comtesse is not a fool, but she is a woman

FORWARDERS LIMITED

Head Office, Kingston, Canada

Capital $500,000, divided into 2500 shares of Common Stock of $100.00 each and 2500 shares of 7% Cumulative Preferred Stock of $100.00 each.

President—W. G. CRAIG, Wholesale Kingston.
Vice-Pres.—G. I. MALLORY, Brockville.
Directors—W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville.
GEO. SCHMIDT, Pembroke.
M. E. GALVIN, Detroit.

FORWARDERS, Limited, was incorporated 12th December, 1908, by Letters Patent, from the Dominion of Canada, and was formed to take over and operate as a going concern the Elevator of Cereals Limited, situate on the west side of Gore St., in the City of Kingston.

The promoters of FORWARDERS, Limited, realize that Kingston is the natural port for all lake boats with cargoes for Montreal, and have demonstrated that it is cheaper to transfer cargoes from the large lake boats through the Elevators into tow barges, which proceed to Montreal, and permit the large lake boats to return immediately to Fort William or Port Arthur, than for the Lake Carriers to continue to Montreal and return.

Statistics have proved that Montreal has captured the European grain trade, it now being more extensive than New York or any other port.

The Canadian route is the quickest and shortest through transportation.

A Cabinet Minister stated recently in the House of Commons that he had been informed that if the Welland Canal were deepened to carry vessels from Duluth to the foot of Lake Ontario, it would hold the trade from the West against the Erie Canal for all time.

These conditions tend to make the Port of Kingston permanent and increasingly important.

Since the C. P. R. built its first elevator at Fort William each year has seen an increased capacity for storing and transferring grain.

In 1908 the storage capacity of Fort William and Port Arthur amounted to 18,852,700 bushels. There are now new elevators now being built and two more projected, and the end of 1909 there will be a capacity of 25,000,000 bushels at these ports to receive, store and transfer the grain that will come from the West.

Last year there passed through Kingston and Prescott 30 per cent. of all the grain that left Fort William and Port Arthur and this percentage will increase as the trade increases.

The wheat crop alone of 1908 was 106,853,000 bushels although only about 6 per cent. of arable land of Western Canada was under cultivation.

Lord Strathcona predicts that at the end of the century Canada will have a population of 60,000,000, and J. Hill has stated his belief that fifty years hence the country will have 50,000,000 people.

These few statements will serve to prove the enormous growth and development to be expected in the carrying trade of the St. Lawrence route.

The promoters of FORWARDERS, Limited, believe these possibilities. They have organized to take advantage of them and they invite others to join them.

The Mooers elevator has been secured in exchange for shares in FORWARDERS, Limited, but barges, tugs, and so forth, are required, and additional cash capital must be secured.

FORWARDERS, Limited, have authorized an issue of 7% Cumulative PREFERRED STOCK to be sold to secure additional capital.

A prospectus of the Company and application forms will be mailed or delivered to any address.

Applications for stock must be accompanied with 10% on account, the balance of the subscription to be paid in instalments of 30% on thirty days notice.

BAY OF QUINTE.

In the old historic township of Adolphustown Methodism first started in Canada, and here stands, at the present time the first Methodist church ever built, and built in the year 1792, and which was for many years the only place of worship in this and the adjoining township. In 1894 a new and up-to-date church was erected, which was named the Bay of Quinte Memorial Church. The Rev. W. R. Young, the able pastor of St. James' Church, Montreal was then the minister in charge. On the 17th January, inst., the Silver Anniversary was held. The Rev. W. R. Young, B.A., B.D., preached morning and evening, and gave an address on the following Monday evening. On each occasion the church was crowded. Dr. Young outdid himself, and the people were glad to have their old minister with them again. The Rev. W. S. Boyce, B.A., B.D., is closing his desirable year in this circuit, and to say that his services, with the assistance of Mrs. Boyce, have been a success, would not express it all. The large debt on the parsonage has been paid. The churches are all out of debt. The congregations are larger, every year his promised salary has been more than paid, and for all purposes last year there was more than $2,100 raised on the circuit. We are sorry that the rules of the church are such that we cannot retain Mr. and Mrs. Boyce with us.—The Christian Guardian.

Delicate Children.

Doctor Told this Mother that Vinol is a Fine Remedy—Mrs. Flagg Tells How Her Daughter Was Restored to Health by Vinol.

"Our little daughter, six years of age, after a severe attack of the measles, which developed into pneumonia, was left with a hacking cough and constipation. They had no appetite, and her stomach was so weak it could not retain food. She lay in this condition for weeks, nothing the doctor prescribed did a bit of good, and we were beginning to think she would never recover.

"At this time we commenced to give her Vinol, and the effect was marvellous. The doctor was amazed at her progress, when we told him we were giving her Vinol, he replied, 'It is a fine remedy, I wish I had it up.' We did so, and she recovered her health and strength months before the doctor said she would."—Mrs. J. W. Flagg, Portland, Me.

Vinol is a real cod liver preparation, containing in a highly concentrated form all of the body-building, strength-creating and curative elements of cod liver oil and tonic iron added. It is delicious to take and children love it.

Every mother who has a weak, delicate or ailing child, should try Vinol on our offer to return her money if it fails to give satisfaction. T. B. Wallace, Druggist, Napanee.

Huttan's residence, on walk north of the postoffice, or on Dundas st., east of the Northern Crown Bank.

One Who Slipped and Fell.

Napanee, March 1st, 1909.

HOCKEY.

A game of hockey was played here on Diamond's rink on Tuesday evening last between Napanee and Deseronto. At half-time the score stood Deseronto 6, Napanee 0, and in the second half Deseronto added 3 more to their number and Napanee scored 1, the game resulting in a victory in favor of Deseronto of 10-1. About 400 people saw the game, and at least half of those scaled the fence. This is the first game Napanee has had here this winter and the proceeds, about $24, was about half what it should have been. People who like to see the game should either pay or stay at home.

"COME BACK TO ERIN."

In recent years there has been a dearth on the local stage of the true representative poetic Irish play that was so popular in the days of the late Irish minstrel and comedian, "Billy Seanlen," and it is without gainsay that the enormous percentage of the Celtic race and their descendants, who have made America their home, a true Irish play with a heart story, introducing true Irish scenes and characters, with singing, dancing, music, Irish bagpipes, and a sparkling wit such as that of "Come Back to Erin," introducing Mr. Charles B. Mack and his company, which comes to the Bijou Opera House on Wednesday evening next, March 10th, should be a happy welcome to this town.

HIS SERVICES APPRECIATED.

At the Quarterly Board meeting in the Western Methodist church at its regular meeting on Tuesday evening the following resolution was adopted:

Moved by Bro. Sills, seconded by Chas. Stevens, that this Board assembled in its third Quarterly meeting wishes to place on record its appreciation of the excellent services rendered by its pastor, Rev. W. H. Emsley. We desire to have it recorded that the church has been exceptionally successful since his charge over it, having increased numerically, the deeper spiritual life having been manifested by the membership, the finances are in a very satisfactory condition, the prayer meeting has increased in number and influence, our young people of the church have become more interested in the work of the church and all the young peoples' societies are in a growing condition. The same may be said of all the societies in connection with the church. We also wish to place on record our deepest regrets as a Board and congregation, of the severe indisposition that overtook our pastor in his late illness, but we are thankful to our Father in Heaven that He has so graciously stored him to his usual health and strength and to be with us so nearly two years and with which much success has attended his efforts. Be it therefore resolved that this Board extend to the Rev. Wm. H. Emsley a hearty invitation to return to the W. M. Church as its pastor for the year 1909-1910, and it reclosed by the annual conference in June this Board and congregation pledge their united support in all matters affecting the welfare of the church for its spiritual and increase in membership, and a hearty devoted attendance at all and any of the services in connection with the church.

OBITUARY.

A very sad death occured in Camden, on February 10th, when Dolbert Hall was passed away at the residence of his father, Alexander Thompson. Mr. Thompson was 31 years of age, and deceased. He spent a few years in New York State, where he took a prominent part in Oddfellowism. Returning to the farm in Camden in November, on account of ill-health, he rapidly grew worse, and after a short illness of pneumonia, which medical aid could do nothing, he was very much missed, and will be greatly missed by a wide circle of friends.

It is then solemnly said a text to remember, for we will be passed by the when it is.

WOMEN!

Look as young as you are. Don't allow worry lines to creep in. Avoid them by keeping your nervous system and digestive organs in perfect condition with Vinol. VINOL repairs waste nerve tissue, and builds up strength.

Vinol is a Cod Liver and Iron Tonic. It contains peptonate of iron and all of the medicinal body-building properties of Cod Liver Oil—without the oil. Vinol tastes good and agrees with the weakest stomach.

ANAEMIA

is a complaint peculiar to women. It follows on indoor occupation—impure air—insufficient nourishment. Vinol is a wonderful blood tonic—it enriches the blood and gives one a good healthy color.

NERVOUSNESS

is caused by overwork, indigestion, or a run-down condition of the blood. Vinol is an ideal nerve tonic, it tones up the organs of digestion, enriches the blood and makes strong, steady nerves.

RUN-DOWN

Acts 3:1-26; Acts 9:32-43.

Golden Text—And Peter said unto him: Aeneas, Jesus Christ maketh thee whole; arise, and make thy bed. And he arose immediately.—Acts 9:34.

Verse 31—Do darkness and light, fighting and victory, sorrow and joy, persecution and "rest" alternate and constitute every normal Christian life to-day, as in the Christian Community in the days of Peter.

When a church walks in the fear of God," and "the comfort of the Holy Spirit," it is always multiplied?

Verse 32—Was there any institution, in the Apostolic age, to correspond with our settled pastorate?

If preachers were to follow the Apostolic plan, of "passing throughout all quarters" would the final conquest of the world be hastened?

To whom did the name "saint" apply, in those days, and should we continue the use of it in these days?

Verses 33, 34—Is all sickness of the Devil?

Are some people sick by the special dispensation of God?

Does not God also make most people to heaven through sickness?

What proportion of sickness is avoidable?

Are we to assume that God wants to cure everybody from their sickness, because he does from their sin?

Was Aeneas cured through his own faith, or by the power and pleasure of God, without faith?

What is the difference in this cure and modern faith healing?

Is God's ideal for us, sickness or health?

Does God cure some people sooner, in similar way to the cure of this man?

Is faith for the cure of sickness a special gift of God, and are we not instructed that God will cure the sick in answer to such faith?

Verse 35—When God does cure some cases of noted sickness, what are the results in the community?

If the Church should have the power restored of healing sickness, would it produce a permanent revival?

Verse 36—Joppa, what a rule possible for a Christian to live, as Dorcas does?

How many can classify those who content themselves with going to church and praying, and not following Jesus in "going about doing good?"

Why did God permit Dorcas to die?

When does God sometimes permit three to die upon the same week-day, in the bread winner of the family, the mother of little children, the pillar in the church, or the "leader" in the community?

Verse 38—Should a Christian always be ready to go to the house of sorrow, to render help and support?

It is a beautiful custom to speak of the good deeds of the dead, and fit in a well kept up; but is there not almost criminal neglect in speaking of the good deeds of the living? (This question must be answered in writing your own ribs.)

Verses 40-43—Is there any use to-day in raising the dead to prove the truth?

Why did God raise the dead in these, and not in other cases?

What great purpose has that miraculous act served?

Even if these miracles should prove to be not legend, will it effect any change in essential truth of Christianity?

Lesson for Sunday, March 21st, 1909—Review.

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS.

A very surprising and pleasing event occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. THE LATE MRS. GEORGE AREY.

On Sunday, Feb. 28th, at the residence of her son, W. J. Arey, 116 Centre St., Kingston, an estimable and esteemed lady passed away in the person of Mrs. Jonathan Arey. Since the death of her husband, ten years ago, she lived with her son, who loved in the home, and more especially by the grandchildren, to whom she was a kind and Christian mother. Formerly she was a member of Napanee, in the early days of the winter her health began to decline, and for some time medical treatment and loving care proved unavailing in checking the disease. During the past few days alarming symptoms developed rapidly, and Sunday the end came. Mrs. Arey was a much esteemed member of Chalmers church.

WATSON—CLARK.

A large congregation assembled in the Methodist Church, Bloomfield, Mon., on Wednesday evening, Jan. 27th, to witness the marriage of Mr. Lyman Watson, son of a local farmer, and Miss Cynthia Clark, of Marlbank, Ont. It was a delightful wintry evening, and the bright moonlight in which the colored windows, enhanced materially the effect of the handsome bride, who was given away by Mr. H. C. Smith, U.P.R. station agent, Bloomfield, lately attired in a dress of white cashmere, trimmed set off with flowers and embroidered and lace. Miss Edith Watson acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Hurtubise as groomsman. The church organist, Miss Mason, played the wedding march, and Rev. Fred. C. Middleton was the officiating minister. Mr. and Mrs. Watson left immediately for Newpeva, from whence they go to Lakeland to spend a couple of weeks among friends there. The bride wore a travelling dress of brown broadcloth.

DEATH OF ROBERT COLLINS.

Mr. Robert Collins, the death occurred at North Fredericksburgh, of Robert Collins, in his 82nd year. He was born in the County of Armagh, Ireland, in 1818, and came to Canada in 1824 with his parents, three sisters and one brother, all of whom predeceased him except one sister residing in this country they resided in Camden for forty years, where he was a member of the Council for a number of years. He later Newburgh where he maintained one for home. In 1846 he married Miss Filkins, daughter of Tandin Esq., of Camden East, who died in 1851, leaving two sons, who are still living, James, of Toronto, and one at home. In 1853 he married Miss Eleanor Hoffman, of Monroe, who survives, also a large family only one son is living, Albert, of Stockton, Cal. The last 30 years of his life were spent on the farm, near Centreville, where he was well known and highly respected. He was one of the pioneers of the County, and took part in the rebellion of 1837-38.

A QUIET WEDDING.

There was a scene of a happy event bloomed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Perry, when their second daughter, Maud was united in marriage to George F. Wright, formerly of Napanee. Miss Lee Flora, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and T. Quinn, cousin of the groom, as best man, the Rev. Father Carey officiating. After the ceremony Mr. Wright left for the home of the bride's parents, where a most thirty-five partook of a sumptuous repast, and a reception was given them, the bride receiving many handsome and mostly presents, showing the esteem in which she is held by her friends. The groom's present to the bride was a beautiful set of gold pins. The happy couple left later for their home, to the groomsmen, a gold stick pin. After dinner they indulged in dancing and music. The bride's dress consisted of cream voile trimmed with bands of cream net over white silk, with white picture hat to match. The groomsmaid's dress and jacket was of blue cloth, with white silk blouse and blue hat to match. They will take up their residence at Selby, where he is engaged in business with Mr. Wright. We join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Quinn every happiness and joy in their new sphere.

A PICTON WEDDING.

Groom is Electric Lineman and Bride Over Seventy—Spectators Barred Out.

Picton, March 4.—In Ann Arbor Church here to-day the marriage by Rev. William Shearer, of Mr. Stewart Brown, of Bloomfield and Mrs. Skinner took place. The groom, who is 24 years old, has been three times married, and the bride has passed the three-score years and ten mark. The church was closed against the crowd of curious townfolk who gathered, but Brown is a wealthy farmer, and very active, despite his advanced years. It is understood that by the will of her former husband the bridegroom gets the bulk of half of her income, which is considerable.

The Reminders Of Rheumatism

Cold, Wet Weather Starts the Pain, But the Trouble is in the Blood.

Cold, damp weather brings on the twinges and pains of rheumatism, but not the real cause of this complaint. The trouble is rooted in the blood and can only be cured by enriching the blood and driving the poisonous acids out of the system. This is a fact that medical truth which every rheumatic sufferer should realize. Liniments and outward applications may relieve the trouble—they can't reach the blood. The only way to cure rheumatism is to get good money in experimenting with this sort of treatment—and all the time the trouble is becoming more firmly rooted—harder to cure. There is just one medicine that can cure rheumatism, Dodd's Kidney Pills. They act directly on the blood, make rich, red blood. They purify and strengthen it, and so root out the cause of rheumatism.

Mrs. Peter S. Sadler, Newcastle Creek, N.B., says:—"In the summer of 1908 I became laid up in bed with rheumatism and I would soon get over the attack, but not seek medical aid, but used liniments in vain to allay the pain and swelling. Instead of getting better the trouble increased and I then consulted a doctor who pronounced it acute rheumatism, and treated me for that trouble, but instead of getting better the pain and swelling increased, and I was bedridden for about three months. On rising in the morning I was unable to walk without getting relief with extreme pain, having tried so much medicine with no benefit, I thought I would try Dodd's Kidney Pills. They were highly recommended to me by Dr. Phillips' Pink Pills. They did not, so I got a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and before they were all used I noticed an improvement, and then it was my pride to work hard and get well, but I felt like a different woman, and could do more housework than any other woman in the house. I had used only about half of the second box when I was entirely free from pain, and I have been free from pain ever since. I am now 70 years of age, and I am thankful to say that I am enjoying good health, and I attribute it entirely to the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Not only rheumatic sufferers but all who have any trouble due to poor, watery blood should use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They cure through the blood. Dr. Doan's Backache Kidney Pills are for any pain in the back, kidneys or bladder. Dodd's Kidney Pills, 50c.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert McCoy, Mrs. R. C. Lloyd, Napanee, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bell, and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bell, Mrs. Ellis Bell, Napanee, Mrs. Bell, Mrs. Albert Bell, Mrs. Earl Bell, and Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Bell, Napanee, were present. The guests all left for their homes, saying they had a pleasant day.

BROTHER CLANCY IN ILLINOIS.

The Albion Leader, Feb. 16th, 1909. It never makes much difference to Rev. Clancy where the 76-year-old feels he is, he always appears to be in the right place. Since he left here he spent the early fall in the tumultuous city of Chicago, and now he is in the prairies of Illinois it is all the same. Here he is, as usual, preaches vigorously and sings energetically, and speaks the proverbial "yellow-fellow" just as well as ever. He did a good deal of school visiting while here, and to grow old so cheerfully and contentedly in a little town where he has lived and labored for more than forty years; then to leave him for fifteen years; then to return to the personal bloom of youthful vigor, is a thing that Rev. Clancy, you'll never grow old. On the contrary, you never grow old. On the contrary, you never grow old. Our friend writes us from Rock Falls, Illinois, where he is staying with one of his sons, that he is greatly enjoying himself this winter, preaching and singing and visiting and many evenings.

Rev. Clancy is always ready and glad to make work to do for himself. He is chief correspondent for a Rock Falls paper. It says: "The Lincoln entertainment on the evening of the 12th inst. consisted of the programme for which was published in the last issue. Rev. Clancy was present, and the patrons and greatly enjoyed by all. The address by Rev. Clancy is said to have been a remarkable effort."

DREDGING OF THE NAPANEE RIVER.

Mr. URIAH WILSON—I would call attention to the fact that no provision is made in these estimates for the dredging of the Napanee river, concerning which I had an interview with the minister. A petition has been sent to the Governor-in-Council. There is a great need of little money being spent at this point. No dredging has been done since 1893, and several shallows have formed by the deposit of sand, gravel, etc., so that the smallest craft cannot be—frail drawing no more than six or seven feet. Every year knows, and as is no secret, as just said, every year vessels on the Bay of Quinte are being built larger. It is more difficult to get crafts to come into this harbour and carry anything like a heavy cargo all the way down.

Now I am informed by the coal merchants of our town that unless there is some dredging done there to take out the shoals, the chances are that the people will have to pay from 50 cents to $1 a ton more for their coal. That is not unfair to the people of that locality, inasmuch as we have had no public money spent, and as a town, in that riding since 1893. This is a matter of urgent necessity. The council of the Town of Napanee has passed a very strong resolution asking for the work to be done, which resolution I have left with the deputy minister of the Public Works department. I hope that the minister will give no some assurance to-night that this matter will receive careful consideration, and that we may have good reason to expect that during the coming season this dredging will be done. It will not be an extensive job, perhaps 13,000 or 14,000 yards, but a matter of fact, to make a really good job would require considerably more money. But if these shoals were taken out we might be able to go along for a few years until the government felt richer. I believe that year they intend to practise rigid economy, and I endorse that principle because we all know that the revenues have fallen off to a great extent. But works that are of actual and absolute necessity like these I think should be attended to, more especially when they only require a small outlay. I would strongly urge the minister to take this matter into his serious consideration, and if possible have that dredging done this year.

Mr. PUDSLEY—I may say to my hon. friend that I think there is no more important work in the interests of the country than dredging, and I am inclined to think that will be the opinion of my hon. friend. With reference to dredging the Napanee river, I have looked into it, and I am impressed with the public necessity of dredging the river for five or six miles between a certain point and the mouth of the river. If I can find it at all possible to arrange to dredge early in the coming year, this very necessary work will be proceeded with.

McINTYRE'S CITY.

Readers of The Beaver have no doubt observed that this city has not been referred to in these columns. The reason for it is that for at least a decade, but the citizens are progressive a business town as ever, and the growth of the town in the fall of 1813, when Jeremiah McIntyre built the first log house, to the present fifty years is kept green by the following descriptive ditty of his parentage:

Here lies the body of Jeremiah McIntyre,
Who died to make room for a better fire.
Reader, you may be in a hurry,
But Gabriel will be in a greater hurry.

A man he was to all the country dear,
And charged but five for a mug of beer.

Chapter Twenty-four

He looked at her. Something in her face appeared to strike him as strange. A sort of quiver ran through his body. He seemed to pull himself together with an effort. As he spoke to her his voice sounded faint and ever so slightly blurred.

"You've heard Lepage, and I know that you'll speak the truth to me on your oath—the truth about the thing nearest to the heart of a dying man—nearest to the heart of your dying husband. You wouldn't lie on oath to a dying man, your husband and your king, for I am dying. You have years still, but they'll end. You believe that some day you and I will stand together before the throne. As you shall answer to heaven in that day, is this true? Was it in your heart and in the heart of these men to keep my son, the heir of my house, from his throne? Is it true? As you shall answer to God for your soul, is there any truth in it?"

The woman went gray in the face—a sheet of gray paper seemed drawn over her cheeks. Her narrow lips showed a pale red streak across it. Her prayers—those laborious, ingenious, plausible prayers—helped her nothing here.

"I protest! At this time, sir! The countess will be upset!"

Stenovics had been driven to this. He feared greatly. Not a soul heeded him. Every eye now was on the woman. She struggled—she struggled to lie. She struggled to do what he believed would bring perdition to her soul. Her voice was forced and harsh when at last she broke silence.

"As I shall answer to God this day"—

"As you shall answer to God for your soul in that day"—the king repeated.

She gave a wild glance as if despairingly seeking succor, finding no refuge. Her eyes came back to the king's face. "As I shall answer"— Every word came forth by its own self, with its separate birth pang—"As I shall answer to God for my soul"—

She stopped. There was silence while a man might count ten. She threw her hands above her head and broke into a violent torrent of sobs.

"I can't! I can't!" they heard her say through her tumultuous weeping. The king suddenly started back in his chair as though somebody had offered to strike him. "You—you—you, my wife! You, Stenovics! You, whom I trusted—trusted—trusted like— Ah, is that you, Lepage? Did I hear rightly—wouldn't she swear?"

"With the utmost respect to Mme. la Countess, she could not swear, sir."

The king sprang to his feet. "Go!" he cried.

They all rose—the countess shaken with unconquerable sobs. But the next moment the king made a quick lookaround of the breath, like a man suddenly pricked by some sharp thing. He dropped back in his chair. His head fell to meet his hands on the table in front. The hands parted from the cheeks, crying: "Dr. Natchet! Dr. Natchet!" Stenovics wiped his brow. Stafnits raised his head, with a queer look at the king, and his pear-shaped face fell a while. The countess' sobs seemed as though frozen; her whole frame was rigid. The king did not move.

Natchet came rushing in. Lepage, who followed closely, shut the door after him. They both went to the king. There was silence while Dr. Natchet felt the king's pulse and temples.

He examined his eyes. In a couple of minutes he turned round to these.

"Something has caused his majesty strong agitation?"

"Yes," answered Stenovics.

"Ha," said Natchet. He cleared his throat and glanced doubtfully at the others.

"Well?" asked Stenovics.

Natchet threw out his hands, shrugging his shoulders over so slightly.

"I suppose, to my duty to the state, the worst possible—His majesty is dead."

Silence again—a silence strangely broken. Stafnits spread a handkerchief with a bound from a cat's and caught the physician by the shoulder.

"You!" he said. "But for twenty-four hours you! His majesty dies to-morrow!"

Natchet looked at him. Something in her face appeared to strike him as strange. A sort of quiver ran through his body. He seemed to pull himself together with an effort. As he spoke to her his voice sounded faint and ever so slightly blurred.

"You've heard Lepage, and I know that you'll speak the truth to me on your oath—the truth about the thing nearest to the heart of a dying man—nearest to the heart of your dying husband. You wouldn't lie on oath to a dying man, your husband and your king, for I am dying. You have years still, but they'll end. You believe that some day you and I will stand together before the throne. The woman went gray in the face—a sheet of gray paper seemed drawn over her cheeks. Her narrow lips showed a pale red streak across it. Her prayers—those laborious, ingenious, plausible prayers—helped her nothing here.

"I protest! At this time, sir! The countess will be upset!"

Stenovics had been driven to this. He feared greatly. Not a soul heeded him. Every eye now was on the woman. She struggled—she struggled to lie. She struggled to do what he believed would bring perdition to her soul. Her voice was forced and harsh when at last she broke silence.

"As I shall answer to God this day"—

"As you shall answer to God for your soul in that day"—the king repeated.

She gave a wild glance as if despairingly seeking succor, finding no refuge. Her eyes came back to the king's face. "As I shall answer"— Every word came forth by its own self, with its separate birth pang—"As I shall answer to God for my soul"—

She stopped. There was silence while a man might count ten. She threw her hands above her head and broke into a violent torrent of sobs.

"I can't! I can't!" they heard her say through her tumultuous weeping. The king suddenly started back in his chair as though somebody had offered to strike him. "You—you—you, my wife! You, Stenovics! You, whom I trusted—trusted—trusted like— Ah, is that you, Lepage? Did I hear rightly—wouldn't she swear?"

"With the utmost respect to Mme. la Countess, she could not swear, sir."

The king sprang to his feet. "Go!" he cried.

They all rose—the countess shaken with unconquerable sobs. But the next moment the king made a quick lookaround of the breath, like a man suddenly pricked by some sharp thing. He dropped back in his chair. His head fell to meet his hands on the table in front. The hands parted from the cheeks, crying: "Dr. Natchet! Dr. Natchet!" Stenovics wiped his brow. Stafnits raised his head, with a queer look at the king, and his pear-shaped face fell a while. The countess' sobs seemed as though frozen; her whole frame was rigid. The king did not move.

Natchet came rushing in. Lepage, who followed closely, shut the door after him. They both went to the king. There was silence while Dr. Natchet felt the king's pulse and temples.

He examined his eyes. In a couple of minutes he turned round to these.

"Something has caused his majesty strong agitation?"

"Yes," answered Stenovics.

"Ha," said Natchet. He cleared his throat and glanced doubtfully at the others.

"Well?" asked Stenovics.

Natchet threw out his hands, shrugging his shoulders over so slightly.

"I suppose, to my duty to the state, the worst possible—His majesty is dead."

Silence again—a silence strangely broken. Stafnits spread a handkerchief with a bound from a cat's and caught the physician by the shoulder.

"You!" he said. "But for twenty-four hours you! His majesty dies to-morrow!"

Chapter Twenty-five

"His majesty dies to-morrow!" Stafnits' words were echoed in a moment by all and a moment more by himself. Even Countess Elisabeth's voice, which had remained all so quiet, rose in a sharp cry. Natchet looked at the king. Lepage looked at the king. Stenovics looked at the king. Stafnits looked at the king. Then they looked at one another.

"Marbart, lock the door leading to the king's apartments. Dr. Natchet and Lepage, carry the king into his bedroom. Lay him on the bed. Stay there till I call you. Countess, general, I invite your earnest attention."

Stenovics' mind excelled in the waiting game, the slow, patient observation, the luck by luck advance of leisurely diplomacy. For him this crisis was at first too sudden. The swift and daring intellect of Stafnits naturally and inevitably took the lead. His strong will fascinated his confederates.

"In this to be the beginning or the end?" he asked. "For us and our friends—which? If we send a courier to Praslok to call King Sergius to his capital—what then? For you, countess, and your son oblivion and obscurity at Dobravs for all the rest of your life, just think! For you, general, and for me and our friends—ye, you, too, Markart—our congé, more or less civilly given. There won't be more insignificant men in all Kravonia on the day King Sergius enters. But there's no King Sergius yet."

Stenovics was regaining the use of his brain. His eyes grew distant in deep meditation. Countess Ellenburg looked eager and grim. Her lips could not swear well, false coin, and she was not asked to swear any oath now. Markart could not think. He stood staring at Stafnits.

"In half an hour that courier must start for Praslok if he starts at all. Of all things, we mustn't hesitate."

He had joined himself to them of the coming of King Sergius. It meant the defeat of years of effort. It entailed the end of hopes, of place, of power or influence. There was no future for those three in Kravonia if King Sergius came. And Markart, of course, seemed no more than one of Stenovics' train.

"And if the courier doesn't start?" asked Stenovics. He took out a cigar and lit it, asking on the leave of the countess. Probably he hardly knew that he was smoking it.

Stafnits looked at his watch. "Five o'clock! We have twenty-four hours. It would be risky to keep the secret longer. There's not much time. We must be prompt, but we mustn't sacrifice anything to hurry. For instance, it would look odd to present the king's orders to Baroness Dobrava in the middle of the night! She'd smell a rat if she's as clever as they say, and so would the prince, I think. I could have a hundred men at Praslok by midnight, but I shouldn't propose to have them there before 11 o'clock tomorrow. Well, they could be back here by 5 in the afternoon! In the course of the day we'll occupy all the important points of the city with troops we can trust. Then—then—then we'll see—then how matters have gone at Praslok, we proclaim King Alexig!"

The countess gave a little shiver, whether of fear or of eagerness it was impossible to tell. Stenovics drummed his fingers on the table and turned his cigar quickly round and round in his mouth. Markart had recovered his clearness of mind and closely watched all the scene.

"I can't bear it."

The countess rose suddenly in strong agitation. "I—I can't bear it," she said. "With him lying there! Let me go! Presently—presently you shall tell me—anything."

Stenovics laid down his cigar and went to her. "Wait in there" he pointed to Natchet's room—"till you're quite composed. Then go to your own room and wait till I come. Mind, countess, no sign of agitation! He led her out. Stafnits shrugged his shoulders.

"She'll be all right," he said to Markart, with a passing smile.

"I think she was fond of the king," said Markart.

Stenovics returned. "Now!" he said, seating himself again and resuming his cigar. "You suggest that we still use that order for the arrest of Baroness Dobrava?"

"It's signed 'Alexis,' and King Alexis lives till 5 tomorrow. Moreover, if all goes well, King Alexis lives again for many years to come."

Stenovics nodded slightly. "The baroness comes willingly or you bring her?

"Exactly, general. I fail to perceive what this lamentable event"—he waved his hand toward the king's empty chair—"can in the case as regards the baroness one jot."

"Not the least, unless you count that risking our lives depends on three people not giving effect," replied Stenovics. And for the first time he smiled.

"Once you wanted to play the big game on a bad hand, Stafnits. Won't you put it on the table now, when you've a good one?"

"The thinking of a certain strong card in the other hand which you haven't mentioned yet, Baroness Dobrava is to be in our power by this time tomorrow, but what will the Prince of Dobrava do? Still drilling his men at Volest, still waiting for his guns?"

Stafnits looked him full in the face. "No," he said. "The prince will not. He will not still be drilling his men at Volest nor waiting for his guns."

"Ah!" said Stenovics agreed, turning his cigar round again.

"General, do you think the prince will let Baroness Dobrava come to Praslok without him?"

"I don't know. He might have confidence enough in you. He shouldn't wish to accept or appear to accept a suspicion even of foul play. He shouldn't wish to appear to be afraid. On the whole, I think he would protest and pay or bring suits to be heard in the courts of law. I don't know, sir. I'm not the prince. I'm not even the minister to ask him why he goes with you."

"Well, you, I observe, think you've got an ace of spades or at least pretty low."

"If Baroness Dobrava is not in our power by this time tomorrow, I shall be ready to resign my appointments and my country. I shall be ready to leave Kravonia forever, which last intention I have already announced to my friends. Even Countess Elisabeth's voice, which had remained all so quiet, rose in a sharp cry. Natchet looked at the king. Lepage looked at the king. Stenovics looked at the king. Stafnits looked at the king. Then they looked at one another.

"Marbart, lock the door leading to the king's apartments. Dr. Natchet and Lepage, carry the king into his bedroom. Lay him on the bed. Stay there till I call you. Countess, general, I invite your earnest attention."

Stenovics' mind excelled in the waiting game, the slow, patient observation, the luck by luck advance of leisurely diplomacy. For him this crisis was at first too sudden. The swift and daring intellect of Stafnits naturally and inevitably took the lead. His strong will fascinated his confederates.

THE ENDLESS CHAIN PRAYER.

To the Editor of The Beaver:—

I am in receipt of an anonymous communication from a "friend", which I quote here in full. This was sent to me by a friend, and I am sending it to you. This is the prayer and is called "The Endless Chain Prayer."

"Oh Lord Jesus, we implore thee to have mercy on all mankind. Keep us from evil by thy precious blood and take us when we die to dwell with Thee eternally. It is said that those who will not say this prayer commencing the day received will meet with some misfortune and those who write it will experience some great joy on the ninth day. It is said in Jerusalem that he who writes this prayer will be delivered from some great calamity. Don't break the chain, but make a wish while writing it and don't fail to send a copy to nine friends. With best wishes I am your friend. STRANGE TO SAY.

The writer in dealing out this most excellent advice withholds his or her name, and thus it is very hard to find out what manner of people are mixed up in the affair. While this may have started in Jerusalem, yet it is a question which will bear much discussion. It is hoped that all those who receive a like communication will relegate it to its proper receptacle—the waste basket. With due consideration for those who are inclined to be superstitious in the matter, let me suggest that the wisest course to take is pay no attention to it whatever. But remember instead there is only one right way to plead for mercy and that is the way we were taught when our lips first began to frame words. Don't expect to experience some great joy by scribbling a prayer written by some fanatic, whose tired brain needed rest more than starting an "Endless Chain of Prayer", which reflects so great amount of credit on the sender, and only tends to show how eager some people grasp at imaginary mysteries even though the origin may be ever so remote.

TRINITY CHURCH ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

Trinity held the congregation of Trinity church, not to be outdone, opened their anniversary services on Sunday last, when the pulpit was filled by Rev. Canon Kirkby and Rev. Mr. Hunter.

Large and appreciative audiences were present at both services on Sunday, and the sermons preached by the visiting clergymen were listened to with marked attention. Dr. Sheraton, of Cobourg, a former pastor, who is always held in affectionate remembrance by the congregation of Trinity, preached in the morning, both morning and evening his sermons were characterized by the usual vigor of his subjects, but the distinctive features were personality of the subjects themselves were personality of the subjects themselves were personality not only to the congregation, but also to the question of the day, viz.: The Bible. Authority. Dr. Sheraton's treatment of Dr. Sherer's method of dealing with the problem that is forcing itself upon the attention of theological circles was eminently logical, convincing and helpful. All who listened to him must have been re-assured in the conviction that the great essentials of revealed truth are unassailable. The foundations of our holy faith cannot be shaken.

The choir of the church, under the leadership of Mrs. F. E. Vanzwyen, rendered a special programme which added greatly to the attractiveness of both services. Special reference must be made to the singing of Mrs. Merritt, who rendered two delightful solos during the evening service.

On Monday evening the Ladies' Aid Society sustained their reputation as first-class caterers, by furnishing a sumptuous repast served in the dining room of the church. Over one hundred people enjoyed the elaborate menu provided, and during the supper hour a very pleasing instrumental programme was furnished by Mrs. Lockridge, assisted by the S. S. orchestra.

At eight o'clock the audience repaired to the auditorium, and for over an hour they listened to one of the rarest musical treats ever given in this town.

Mrs. Burritt delighted all by the sweetness, richness and sympathetic quality of certain numbers she was admirably supported by Mr. Lockridge, Mr. Wilson Hall, contralto. The entertainment committee of the church deemed themselves fortunate in also securing the services of Mr. Arthur Blight, of Toronto. Mr. Blight has a baritone voice of rare quality. His selections called forth the most enthusiastic applause, and repeated encores were demanded, to which he generously responded.

Mrs. White, of this town, showed herself to be possessed of a very fine tenor voice, which added very much to the strength and harmony of the beautifully rendered quintettes furnished in both parts of the programme.

Mrs. Lockridge rendered two organ numbers with all the brilliancy and grace which has secured for her more than a local reputation. A third number (March Triumphale, by Guilmont), in which she was accompanied by Miss Luella Hall on the piano, was exceptionally fine. During the intermission, members of the Trustee Board presented a resolution recording their appreciation of the untiring zeal and faithful effort which has enabled the Ladies' Aid Society to contribute a full up subscription of $1,500.00 to the Building Fund of the church. Mrs. Hall, the President of the Society, responded with a few graceful and appropriate remarks. The total receipts from all sources, collections, supper and concert were $360.00.

HIS RACE ANTIPATHY.

"The population of China," announced the school teacher impressively, "is so vast that two Chinamen die at every breath we take."

The small boy was an Imperialist, and his father had pronounced views on the question of Asian immigration, so this piece of news impressed him hugely.

Shortly afterward he was observed to be turning purple in the face, and pulling like an overburdened steam engine.

"What's the matter? What are you doing?" asked the inadequately skilled instructor of youth, anxiously.

"Killin' Chinamen," grunted the patriot.

P. T. HAM.

With regret we have to record the death of Perry Trout Ham, who died of cancer on Monday afternoon, March 8th, aged 81 years. The late Mr. Ham, son of the late Richard Ham, was born at Hamburg, on the old Ham homestead at the north east corner of Hamburg Road and Hawley street. In early manhood he left the farm and engaged in the grain trade in Toledo, Ohio. The last seventy years of activity were spent in Kansas City, Mo., where he was for some years President of the Board of Trade. About two years ago, Mr. Ham, having accumulated a comfortable fortune, retired from business, and moved here to Napanee to spend his closing days among his own kindred.

For the past year he has been suffering from the malignant and painful disease to which he finally succumbed, and bore his sufferings with truly Christian patience and fortitude. Mr. Ham was married 54 years ago to his cousin, Miss Rebecca Ham, by whom he is survived. He leaves also two daughters, to mourn his loss, viz., Miss Sarah at home, and Mrs. F. T. Bower, whose husband is assistant Superintendent of Winnipeg postoffice. The Board of Trade of Kansas City sent a wreath of flowers through the Board of Trade of Toronto. The following telegram will show the esteem in which he was held:

Board of Trade,
Kansas City.

To Mrs. Perry Ham:

We extend to you and your daughters our deep sympathy. No man was more honored or more beloved by our members than your husband.

Signed E. S. IHGLOW,
Secretary.

Deceased was a communicant of the Anglican Church and the funeral was conducted by Rev. Rural Dean Bibb, on Thursday afternoon, the 11th inst., to the Eastern cemetery. Deceased was a cousin of Mr. Zina Ham, and a brother of Mrs. Vrooman, and uncle of Dr. J. P. Vrooman.

TO RUN AGAIN.

Evening Reformer, Galt, Ont., March 2d.

The stock of the Dominion Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of white goods and overalls, Ainslie st., was sold yesterday at 54 cents on the dollar, to R. A. Briscoe, of the "Little Giant," was the lucky purchaser, and informed the Reformer that it was his intention to open the factory and make up all the stock on hand as an experiment, and if it proved successful he would carry on the business regularly. The stock, Mr. Briscoe says, is one of the cleanest and best he has seen in his long experience, consisting of cottons, cottonades, shirtings and flannins, to the value of $4,000. The factory will employ about 30 hands, besides travellers, and as Mr. Briscoe's business ability is unquestioned there is but little doubt that it will soon be on a similar footing and increase its volume of business from year to year. The announcement of the reopening of the factory will be good news for Galtonians, particularly as it will be under the management of so able a business man as Mr. Briscoe.

WHAT TO SAY.

The Sunday school was about to be dismissed when the superintendent arose, to the disgust of nearly all the children, who thought the session had been long enough, and announced:

"And now, children, let me introduce Mr. Smith, who will give us a short talk."

Mr. Smith smilingly arose, and, after gazing impressively around the class-room, began with "I hardly know what to say," when the whole school was convulsed to hear a small thin voice back in the rear ling:

"Thay Amen and thit down!"

Maracle vs. Taylor and Whittington.—This is an action arising out of the suit Maracle vs. Taylor, tried at the last assizes here, when Mr. Justice Clute gave judgment for $600.00 and costs to the plaintiff. Subsequent judgment and execution the plaintiff found the defendant Robert Taylor, claimed not to be the owner of the brick and lots upon the premises, but that his wife, Eleanor Taylor, was the owner. Then the present action was taken to set aside the deed and Bill of Sale of the brickyard and the tile and brick. Judgment His Lordship as follows: I direct that judgment be entered for the plaintiff against the defendants, and that the defendant, Robert Taylor, be declared as against the plaintiff the owner of the tile and brick mentioned on the Bill of Sale dated 23d day of December, 1903, and that the said tile and brick are exegible under execution at the instance of the plaintiff against the said Robert Taylor. I find that the pretence that the said tile and brick were the property of Eleanor Taylor and the bill of sale were fraudulent as against the plaintiff. Defendants to pay costs of this action. Upon the undertaking of counsel for the defendants that the tile and brick shall not be sold or removed per.

FORWARDERS LIMITED

Head Office, Kingston, Canada

Capital $500,000, divided into 2500 shares of Common Stock of $100.00 each and 2500 shares of 7% Cumulative Preferred Stock of $100.00 each.

President—W. G. CRAIG, Wholesale Grocer, Kingston.

Vice-Pres.—G. I. MALLORY, Brockville.

Directors—W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville.
GEO. SCHMIDT, Pembroke.
M. E. GALVIN, Detroit.

FORWARDERS, Limited, was incorporated 12th December, 1908, by Letters Patent, from the Dominion of Canada, and was formed to take over and operate as a going concern the Elevator of Cereals Limited, situate on the west side of Gore St., in the City of Kingston.

The promoters of FORWARDERS, Limited, realize that Kingston is the natural port for all lake boats with grain cargoes for Montreal, and have demonstrated that it is cheaper to transfer cargoes from the larger Lake Carriers, through the Elevators into tow barges, which proceed to Montreal, and permit the large lake boats to return immediately to Port William or Port Arthur, than for the Lake Carriers to continue to Montreal and return.

Statistics have proved that Montreal has captured the European grain trade, it now being more extensive than New York or any other port.

The Canadian route is the quickest and shortest for through transportation.

A Cabinet Minister stated recently in the House of Commons that he had been informed that if the Welland Canal were deepened to carry vessels from Duluth to the foot of Lake Ontario, it would hold the trade from the West against the Erie Canal for all time.

These conditions tend to make the Port of Kingston permanent and increasingly important.

Since the C. P. R. built its first elevator at Fort William each year has seen an increased capacity for storing and transferring grain.

In 1908 the storage capacity of Fort William and Port Arthur amounted to 38,852,700 bushels. There are three new elevators now being built and two more projected. By the end of 1909 there will be a capacity of 25,000,000 bushels at these ports to receive, store and transfer the grain that will come from the West.

Last year there passed through Kingston and Prescott 30 per cent. of all the grain that left Fort William and Port Arthur and this percentage will increase as facilities increase.

The wheat crop alone of 1906 was 106,853,000 bushels, although only about 6 per cent. of arable land of Western Canada was under cultivation.

Lord Strathcona predicts that at the end of the century Canada will have a population of 80,000,000, and J. J. Hill has stated his belief that fifty years hence this country will have 50,000,000 people.

These few statements will serve to prove the enormous growth and development to be expected in the carrying trade of the St. Lawrence route.

The promoters of FORWARDERS, Limited, believe in these possibilities. They have organized to take advantage of them and they invite others to join them.

The Mooers elevator has been secured in exchange for shares in FORWARDERS, Limited, but barges, tugs and so forth, are required, and additional cash capital must be secured.

FORWARDERS, Limited, have authorized an issue of 7% Cumulative PREFERRED STOCK to be sold to secure additional capital.

A prospectus of the Company and application forms will be mailed or delivered to any address.

Applications for stock must be accompanied with 10% on account, the balance of the subscription to be paid in instalments of 30% on thirty days notice.

Address all applications to ABRAM WINTERS, Clerk.

TAMWORTH EAST.

A number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Gilmore, on Wednesday of last week, and spent an evening with them previous to their intended departure for the west.

As a slight token of their respect and esteem for them, they presented them with a chair, some pieces of fancy china and a lamp. The following address was read, to which Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore responded in a few words.

To our Esteemed Friend and Neighbor:—Mr. and Mrs. William Gilmore:

We, your friends and neighbors, feeling the deepest regret at your early departure from our midst, take it's opportunity of presenting you with this small token of our esteem.

We feel that we are losing from Sheffield two who have in every way endeared themselves to us—who have been always willing to assist us in any time of trouble.

Many days have passed since we first knew your esteemed parents, and we must testify that at all times they were very ready and willing to assist in every good work for the best interest of the neighborhood. And we are pleased to be able to testify also that you have walked in the footprints of your ancestors. Many of us have known you from your childhood, and have watched your career. Some of us have built at the same altar with you, and we cannot but speak what we know. We would like you have kept you and your esteemed partner in life on the old Gilmore homestead,—but Providence has ordered otherwise, and the land of the setting sun has charmed you from us. We cannot blame you when we know you are going to better your circumstances in every way. However, we cannot let you go from us without taking with you some little token of our appreciation.

We therefore beg your acceptance of this rocking chair, china, and parlor lamp, and trust that as you sit and meditate in the long winter evenings in the west by the light of this lamp may come your thoughts to sometimes return to your many friends and well wishers in the Township of Sheffield.

It is with sorrow we say "adieu," while for you and Mrs. Gilmore every blessing in your new home.

Signed on behalf of your many friends,

MRS. ADAM GILMORE.
MISS ANNIE MILLIGAN.

BOY'S FINGER SAVED

DEADLY EFFECT OF BLOOD POISON

There is nothing so deadly in its operation as Blood Poison and yet how subtly and insidiously it commences its work. Such a thing happened to Fred's little sister. Her finger was caught in a door and crushed. Then a little blood blister formed by a tiny red streak which rapidly branched and travelled up her arm. The doctor was called in. The result is his opinion that blood poisoning had commenced and amputation was necessary in order to save the life of the patient.

Fortunately, a friend, with Boy's Finger Fred, Toronto, first caught this. He had a terrible fear of the knife, and begged that CUROL be given a trial. Within two hours of the first application the red streak had stopped its travel. All through the night CUROL was applied every hour. By morning the finger was much better, and in three days was entirely healed. Fred's finger was saved and he is now a strong boy. Had it not been for CUROL he would have lost his finger, and perhaps his life. Mrs. Fred Boy, Toronto, writes: "I cannot say too much in praise of CUROL. It has done wonders for my boy's finger. I shall always keep a bottle in the house."

CUROL cures Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Boils, Felons and Abscesses. TAMWORTH.

Following is an address to Mr. and Mrs. York, on their departure from Tamworth:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. York—It is with deep regret we now come to bid you farewell before your departure from our midst. Almost without warning you are leaving, but you leave in the hearts of your neighbors and friends the remembrance of an association that we will cherish.

During the years that we have been so fortunate as to live near you, and having the pleasure of the association of your agreeable family, you have endeared yourselves to us all. In these years, which have passed by too quickly, we have learned to appreciate a kind, sympathetic, responsive neighbor.

But we must not be selfish, because what is to be our loss will be gain to the people among whom you are going again. May success crown your undertaking and labor, and may long years of unbounded prosperity and happiness be yours.

And to Mr. York, whose services as Secretary-Treasurer of our School have been more than satisfactory, all gladly join in giving sincerest wishes well-merited of thanks.

As a small token of the esteem in which we hold the remembrance of the time spent amongst us, we beg you to accept this hanging lamp and chair. Our most earnest hope is that each may be a pleasant souvenir.

Signed on behalf of the neighbors and friends—

JOHN MULRONEY.
HENRY BURNS.

A SURPRISED MINISTER

"For many years I have been a sufferer from bronchial catarrh, and had despaired of anything like a cure. Judge of my pleasant surprise when I first used Hyomei, which brought complete relief. Hyomei has been a veritable godsend."—Rev. Charles Crossley, Peterdinis, Ohio.

Thousands of catarrh sufferers have given up in despair. They have tried stomach dosing, snuff, sprays and douches without success, and now believe catarrh to be incurable.

But T. B. Wallace, the druggist, tells out hope to all distressed. He sells a remedy called Hyomei which is guaranteed for catarrh, colds, coughs, bronchitis, asthma and croup.

Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) is medicated air, full of the healthy virtues of Australian forest trees. You breathe in the delightful antiseptic air, and as it passes over the inflamed nasal germ membrane, it allays the irritation, kills the germs, and drives out the disease.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including a hard rubber inhaler, costs but $1.00, and an extra bottle of Hyomei, if afterwards needed, costs but 50 cents. See T. B. Wallace about it to-day.

The Italian Grand Opera Company numbers among its stars such world-renowned artists as: Mme. Gabrella Mezzi, L. Bertozzi, Mlle. Almeri, Mme. Georgina Strasio, Mlle. Grand Signor Torr, Sig. Bari, Sig. OBITUARY.
The call came indeed suddenly to Mrs. Margaret Ann Stimson, relict of John Stimson, of the Township of Sheffield, on the morning of February 3d, 1909. The deceased was 78 years of age, and for the past two years had been in poor health, which necessitated her being cared for by her devoted daughter, Mary. On the morning of her death she had assisted in a few minor household matters, and, as was her custom, read the morning Psalm and Prayers. Then she remarked: "I am not feeling well. I will lie down on the couch." Scarcely had her head touched the pillow when she fell asleep. The funeral on Saturday morning to Christ church was more than largely attended. Mrs. Stimson was born in the Township of Sheffield, her parents being James and Flora Huffman. When but two weeks old her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William McC. D. Bell, took Ker to their home, Clark's Mills, where she spent her childhood and girlhood days. She was also married at Clark's Mills to John Stimson, and came with the early settlers to Sheffield, bought and settled on the farm which is now the homestead. John Stimson and Andrew became first wardens of Christ church, Tamworth in 1865. Mrs. Stimson was the mother of eight children, and shortly after the birth of the youngest became a widow. Her faith, love of home, courage in the Good Shepherd carried her through the many vicissitudes of life. She inherited the best characteristics of her race: Faithfulness to her church where she was a regular communicant, great firmness, courage, industry and a keen sympathy. Mrs. Stimson's two eldest children predeceased her a few years ago, Margaret A. and John, and six are left to mourn the loss of a devoted and loving mother: James, on the homestead; Earl E., Tamworth; George and Thomas, farmers, near Tamworth; Jacob, business manager for Fairbanks, Petrolia, and Mary M.

BURNS & SCALDS

DAILY MISHAPS MAKE ZAM-BUK A DAILY NEED.

ACCIDENTS will happen in the best regulated homes; and having a box of Zam-Buk handy is a precaution that has saved thousands of families much worry and expense. There is never any knowing what a small injury may lead up to if neglected. The stoppage of the bleeding, or the pain from a cut, burn, or scald, lulls many people into a false sense of security. Dust getting into a wounded part may set up festering, inflammation, and blood-poisoning. In a similar way, a tiny cut may be the starting point of itching and irritating eczema; and the spot your child scratches on his head, the unsuspected beginning of ringworm or some other hair-destroying scalp disease.

Zam-Buk, while such a perfect healer, is also the inveterate enemy of skin-disease. A burn, scald, cut, or bruise promptly and regularly dressed with this rare and rich balm cannot turn bad. Blood-poisoning and any tendency of the skin to form sores, boils, abscesses, or unsightly clusters. This is because Zam-Buk not only grows new, healthy skin, but, being an herbal, is absorbed by the pores, and its healing influence makes the surrounding tissues perfectly healthy all the underlying tissues. Always keep a box of Zam-Buk handy, for daily mishaps make Zam-Buk a daily need.

BAD SCALD CURED.

Mrs. A. Corbett, 31, Richmond Square, Montreal, says: "My little grandson was severely scalded on his right leg from the knee to the ankle. The injury was very serious and dressings stuck to the skin was considered necessary. Zam-Buk was used instead, and so wonderful was the healing and soothing effect that the dressings came away quite painlessly. I could not have believed it possible for the wound to heal so quickly and completely without scarring. I consider Zam-Buk is without equal."

CURED UNDER BY STOVE LID.

Mrs. H. Girdlestone, of 106, Rawdon Street, Brantford, Ont., says:—"I had Zam-Buk a splendid healer of children's injuries. My little boy burned his foot very badly on the bottom lid of the stove. The skin was completely burned off, and he had a shocking foot, the wound festering in a terrible way, festering and discharging. I applied Zam-Buk, and, effectively checked the discharging and festering, drew out the inflammation, and finally healed the wound nicely."

Zam-Buk is a positive and certain cure for :—Cuts, bad bruises, sprains, piles, festering sores, ulcers, scalds, blood-poisoning, eczema, scabs, chapped hands, cold-cracks, chilblains, ringworm, scalp sores, bad leg, diseased ankles, 7 all other skin diseases and injuries. Rubbed well into the nerve-centres it cures nerve ail ... headaches, and sciatica. All Druggists and Stores sell at 50c. box; three for $1.25, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

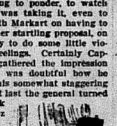
Author of "The Prisoner of Zenda"

Copyright, 1906, Anthony Hope Hawkins

Stafnitz still wore his easy, confidential smile as he answered, with an air of innocent slyness: "Suppose the officer were Captain Mistitch? I think it'd just the job for Captain Mistitch, Excellency!" Even Stenovics started a little at that. He laid down his cigar and looked at his friend the colonel for some seconds. Then he looked at Markart, smiling, seeming to ponder, to watch how Markart was taking it, even to sympathize with Markart on having to consider a rather startling proposal, on having possibly to do some little violence to his feelings. Certainly Captain Markart gathered the impression that Stenovics was doubtful how he would stand this somewhat staggering suggestion. At last the general forced his eyes back to Stafnitz again.



The king's body lay on the bed.

"That's as ingenious a bit of devilry as I ever heard, colonel," he remarked quietly.

"Captain Mistitch is restored to duty. He's a person of proper rank to perform such a service and to command an escort of a hundred men. After all, an officer of my rank made a certain concession in accepting so small a command."

"The prince would regard the sending of Mistitch as a deliberate insult."

"I'm afraid he would."

"He's hot tempered. He'd probably say as much."

"Yes, and Mistitch is hot tempered. He'd probably resent the observation. But you'll remember, general, that the escort is to be large enough to make the officer commanding it secure against hindrance by any act short of open and armed resistance to the king's command."

"He'll never believe the king would send Mistitch!"

"Will that make his peaceable obedience more likely?"

"In a moment they'd be at each other's—" He stopped. "Markart, go and see if they need anything in there." He pointed to the king's bedroom, where Natchetf and Lepage were.

Markart rose and obeyed. His head was swimming. He hardly yet understood how very ingenious the ingenious devilry was, how the one man was to be sent whose directions the prince could not submit to, whose presence was an insult, to whom it was impossible to intrust Baroness Dobrava. He was very glad to get out of the room. The last he saw was Stafnitz drawing his chair close up to Stenovics and engaging in low voiced, earnest talk.

The king's body lay on the bed decently disposed and covered with a large fur rug. Lepage sat on a chair near by, Natchetf on another in the window. Both looked up for a moment as Markart entered, but neither spoke. Markart found a third chair and sat down. Nobody said anything. The three were as silent and almost as still as the fourth on the bed. A low murmur of voices came from the next room. The words were indistinguishable. So passed full half an hour. A strange and terrible half hour it seemed to Markart.

The door opened, and Stafnitz called Natchetf. The physician rose and followed him. Another twenty minutes went by, still in silence, for Markart, lost in thought, took no heed of his watch. Markart found that it was not yet half past 6.

Again the door opened, and Stafnitz called to them both. They followed him into the next room. Stenovics was sitting at the table, with his hands clasped on it in front of him. His face, though in a position of rest, was ill. He sat, still standing as though on duty. Natchetf had disappeared. Stenovics spoke in calm, deliberate tones. His voice was that of a commissioned command of the operations again.

"Captain Markart, I'm about to intrust to you an important and responsible duty. For the next twenty-four hours and afterward until relieved by my orders you will be in charge of this man Lepage and will detain him in these apartments. His own room and this room will be at the disposal of yourself and your prisoner, but you must not let the prisoner out of your sight. Dr. Natchetf remains in his room. He will have access to the king's room when he desires, but he will not leave the suit of apartments. Beyond seeing to this you will have no responsibility for him. The door leading to the suit will be locked by me and will be opened only by me or by my orders. I remain at the palace tonight. Under me Captain Sterkoff will be the officer on guard. He will himself supply you with any meals or other refreshments which you may require. Ring this hand bell on the table—no other bell, absolutely no other bell, is to ring distinctly. Do you understand your orders?"

Markart understood them very well. There was no need of Stafnitz's mocking little smile to point the meaning. Markart was to be Lepage's jailer; Sterkoff was to be his. Under the most civil and considerate form he was made as close a prisoner as the man he guarded. Evidently Stenovics had come to the conclusion that he could not ask Markart to put too great a strain on his conscience. The general, however, seemed very kindly disposed toward him and was, indeed, almost apologetic:

"I'm every hope that this responsible and, I fear, very irksome duty may last only the few hours I mentioned. You put me under a personal obligation by undertaking it, my dear Markart."

In the absence of any choice Markart saluted and answered, "I understand my orders, general."

Stafnitz interposed, "Captain Sterkoff is also aware of their purport."

Stenovics looked vexed. "Yes, yes, but I'm sure Markart himself is quite enough." It seems odd that in the midst of such a transaction as that in which he was engaged Stenovics should have found leisure or heart to care about Markart's feeling. Yet so it was —a curiously human touch creeping in. He shot Markart up only under the strongest sense of necessity and with great reluctance. Probably Stafnitz had insisted in the private conference in which they had held together. Markart had shown such evident signs of jibbing over the job proposed for Captain Hentzau!

Lepage's heart was wrung, but his spirit was not broken. Stafnitz's ironical smile called an answering one to his lips.

"It would console my feelings if I also were put in charge of somebody, general," he said. "Shall I, in my turn, keep an eye on Dr. Natchetf or report if the captain here is remiss in the duty of keeping himself a prisoner?"

"I don't think you need trouble yourself, M. Lepage. Captain Sterkoff will relieve you of responsibility." To Lepage, too, Stenovics was gentle, urbane, almost apologetic.

"And how long am I to live, general?"

"You're in the enviable position, M. Lepage, of being able, subject to our common mortality, to settle that for yourself. Come, come, we'll discuss matters again tomorrow night or the following morning. There are many men who prefer not to do things, but will accept a thing when it's done. They're not necessarily unwise. I've done no worse to you than give you the opportunity of being one of them. I think you'll be prudent to take it. Anyhow, don't be angry. You must remember that you've given us a good deal of trouble."

"Between us we have killed the king."

Stenovics waved his hands in a commiserating way. "Practical men mustn't spend time in lamenting the past," he said.

"Nor in mere conversation, however pleasant," Stafnitz broke in, with a laugh. "Captain Markart, march your prisoner to his quarters!"

His smile made the order a mockery. Markart felt it, and a hatred of the man rose in him. But he could do nothing. He did not lead Lepage to his quarters, but followed sheepishly in his prisoner's wake. They went together into the little room where Lepage slept.

"Close quarters, too, captain," said the valet. "There is but one chair. Let me put it at your service." He himself sat down on the bed, took out his tobacco and began to roll himself a cigarette.

Markart shut the door and then threw himself on the solitary chair in a heavy despondency of spirit and a confused conflict of feelings. He was glad to be out of the work, yet he resented the manner in which he was put inside. There were things going on in which it was well to have no hand, yet it was there not a thing going on in which every man ought to have a hand on one side or the other? Not to be in it, but to be ready to accept it when done! He was enough of a soldier to feel that there lay the worst, the meanest thing of all. Not to dare to do it, but to profit by the doing! Stenovics had used the words to Lepage, his prisoner by making him in effect a prisoner too, the general showed that he applied them to the captain also. Anything seemed better than that—aye, it would be better to ride to Strasko behind Captain Herculeo! In that adventure a man might, at least, risk his life!

"An old world!" said the valet, puffing out his cigarette smoke. "Honest men for prisoners and murderers for jailers! Are you a prisoner or a jailer, Captain Markart?"

Chapter Twenty-five

To say the truth, the word "murderer" seemed to Captain Markart more than a little harsh. To use it was to apply to Kravonian affairs the sterner standards of many another and more civilized country. A coup d'etat may well involve fighting. Fighting naturally includes killing. But are the principles of the coup therefore murders? Murderers with a difference, anyhow, according to Kravonian ideas, which Captain Markart was inclined to share. The Czar, a coup d'etat is war. The suppression of information is legitimate in war. If the Prince of Slavna could not find out for himself what had happened in the palace, were his opponents bound to tell him? In fact, given that an attempt to change the succession by personal interest was not a crime, but a legitimate political enterprise, the [illegible] followed.

Except Mistitch! It was difficult to swallow Mistitch. There was a stiffness of ingenuity and brutality about that move which not even Kravonian notions could easily accept. If Stafnitz had gone—say, if he himself had gone—probably Markart's new conscience would not have rebelled. But to send Captain Hercules—that was cogging the dice! Yet he was very angry that Stenovics should have divined his feelings and shut him up. The general distrusted his courage as well as his conscience. There lay the deepest hurt to Markart's vanity. It was all the deeper because in his heart he had to own that Stenovics read him right. Not only the brazen conscience was lacking, but also the iron nerve.

Getting no answer to his unpleasantly pointed question, Lepage relapsed into silence. He stood by the window, looking out on the lawn which sloped down to the Krath. Beyond the river the lights of Slavna glowed in the darkening sky. Things would be happening in Slavna soon. Lepage might well look at the city thoughtfully. As a fact, however, his mind was occupied with one problem only—where was Zerkovitch and how could he get at him? For Lepage did not waver. He had taken his line.

Presently, however, his professional instincts seemed to reassert themselves. He opened a cupboard in the room and brought out a clean pair of sheets which he proceeded to remove on the bed. Busy at his task, he paused to smile at Markart and say: "We must do the best we can, captain. After all, we have both escaped, I expect. Here's the bed for you—you'll do finely." He went back to the cupboard and lugged out a mattress. And this is for me—the shakedown on the floor which I use when I sleep in the king's room—or did use, I should say. In my judgment, captain, it's comfortable to go to bed on the floor. At least one can't fall."

It was 8 o'clock. They heard the outer door of the suit of rooms open and shut. A man was moving about in the next room. If they could judge by the sound of his steps he also pulled off Natchetf a brief visit. They heard the clink of dishes and of glass.

"Dinner?" said Lepage. "Ah, that's not unwelcome! Have I permission?" Markart nodded, and he opened the door. On the table in the sitting room was a savory dish, bread and two bottles of wine. Captain Sterkoff was just surveying the board he had spread, with his head on one side. There was nothing peculiar in that. He had also permanently stuck on one side—a list to starboard—since the Virgin with the lamp had injured the vertebrae of his neck. But the attitude, together with his beaked nose, made him look like a particularly vicious parrot. Markart drew him through the open door and could not get the resemblance out of his mind.

"Supper, gentlemen!" said Sterkoff, with malevolent mirth. "The doctor can't join you. He's a little upset and keeps his bed. A good appetite! I trust not to be obliged to disturb you again tonight."

Markart had come in by now, but he was too surly and sore to speak. Without a word he plumped down into a chair by the table and seized his chin on his hands, staring at the cloth. It was left to Lepage to bow to Sterkoff and to express their polite thanks. This task was performed with sufficient urbanity. Then he broke into a laugh.

It was left to Lepage to bow to Sterkoff and to express their polite thanks.

"They must think it odd to see you carrying dishes and bottles about the palace, captain?"

"Possibly," agreed Sterkoff. "But, you see, my friend, what they think in the palace doesn't matter very much, so long as none of them can get outside."

"Oh, they none of them spend the evening out?"

"Would they wish to when the king has an attack of influenza and Dr. Natchetf is in attendance? It would be unfeeling, Lepage!"

"Horribly, captain! Probably even the sentries would object?"

"It's possible they would," Sterkoff agreed again. He drew himself up and saluted Markart, who did not move or pay any attention. "Good night, Lepage." He turned to the door. His head seemed more cocked on one side than ever. Lepage bade him "Good night" very respectfully, but as the key turned in the door he murmured longingly, "Ah, if I could knock that ugly mug the rest of the way off his shoulder!"

He treated Markart with no less respect than he had accorded to Sterkoff. He would not hear of sitting down at table with an officer, but insisted on handing the dish and uncorking the wine. Markart accepted his attentions and began to eat languidly, with what want of appetite.

"Some wine, captain. Some wine to cheer you up in this tiresome duty of guarding me!" cried Lepage, holding up a bottle in one hand and a glass in the other. "Oh, but that wry necked fellow has brought you a dirty glass! Be reasonable, captain! I am not ill. And off he bounded—not even waiting to set down the bottle—into the little room beyond.

His brain was spurring hard now, marshaling his resources against his difficulties. The difficulties were thirty feet to fall, Sterkoff's sword, a strong bread, swift current of the Krath—for even in normal times there was always a sentry on the bridge—then the guard at the Sarkovitch in Slavna. His resources were a mattress, a spare pair of sheets and a vial half full of the draft with which Dr. Natchetf had prescribed for the king.

"I've not the least notion how much would kill him."

"It's very unfortunate, but I've not the least notion how much would kill him," thought Lepage, as he poured the medicine—presumably a strong sedative—into the wineglass and filled up with wine from the bottle Stafnitf had provided. He came back, holding the glass aloft with a satisfied air. "Now it's fit for a gentleman to drink out of," said he, as he set it before Markart's hand. The officer took it up and swallowed it at a draft.

"Ugh! Corked, I think! Beastly, anyhow!" said he.

Captain Markart thought he would smoke his cigar in the little room, lying on the bed. The war fiend was sleepy, very sleepy, there was no denying it. Lepage sat down and ate and drank. He found no fault with the wine in the bottle. Then he went out and looked at Markart. The captain lay in his shirt, breeches and boots. He was sound asleep and breathing heavily. His cigar had fallen on the sheet, but apparently had been out before it fell. Lepage regarded him with pursed lips, shrugged his shoulders and slipped the captain's revolver into his pocket. The captain's recovery must be left to fate.

For the next hour he worked at his pair of sheets, slicing, twisting and splicing. In the end he found himself possessed of a fairly stout rope twelve or thirteen feet long, but he could find nothing solid to tie it to near the window except the bed, and that was a yard away. He would still have a fall of twenty feet, and the ground was hard with a spring frost. There would be need of caution. He put out all the lights in the room and cautiously raised the window.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

"Of course, John," said Mrs. Young-husband, "I like my kitchen quite well, but I'd like to have one of those portable ranges."

"But, my dear, protested her busy husband, "we'd have to get portable cooking utensils to go with it."

"That's so. I never thought of that."

Pleasant as syrup is nothing equals it as a warm application; the name is Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. The greatest worm destroyer of the age.

"I'm glad to hear it," snapped the landlady. "The last time I gave you mutton you said it was horse meat."

A WISE SPHERE OF USEFULNESS.

The sole ambition of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is always to give satisfaction, and notwithstanding the fact that it has now been in use for over thirty-two years, the demand for prosperity is as great as ever, and the demand for it is such that the output is constantly increased. It is beneficial in all cases where external application is required, and is constantly asked for.

PREVENT DISORDER. At the first symptoms of internal disorder, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills should be resorted to immediately. Two or three of these salutary pellets taken before going to bed, followed by doses of one or two pills for two or three days successively, will serve as a check to the active of attacks of dyspepsia and all the disorders which follow in the train of this fell disorder. The means are simple when the way is known.

DO NOT DELAY.—When, through debilitated or digestive organs, poison finds its way into the blood, the prime consideration is to get it out. The pores must be opened and thoroughly all possible. Delay must mean danger. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a most valuable and effective medicine for dealing with the disorder with. They do the work. They go at once to the seat of the trouble and work a permanent cure.

Mrs. Scott—I like to hear my husband whistle. It shows that he's satisfied and happy.

Mrs. Mott—Is that a sign? Why, mine whistled when I showed him my dressmaker's bill, and the symptoms were entirely different.

If a cough makes your nights restless and disturbs your family, it will pay you to send and with good cause. To dispel the worry and fear of Consumption, use Allen's Lung Balsam. THE BEST FLOUR:
DAFOE'S NONESUCH,
DAFOE'S MANITOBA PATENT.

By numerous tests by the best bakers the Nonesuch and Manitoba have been proved to be the best flours in the market.

When you buy flour, ask for Dafoe's, and patronize your home mill, thereby producing a better flour for your home. Flour will be cheaper than the product of the Western mills, as it will not be transported long ends of miles at great expense, and usually will be fresher and of better quality.

The grocer complains if the farmer or the merchant sends to Toronto or to outside points for an article he can get at the home grocer's, but he does not complain when he has to buy flour from mills hundreds of miles away, and sells you an inferior flour for more money than you can purchase the home product for, every bag of which is guaranteed.

Chatelaine (dreaming) and Buckwheat Flour always on hand. Feed grinding a specialty with the best feed mills known to the trade.

A full stock of the best Anthracite Coal in the market for the purchase of all kinds of grain.

MEN'S FINE TAILORED GARMENTS

Our idea of satisfactory Tailoring is not the "Bargain idea". The man, who knows anything about good tailoring, knows that he must give a fair price for good tailoring. A good fitting, well made suit of clothes will be remembered long after the price is forgotten.

While our prices are as low as the grade of work we turn out will allow, we do not place particular stress on prices. Good tailors must be paid fair prices, and it's the quality of our work we want to impress you with.

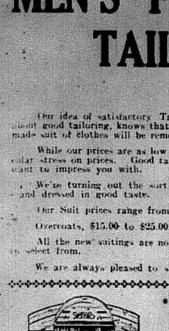
We're turning out the sort of garments a man can wear with pride—feel that he is perfectly fitted and dressed in good taste.

Our Suit prices range from $15.00 to $25.00.

Overcoats, $15.00 to $25.00. Trousers, $3.75 to $7.00.

All the new suitings are now in. The sooner you make your selection the larger range you have to select from.

We are always pleased to show new goods.



Men's Colored Shirts

Shirts We Are Showing

and the most important of all is their perfect-fitting shapes, and all sizes from 14 to 18.

We do not confine ourselves to one maker.

Every maker of reliability shows us their lines of goods. We select the best and choicest patterns from each. We buy only for cash and get their best lowest prices for large purchases.

We are therefore in a position second to none to show you the finest range of shirts in Napanee, including the well known $2.00 Tooke Bros. make from specially selected patterns for our own trade.

To the Right Worshipful Grand Master, and Members of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East:

Right Worshipful Sir and Brethren.—The Loyal Orange District Lodge of Lennox deems it a great honor and privilege to extend to you a most cordial and fraternal welcome to the good old Historic Town of Napanee on the occasion of this, your fiftieth annual session.

A short distance from this town a century or more ago our forefathers disembarked, braving the uncertainties of an unknown land rather than turn against the flag of their country. Here they endured much, suffered much, lived, fought life's battles and died as heroes true men and brave. We have received from them an heritage not to be despised. Their love for their country and their loyalty, which they showed by taking up their new life in a new country, has found its way to us and we rejoice in the remembrance of loyalty and in the freedom of our Protestant religion. We are assembled to-day to do the business of our Order in this historic town, and we trust that your work for liberty, freedom and influential brotherhood shall commend itself to the intelligent, well-thinking people of this Province. In this spirit we welcome you and hope that your stay while here will be enjoyable and profitable spent.

Fraternally yours,
M. BAGAR,
District Master of Lennox.

A Natural Laxative

Inward cleaning is as necessary as outward bathing. To keep the bowels free and regular is of even greater importance than to keep the skin pores from becoming clogged. The neglect of either invites disease. Everyone needs a natural laxative occasionally, to free the bowels of accumulated impurities. For this purpose take the greatest boon ever offered to those who suffer from the ills that follow constipation. For over fifty years Beecham's Pills have been famous as a Stomach corrective, a Liver regulator and Bowel laxative. They never gripe nor cause pain. Powerful purgatives are dangerous. Avoid them. Use Beecham's Pills. They give relief without doing violence to any organ. Their action is in harmony with physical laws. Take them regularly and the necessity for their use becomes less frequent. They are a natural laxative and a positive cure for Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache and Dyspepsia.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chambers, Napanee, March 15th, 1909.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor Simpson in the chair.

Members present — Coun. Alexander, Bogart, Gibbard, Kennedy, Burrows, Steary and Reeve Ruttan.

Minutes of last session were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From the Electric Light Commissioners, stating that $129.00 had been spent on capital account since January 1st, 1909. Laid on the table till later in the evening.

The Finance Committee reported that the account from the House of Providence for $59.00, which had been sent to the town, should go to the County Clerk, as a large amount of this is to be paid by the County. Report adopted.

Following is the report of the Finance Committee re the account of the Napanee Waterworks Company

To the Municipal Council of the Town of Napanee:—

Your Finance Committee, to whom was referred the account of The Napanee Water Works Company, amounting to $540.00, for a special supply of water for 1908, report as follows:

That this account is furnished to the Town of Napanee by water for sprinkling streets, schools, public buildings, etc. Under the expired contract with the Town of Napanee, which is the only contract that has ever been made between the Napanee Water Works Company and the Town of Napanee, and which existed in the year 1899, clause 22 reads as follows:—"The Contractors hereby agree with the Corporation that they will put in, and during the whole time this contract is in force, establish water free of charge for the use of the Council rooms, and town of fices in the town buildings, and for the fire department buildings, also for the public school situate on Dundas street, also for a public fountain at such place as the town Council may order, at which horses and cattle may drink, with self closing faucets, and that they will also set up four stand pipes for sprinkling of the streets at such places as the said Corporation may indicate and will furnish water for water for sprinkling the streets, all of which fittings in this clause above mentioned, shall be put in, done and provided without extra charge to the Corporation in making due provision for the safety and general use of the plant necessary to avoid in giving such supply as aforesaid, and to be responsible for any improper water, and provided that there can be no claim or debt from the Town to the Company for water supplied for the purposes named in the account.

We also draw the attention of the Council to the fact that on the Ninth of November, A.D. 1892, a contract was entered into between the Napanee Water Works Company and the Town of Napanee, under which the Napanee Water Works Company agreed to pay to the Town of Napanee one-third of all the rentals actually received by the said Company for the use of water in water closets hereafter connected with the line of sewers hereafter constructed or any extensions thereafter made, to the extent of seven per cent. yearly on one-third of the extensions for the distance along the actual cost of such main sewer and which the Company's water mains are laid or any extensions of such water mains hereafter made upon which hydrant rental is allowed by the town; said payments to be made as soon as the Company receives the rental for closets along said line of sewers and to commence from the time of the completion of the same and the receipt by the Company of a verified statement of the cost of each as hereinafter provided.

Under this contract, the Town has a claim extending over sixteen years against the Napanee Water Works Company for rentals, which have never been paid.

Your Committee therefore recommend that the said account of the Napanee Water Works Company be not paid.

March 15th, 1909.

G. F. RUTTAN, Chairman.
W. T. GIBBARD.

Report was adopted.

Coun. Burrows, Chairman of Streets, reported that cables had been placed under the covered bridge, and that it is now in good condition, and would likely stand for some time; there is no danger of any collapse.

Coun. Gibbard stated that a new hose wagon had been ordered, and that some other necessary appliances would be ordered later on.

Coun. Alexander reported that the roof of the Public Library building had been leaking and more or less damage had been done to the walls. A by-law for raising the taxes was introduced and took up considerable time. Reeve Ruttan thought that the mills and the dollar should be set to meet any and all objections. He had gone quite thoroughly into the matter, and could not see why an 18 mill rate should be levied on the people, when 16 mills would be sufficient. On a $1,000 assessment the 2 mills meant $2.00 more on a person's taxes. He was in favor of keeping the assessment down. However, after most every member of the Council had put in their version of the matter, and at times the discussion got quite hot, the rate was struck at 18 mills. There were a number of appropriations reduced considerably; the grant of $25.00 to the Poultry Show was cut off, and it was also suggested that the grant of $100.00 to the Band and $250.00 to the Public Library be also struck out, but these two items were overruled.

The Finance Committee reported on the buying of a safe, for the use of the Treasurer, in the Town Hall, which had been left over from last meeting, but no action was taken.

Coun. Gibbard stated that he had been into the Treasurer's office and found everything in a very satisfactory condition; all books and papers belonging to the town were kept securely in the safe, and could not see why the office should be moved from the town hall at present. From a convenient where it is to all parties concerned.

Mr. Ruttan said there was no doubt that things were kept in apple pie order at the present time, but they were not that way when he was in to look over some matter. Papers and vouchers were piled on shelves, instead of being put into the safe.

A communication was received from Mr. R. C. Carter re taxes for 1908, and saying that he did not intend to pay it, as the rate was illegally struck.

Moved by Mr. Ruttan, seconded by Mr. Gibbard, that the matter be referred to the Town Solicitor for his written opinion as to the legality of the by-law. Carried.

It was stated by Mayor Simpson that Wonderland was operating under dangerous conditions. There was no means of exit, and if anything should happen to the machine, there would very likely be an awful panic; it was also in an unsanitary condition; also that the switch board at the Briggs Opera House was attached to a piece of pine covered with asbestos, instead of marble.

Moved by Coun. Burrows, seconded by Coun. Alexander, that the Committee on By-laws be authorized to prepare a by-law in accordance with same. Carried.

Mr. E. B. Perry was appointed to the position of policeman at a salary of $300.00 per annum, payable in installments of $25.00 per month, from 1st March, 1909, his hours of duty to be from 10 p.m. to 7 a.m.

Moved by Reeve Ruttan, seconded by Coun. Alexander, that the Mayor be instructed to prepare an address of welcome to the Grange Grand Lodge of Ontario East, and that the Council attend in a body on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock to show their courtesy. Carried.

Moved by Coun. Burrows, seconded by Coun. Kimmerly, that the Clerk be instructed to advertise for supplies necessary for the streets, caretaker for Harvey Warner park, teamster for street sprinkling and prices for laying granolithic walks. Carried.

THREE NEW STATES

Added to British Empire by Treaty With Siam.—British Capital to Extent of Twenty Million Dollars to be Invested in Railroad-Southward from Siamese Capital.

Fifteen thousand square miles of territory have been added to the British Empire by the treaty signed at Bangkok, Siam, under the terms of which Siam cedes to Great Britain the States of Kalantan, Tringanu and Kedah, which hereafter will be administered with the Malay federated States.

Under the treaty British capital to the extent of $20,000,000 will be furnished for the construction of railroads south from Bangkok. These lines are to be controlled by a railway department quite distinct from the present railroad administration of Siam, which is administered by Germany. There will also be a gradual abolition of British extra-territorial rights in Siam.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure all Kidney ills.

Mrs. Benjamin Johnson, of Robert St., Napanee, Ont., says:—

"Headaches were frequent and usually accompanied by spells of dizziness and spots before the eyes. I would be scarcely able to walk across the floor at times and would have to support myself to keep from falling. My back was weak and a dull, bearing down pain settled across the small of it, and in the region of the kidneys. I would be more tired and done out on waking than on going to bed as I was restless and would get but little sleep. Booth's Kidney Pills were recommended and procuring a box at Mr. Wallace's Pharmacy I commenced treatment. I soon found relief and it was but a short time until I was well and strong again and I have felt better in every way."

PRESIDENT TAFT.

The character of the new President of the United States apparently presents a strong contrast to that of his predecessor. President Taft is described as a man of solid qualities, cool judgment, and calm, though firm and resolute, character. As a candidate, he talked no claptrap, and made no catchpenny appeals. He has to deal, if not with an acute crisis, with a generally critical state of things. The circumstances of the nation, and with them its character, have been undergoing vital changes, due not only to the vast increase of heterogeneous immigration, while the nation itself is not prolific, but to changes of external relations and their influence on the national disposition, as well as to natural effects of a great civil war. The war with Spain, made, as a leading members of the Republican party said, to keep the party in power, was a turning point made more decisive by the calamitous conquest and annexation of the Philippines. That which was once a great peaceful community, trading with all nations, fighting or conspiring with none, is now becoming involved in diplomatic entanglements, and dying in its military and naval preparedness, and in the huge financial burdens which they entail, with the most ambitious and wasteful of the builders of Dreadnoughts. Consequent on this helplessness is the serious financial situation. Mr. Taft is too sensible and too sound an economist, we hope, to attempt to deal with it by such quackery as protection, the real effect of which, as we must know, is simply to take money out of the pocket of the consumer and put into those of the capitalists. May the President's reign be prosperous and happy!

A Nervous Wreck Now in Robust Health.

Mrs. M. E. Harron, of Newton, Ont., writes: "I must say our son would have been in a committee's grave long ago had it not been for PSYCHINE. It was taken down with La Grippe and a severe cough set in which was very distressing his lungs, which were seriously affected, as is always the case after La Grippe.

"After taking several remedies and treatments we procured PSYCHINE, and before the second bottle was finished he brought about in two months. He gained over twenty pounds in weight, and strength unprecedented.

Mr. Harron himself is most emphatic in his beneficial result of using PSYCHINE. He declares: "I feel a new splendid health and have never been sick a day since I took PSYCHINE."

PSYCHINE is the greatest tonic known to medical science. It builds up the system, brings back roses upon every organ of the body, enabling its resist and throw off disease. Weak nerves cannot exist where PSYCHINE is used consis ently. Send for a trial bottle and prove the truth of these statements.
